COUNTY CITIZENS FAIL TO DEMAND RESIGNATION OF SHERIFF WILMAS

Meeting of About 400 Breaks Up After Prosecuting Attorney Defends Self Against Charges.

ADDRESSES MADE BY TWO MINISTERS

Mrs. William Thompson, Who Sponsored Gathering, Took No Part in the Proceedings.

Four hundred St. Louis County citizens met on the courthouse lawn last night to protest against law enforcement conditions and amid volleys of cheers, hisses, applause and jeers heard Prosecuting Attorney Mueller defend himself against charges of laxity hurled against county officials generally.

Mrs. William Thompson of 2136 Cherry avenue, sponsor of the meeting and volunteer dry law sleuth, took no part in the proceedings, and as she was not on hand at the close of the meeting there was no one to present to those in attendance a resolution which was to have demanded the resignation of Sheriff Wilmas. The meeting broke up after Mueller had invited those who had complaints against county conditions to put them in the form of a complaint to his office.

Apparently none of those in attendance availed himself of the invitation, although Muellers' entire staff was at his office ready, as he declared before the meeting, to handle complaints. The only other speakers at the meeting were two ministers.

Mueller's Appearance Dramatic.

Mueller's dramatic appearance on the stand came at the close of the speech of the Rev. P. G. Van Zandt, pastor of the West Park Baptist Church, who had declared conditions in the county were intolerable and that officials were listening to a bad element.

As the six-piece band blared forth at the finish of the tribute to the American flag which closed the Rev. Van Zandt's address, Mueller stepped to the platform and held up his hand for silence.

"May I have a hearing?" he shouted excitedly. "May I answer these charges?" The crowd cheered its assent and the music died away. Mueller began to speak, his chin shaking with emotion, his gestures impassioned.

Works on Sundays, He Says.

"I work six or seven days a week for St. Louis County," he said. "Even on Sundays I go to my office after I have attended God's services. And I look upon it as no desecration of the Sabbath, my friends, to work for the county."

He paused and mopped his head with his handkerchief and the crowd applauded.

"Folks, that's the way I feel about it," he went on. "If anyone here can give me any evidence of wrong conditions, if anyone will make affidavit upon which to base a search warrant, I'm ready to act against any place in the county.

"Come up to my office now and make your complaints. The lights are burning and my staff is there. I want action, not words. I am ready to act."

Applauded at Close.

There was much applause as Mueller closed. He turned from the platform and started into the courthouse. At this juncture another man took the platform. He was the Rev. W. J. Johnston, pastor of the Jennings Christian Church. There were hisses as he held up his hand for quiet.

"I am glad Mr. Mueller spoke," he said, "because there's something I want to speak to him about." Mueller, who was on the edge of the crowd, turned back.

"He talks about his office and his staff," the Rev. Mr. Johnston said. "But in the north end of the county a certain person told me he saw one of Mueller's assistants going into a 'doggery' there and drinking. A saloon, I mean," he shouted, his voice rising, "and drinking whisky."

Returns to Question Speaker.

"May I interrupt?" asked Mueller. The meeting was a bedlam of cheers and hisses. Mueller shook his finger in the Rev. Johnston's face and when he could make himself heard shouted: "Will you name the man who does that—the man in my office who drinks?"

"I can't tell the name of my informant," the Rev. Johnston replied. His supporters in the crowd were silent while Mueller's supporters alternately cheered the

BASHFUL STUDENT DISGUISED AS GIRL HEARS SELF PRAISED

Haverford Graduate Receives His Diploma "in Absentia," but Sees and Hears Exercises.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 13.—To hide his embarrassment and avoid congratulations by his fellow graduates, Charles C. Sellers, 22 years old, an honor student at Haverford College, yesterday attended commencement exercises attired as a girl. Sellers, who was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Arts and won three coveted prizes, is a son of Horace W. Sellers, architect.

The young student's masquerade, successfully carried through at the commencement and subsequently at the class-day exercises on the campus last evening, was undetected. Seated in an inconspicuous part of the auditorium, Sellers received his diploma "in Absentia." Later he smiled in appreciation as he was eulogized and prizes were awarded him.

Not only his inherent modesty, but a resolve made four years ago not to appear again in public and receive a diploma, is said to be responsible for Sellers' prank. He was graduated in 1921 from the Montgomery School, Wynnewood. At that time he stumbled when ascending the platform to receive his diploma. Covered with confusion, he retired to his seat and, according to fellow students, pledged himself "never to walk across a platform again."

BAKER ISSUES HIS FIFTH PAROLE, IN CASE OF ASSAULT

Governor's Clemency Urged for Ozark Countyan by Judge, Jurors and Victim.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 13.—Gov. Baker today issued his fifth parole since he became chief executive of the State in January. It went to Fred Mahan, sentenced to two years from Ozark County from Feb. 4, 1925, for felonious assault. Mahan was charged with assaulting Ernest Landers, Rockbridge, Mo.

The trial Judge, the jurors and even Landers, the man assaulted, recommended Mahan's parole. A letter from the Judge to the prison parole board said that he had learned after sentencing Mahan that the jury had stood 11 to 1 for a fine. Unable to fix the sentence, the jury left it to the Judge, who made it two years' imprisonment. The Judge said, in the letter, that he now thought that too severe.

TOWN'S SEARCH FOR PAROLED BANK LOOTER ENDS HERE

Bridgeport, Ill., Wants Roy Laughlin to Suffer More for Loss of Citizens' Savings.

SERVED LITTLE MORE THAN YEAR'S TIME

Found Working in St. Louis as a Bookkeeper—Old Indictments Reinstated by Prosecutor.

The Sheriff came here for Roy Laughlin yesterday. He was the Sheriff of Lawrence County, Ill., and all the people of Bridgeport, in that county, were behind him. They wanted Roy Laughlin to come back and suffer more for what he had done. A year in the penitentiary with parole to a white-collared job in St. Louis was no proper punishment for his crime, they averred.

He had wrecked the Bridgeport Bank & Trust Co. four years ago, piling up a loss of $187,000. Nearly everyone in town and countryside had lost their savings, for nearly everyone trusted Laughlin and believed in the bank of which he was cashier. When the windup came, Laughlin had admitted his guilt, saying he forged notes and embezzled money from the bank so as to get funds for speculation. He pleaded guilty to one of 32 indictments, and Otto Longenecker, who was Prosecuting Attorney at that time, allowed him to accept an indeterminate sentence of from one to 14 years. The other indictments were laid over with leave to reinstate.

Freed on Parole.

After serving a little more than a year in the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Chester, Laughlin's wife and friends, persuaded the Parole Board to let him out. Prosecutor Longenecker agreed to the parole. So Laughlin was freed, and promptly dropped out of sight. Bridgeport people heard that he had been paroled to a Missourian, but they did not know where this man lived or where Laughlin would hide his past.

The Bridgeport citizens who had lost money in the bank or whose friends and relatives had suffered, were furious. They believed it a travisty of justice that a man could rob his neighbors and go free after a year in prison. Sentiment was so intense that Roy Laughlin became a political issue in Lawrence County. Phil Lewis was elected Prosecuting Attorney on the pledge that he would reinstate the indictments pending against Laughlin. Charley Sims was named Sheriff largely because he said, "I'll go get Roy Laughlin if you give me a warrant." The case brought about a complete shake-up in the administration of the county and the new officers were told, "Keep your promise. Bring Roy Laughlin back and send him to the penitentiary to serve a long term, as he deserves."

A Delicate Question.

The county officers were faced with a delicate question. Where was Roy Laughlin? If they started inquiries through the parole board Laughlin might be warned and skip before he could be arrested. Prosecuting Attorney Lewis told a Post-Dispatch reporter, by long distance telephone yesterday, that he had "a pretty good idea where Roy was," but could not exactly place his hand on him.

Laughlin was in St. Louis. He had obtained a job as bookkeeper with the International Life Insurance Co. An official of the company, after Laughlin's arrest yesday, told reporters that Laughlin had never explained his past. In applying for a position the ex-bank cashier and ex-convict had mentioned vaguely "some trouble which has all been straightened out." He made good, however, was alert and efficient, industrious and with steady habits. None of his associates dreamed that Roy Laughlin, bookkeeper, was Roy Laughlin, plunging bank cashier. He lived modestly with his wife at 1262 North Kingshighway, and appeared to be just what he said he was—an honest bookkeeper.

Indictments Reinstated.

Back in Bridgeport Prosecutor Lewis was getting his case in shape. He had five of the old indictments against Laughlin reinstated, and issued warrants. Gov. Small signed the requisition papers and Lewis, determining that Laughlin was somewhere in St. Louis, sent them to Gov. Baker. All was ready but the actual discovery of Laughlin's address and the arrest.

At this juncture, a week ago,

RADIO APPARATUS SHOWS MOVING OBJECT FAR AWAY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—An apparatus by which persons may see moving objects miles away by radio was successfully demonstrated at a private test here today of an invention by C. Francis Jenkins, Washington scientist.

Secretary Wilbur, Dr. George M. Burgess, director of the Bureau of Standards, and other high Government officials witnessed the test.

The apparatus was set up in the laboratory of the inventor in downtown Washington. On a small screen the officials were able to see a small cross revolving in a beam of light flashed across a light-sensitive cell installed at a naval radio station several miles away. The object, while not perfectly clear, was distinguishable, witnesses said.

The "radio eye," consisting of a polished mirror of graduated thickness and a number of smaller mirrors, in its revolution breaks up the image of the picture into thousands of flashes, reflecting them into a photo-electric cell. The flashes take a number of "stills" of the moving object, and in reproducing them on the screen, give continuity of action similar to a motion picture.

COOLIDGE IS CHARACTERIZED AS 'MOST UNINSPIRED PRESIDENT'

Villard, Editor of Nation, Raps Old Parties in Address Before Progressive Party Conference.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 13.—Oswald Garrison Villard, of New York, editor of the Nation, delivered at a state conference of the "Progressive party," which opened here today, an address which in effect was a denunciation of the Republican party as "the tool" of big business, and a "swan song" for the Democratic party.

He characterized President Coolidge as "the most uninspired personality that ever entered the White House." The Coolidge policies he referred to as a "sop thrown to the public by the 'Masters of privilege'." Mr. Villard declared that unless the two party system was abandoned there is no more patriotic duty for the liberals than to provide "a decent and honest opposition" to the controlling organization.

The meeting was summoned for the purpose of forming a permanent progressive organization in New York State, and of selecting delegates to a national conference to be called later.

FREED ON PHOTO EVIDENCE THAT POLICE BEAT HIM

Herbert Julien's Alleged Confession in Mound City Trust Holdup Disregarded by Jury.

TELLER IDENTIFIED HIM AS ROBBER

Picture Taken Day After Suspect's Release From Jail Shows Eyes Black and Jaw Swollen.

Convinced by the evidence that the police used brutality in making their case, a jury in Circuit Judge Taylor's court last night acquitted Herbert Julien of Kansas City—of a charge of robbery in connection with the $34,000 holdup of the Mound City Trust Co. on March 3 last.

Following the report of the verdict in court at 7 p. m. the foreman of the panel stated to reporters that the jury had disregarded a purported confession introduced by the State because the evidence showed that the police had beaten Julien to make him confess.

The jury retired at 3:45 p. m., deliberating three hours and 15 minutes during which it took five ballots. At no time, according to J. T. Patterson of 4386 Laclede avenue, foreman, did its members consider Julien's statement. The only point at issue was the identification of Julien as a member of the robber band by one witness. This evidence the jury found was insufficient to convict.

Photograph Offered.

The defense established its contention of brutality by introducing photographs of Julien showing that his eyes were black and his jaw swollen. The prints were taken March 17, three days after Julien made his statement of guilt. In addition Julien took the stand and declared Elias W. Hoagland, then Chief of Detectives but now a Lieutenant, handled him roughly and that other detectives assisted in his abuse. The photographs showing Julien's condition were taken when he was released after his lawyer, Sigmund M. Bass, had applied for a writ of habeas corpus.

"With that evidence we were forced to disregard his confession," said Patterson. "We disregarded it entirely. The only other evidence against him was his indentification by the bank teller, Oliver E. Troxler, as one of the robbers."

The jury's first ballot was seven to five for acquittal. The second and third were the same. The fourth was nine to three for acquittal and the last was unanimous.

"Chief Hoagland kicked me," Julien related, first to the judge in the jury's absence, and later to the jury. "The other detectives in the room abused me, too. They made me keep my fingers on a desk and they rapped me across the finger tips with a blackjack. They said, 'unless you come through we'll take you out on a county road and let you run. Then we'll shoot at you.' I couldn't stand it any longer and signed the confession."

His Story Denied.

Lieut. Hoagland and Detective-Sergeant Oscar Collard testified that they had not mistreated Julien. The State offered a Bertillion photograph of Julien, said to have been taken the day before his release. This picture showed no marks of mistreatment.

Circuit Attorney Sidener testified previously that the confession was made in his office March 14, and that he noticed no signs of abuse on the prisoner's face then. Sidener said he asked Julien expressly if the police had harmed him and that Julien said "No." The Circuit Attorney further stated that Julien had made other visits to his office prior to his release March 17 and had volunteered other parts of the confession.

Reporter's Testimony.

John A. Cousley, a newspaper reporter, testified that he saw Julien in the Court of Appeals on the day of his release, March 17, and noticed the marks on his face. "He looked just about as the pictures show," Cousley said.

The nine other defendants in the robbery case seem likely to have nine separate trials, as seven of them, who were indicted together, have obtained severances. The other defendants are Lawrence Julien, brother of Herbert; Patrick Scanlon, a Hogan gangster; John G. Hagen, John R. McGowan, former Kansas City policeman; G. C. Lee, alias Fred Davis; Joseph Carroll, Jack Rubenstein, Charles Mercurio and Sam Kotofsky.

JAPANESE LAND A NAVAL PARTY

Buildings of the Foreign Firms Looted—Bodies of Innocent Bystanders Strewn Along Roads.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, June 13.—Following yesterday's victory, thousands of Cantonese troops are pouring across the river in pursuit of the fleeing Yunnanese. Several hundred casualties resulted from yesterday's fighting.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 13.—A Shanghai dispatch to the Daily Express says that the British and Japanese consulates at Kiu-Kiang were wrecked and set on fire during serious rioting. The British consulate was saved from looters who plundered other buildings belonging to foreign companies.

The premises of the Japanese Shipping Co., Nisshin Kisen Kaisha, and the building of Butterfield & Swire, shipping agents, were burned. Students and workmen created havoc before Chinese troops arrived and finally drove them off.

The Japanese landed a naval party, which aided in restoring order.

Kiu-Kiang is situated on the River Yangtse, about 142 miles from Hankow. It has a population of 60,000.

SHANGHAI, June 13.—Shanghai tonight had settled into the condition of an armed camp. Bayonetted troops patrolled the principal thoroughfares. Foreign marine contingents were on guard at the boundaries of the foreign settlements and the approaches to the waterworks and power stations. The appearance of Chang-Hsich-Llang, son of the Manchurian war lord, Chang Tso-Lin, at the boundaries of the settlement, with 2000 troops, for the declared purpose of keeping order, added to the military aspect of the situation.

Conferences between the Pekin envoys of the Central Government and the authorities of the foreign settlement continued today, but still without results.

Extreme Cruelties Imposed on Soldiers and Civilians.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, June 13.—The attacking Kwang Tung and Cantonese forces, under Bolshevik officers, after a fierce attack on the defending Yunnanese army, forced them to surrender Canton, and today imposed extreme cruelties on soldiers and civilian population as well.

Bodies of slain innocent bystanders are strewn along the roads.

The surrendering Yunnanese troops, in many cases, were beaten to death by the Kwangtung forces. From Shameen, the foreign population saw a conquered soldier commit suicide by diving into the river after witnessing the murder of his comrades.

The victors either shot defeated troops or threw them into the river after beating them with bamboo, stones and rifles.

Looting was extensive. The winning troops took even petty articles of household property. The homes of many non-combatants were looted.

Beaten by Treachery.

The principal cause of the defeat of the Yunnanese troops, now driven out of Canton was the treachery in the ranks of Kwangtsi troops who quit for a cash consideration.

Considerable damage was done to buildings owing to heavy gunfire. The most revolting scenes inside the city were caused by the Kwangtung troops.

The defeated army leaders swore they would return to avenge the wrongs done today."

The attacking forces landed 2000 soldiers at Tungshan and from that point they attacked, leaving the de-

Widow of Patrick Grogan "Olive King," Missing From Los Angeles Since February.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 13.—The District Attorney's office announced late tonight that Dr. Thomas W. Young, a dentist, had confessed that he killed his wife, Mrs. Grace Young, a wealthy society matron, who has been missing since February.

The missing woman was the widow of Patrick Grogan, once known as the "olive king," and administratrix of a $1,000,000 estate to which their son, Charles Patrick Grogan, is principal heir.

The case came to the attention of the District Attorney's office shortly after a heated legal fight had been launched over the guardianship of young Grogan. The widow later married Dr. Young.

KLAN "GRAND DRAGON" JAILED

Colorado Man Sentenced for Contempt in Tax Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., June 13.—Dr. John Galen Locke, "Grand Dragon" of the Colorado Ku Klux Klan, tonight rests behind prison bars in the county jail here for failure to carry out a court order to produce his financial accounts for examination by Internal Revenue agents.

Dr. Locke, whose Federal income tax payments from 1918 to 1924 are under investigation, was adjudged by Judge J. Foster Symes in contempt of court last Tuesday but the Federal jurist did not commit him to jail until today, after he had directed Dr. Locke a second time to produce the accounts. Dr. Locke says the records have disappeared.

POISONED, SHOT AND HURT IN COLLISION

Woman Injured Enroute to Hospital After Reported Attempt at Suicide.

Mrs. Marcella Dixon, 32 years old, of 2312 Burnes avenue, Overland, is at Liberty Hospital in a critical condition suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning, a bullet wound in the right temple, a possible skull fracture and bruises and contusions of the body.

She was found lying on the floor in a bedroom of her home about 5:30 p. m. yesterday suffering from the poisoning and the bullet wound. The automobile in which she was being taken to Liberty Hospital collided with another machine at St. Charles and Ferguson roads, resulting in her suffering the possible skull fracture and body bruises.

Mrs. Dixon's husband, J. R. Dixon, told a deputy sheriff that she was "mad at herself" and attempted to commit suicide. He refused to comment further.

Dr. R. A. Walker, who resides on the Woodson road near the Dixon home, was called to treat Mrs. Dixon before her removal to the hospital. He said she had been melancholy for some time and once before attempted suicide.

ASSERTS SHEPHERD INQUIRED ABOUT COURSE IN GERMS

Physician Tells of Visit by Murder Case Defendant to Hospital in Chicago in Fall of 1923.

DEFENSE QUERY ABOUT INDICTMENT

Argument Over Question Put to State Witness Finally Taken Into the Judicial Chambers.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 13. — Legal fights and the testimony of nine witnesses filled the two hour session of the Shepherd murder trial today.

The defense was overruled in its various contentions until finally William Scott Stewart, chief of counsel for Shepherd, demanded of Judge Thomas J. Lynch:

"But, your honor, I cannot always be wrong."

In that instance he was pleading for admission as an exhibit of what he said was the original memorandum by William Nelson McClintock, then a student at Dartmouth University, from which William Darling Shepherd, Chicago attorney and his foster father, dictated the will which made Shepherd the chief beneficiary of the youth's estate, recently valued in excess of $1,000,000.

Defense Loses Fight.

Previously the defense lost a fight to have expunged from the record yesterday's testimony by Miss Estelle Gehling, Shepherd's "sunshine girl," and a quotation from a letter Shepherd sent the young nurse in breaking off their relations.

The third hard skirmish of the day remained undecided at adjournment and will be continued Monday, when Stewart will cite his authority for his method of cross-examining Dr. Amante Rongetti.

The doctor testified for the prosecution that early in the fall of 1923 Shepherd came to the Ashland Boulevard Hospital and inquired about a course in bacteriology, displayed interest in tuberculosis, and asked about how typhoid fever got into the body.

Stewart's questions sought to bring out that Rongetti was angry with Charles C. Faiman, who was indicted with Shepherd after he testified he supplied typhoid germs and taught Shepherd how to slay Billy McClintock with them, and that Rongetti had gone first to a newspaper with his story rather than to authorities.

Asked About Indictment.

The final question asked by Stewart was whether Rongetti had been indicted.

The argument between counsel precipitated by the question finally was taken into the judicial chambers.

One success greeted the defense's efforts today, however, when it was shown that a secret laboratory attributed to Shepherd by the prosecution actually was in his room, which adjoined that of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, and to which Mrs. McClintock had access at all times.

State's Attorney Crowe indicated the secret laboratory as an important link in the State's chain of circumstantial evidence against Shepherd when yesterday he won the right to go about establishing the necessary "corpus delicti" in his own way.

The laboratory testimony was adduced through Anna Beckford, formerly a maid in the McClintock home, to which the Shepherds went to live after Mrs. Shepherd had renewed a schoolday friendship with Mrs. McClintock.

In the matter of the will-memorandum, the defense was partly successful in that Judge Lynch ruled that it might be introduced later as defense evidence.

Additional testimony as to Shepherd's impoverished status, and his expectation of some day coming into wealth was brought out through testimony by Jerome Matillo of Indianapolis, Ind., and Louis Sbarbaro.

Matillo, a carpenter, sent to Texas by Shepherd to build a summer home for Mrs. McClintock, testified he once heard Shepherd say to his brother: "Never mind about Willis; he will come out of this with his pockets full."

Sbarbaro, Chicago civil service employe, uncle of John Sbarbaro, an assistant State's Attorney, and formerly a restaurateur, testified Shepherd informed him 8 or 10 years ago that one day he would have plenty, and that he said he then was getting $7500 as guardian of a rich boy.

John Rush, detective sergeant, was prevented by objections from testifying that he found Shepherd paid only $4 income tax last year, and that he was given back $1 of that amount.

Another bit of evidence kept from the record was the statement by Mrs. Stella Carson of Linden, Ia., formerly a housekeeper in the McClintock home, that Mrs. Shepherd had removed some jewelry from the body of Mrs. McClintock. The question and answer were expunged from the record and the jury warned to disregard the matter.

Through E. M. Rubel, a Probate Court clerk, the will of Billy McClintock was introduced and was read to the jury by Crowe.

Eva Nelson, a maid for the Shepherds, testified that "Mr. Billy" asked her to witness his signature to the document and had her attest it.

More Liberty for Jury.

In his successful effort to have Miss Gehling's testimony and the excerpt from Shepherd's letter to her remain in the record, the prosecutor agreed not to remind the jury that the letter was other than a business document. To reveal the epistle as a "love letter" or to point out to the jury any indiscretions of which Shepherd was guilty would be highly prejudicial, Crowe agreed.

The jury, some members of which have been isolated for more than three weeks, petitioned the judge today for more liberty, and as a result will be permitted to attend a theater tomorrow and will be taken automobile riding. The jurors also asked to be permitted to walk in nearby Lincoln Park as a break in the monotony of being confined in stuffy quarters during the long trial.

Attendants who would have been present at the marriage of Billy McClintock and Miss Isabelle Pope, who waited with a license when the youth died, assisted at the wedding today of Dudley Pope and Miss Virginia Buell. Miss Isabelle Pope was not present. Pope is her cousin. His best man was Edward Lootweiler, who was Billy's roommate at Dartmouth University, and Miss Pope's sister Elizabeth was a bridesmaid.

JARDINE OPENS HIGHWAY BUILT ON A BED OF SALT

Secretary of Agriculture Praises Feat of Building 41 Mile Cutoff in Great Salt Lake Desert in Utah.

By the Associated Press.

WENDOVER, Utah, June 13.—From the standpoint of engineering, the 41-mile Wendover cut-off stretch of the Victory Highway is unique in the story of road building, Secretary of Agriculture William J. H. Jardine declared in an address here today. He was the principal speaker at the celebration of the official opening of the new highway across the mud-flat and salt beds of the Great Salt Lake desert.

The completion of the road opens the way for transcontinental and interstate travel between Utah to Northern Nevada and Northern and Central California, and brings to a successful conclusion a five-year effort to bridge the age-old obstacle of the salt desert.

Secretary Jardine, in summing up the benefits of the new route, expressed the belief "that it is doubtful if the public at large appreciates the magnitude of the problem solved here."

"Now that the project has been brought to a successful conclusion, it does not appear to have been especially difficult," he said. "This is a common characteristic of many great achievements. To build a road an a bed of salt, soluble in fresh water, which drains through this area, seemed hazardous in the extreme at the beginning. But the engineers discovered early that the salt bed was insoluble in the residuent solution in which it lies after the spring evaporation.

"Consequently a part of the road is built upon a solid layer of salt, and the layer is permanently protected from disintegration by a clay cutoff wall. In the construction work, horses could be employed only with the greatest difficulty; all fresh water had to be hauled for many miles, and, for several miles the roadbed was completely submerged in brine for months at a time."

The Secretary praised the work of the roadbuilders, and also launched into cost figures. The cutoff cost $380,000, of which $234,000 was furnished by the Government, he declared.

CITIZENS FAIL TO DEMAND RESIGNATION OF COUNTY SHERIFF

Prosecuting Attorney and booed the Rev. Mr. Johnston.

"Name the man," they shouted, "Get another speaker! Let's hear someone else!" while someone on the edge of the crowd called, "Let him talk, give him a chance."

Mueller walked up close to the speaker and thrust his face near the speaker's.

"Put up or shut up," he shouted, shaking his hand alof. "Put up or sut up." The cheers and boos increased in volume. There were more cries of 'put him out,' 'let him talk,' 'give him time."

Mueller Finally Withdraws.

"It's tommyrot that the law can't be enforced," the Rev. Mr. Johnston went on and Mueller, apparently satisfied that he had won his point retired. "They're getting results in the city. Look what Miller has done there.

"But out here the law can't be enforced, they tell us. It is this contempt for the good citizens that makes revolutonsi." The speaker paused as though for applause, but there was none forthcoming. A school boy, erudite in history, called in a piping voice, "There haven't been any revolutions here for a long time, Mister."

"That's no reason why there shouldn't be," the Rev. Mr. Johnston retorted. "If I—— He stopped short as Martin Rasmussen, assistant to Mueller, appeared beside him. Rasmussen handles cases in the northern part of the county for Mueller.

"I would like to hear the man who says he saw me drinking," Rasmussen, a former service man, shouted in impassioned tones. "I haven't taken a drink since I have been in office. I used to be an automobile salesman and I took a drink occasionally but now I am an officer of the law and I don't drink."

With his appearance the Rev. Mr. Johnston rettied. James Howard of Wellston, who presided at the gathering, closed the meeting by reminding them that Mueller had invited them to come to his office to make affidavits on conditions.

After the meeting had dispersed Mueller's staff was in his office ready for business. No one came up, however, except a few friends who congratulated Mueller and Rasmussen on their oratorical efforts.

Wilmas Censured by Autenrieth.

Wilmas was severely censured yesterday morning by Albert Autenrieth, chairman of the County Republican Committee in a statement in which he declared Wilmas and Mueller were passing the buck on law enforcement conditions. He declared "someone is getting money" from law breaking elements.

Wilmas did not reply to his statement and did not appear at the meeting last night at which his political scalp was to have been demanded but several of his deputies were present. Wilmas was originally backed by the county machine headed by Fred Essen, but is said to have come to loggerheads with the machine over his intractability.

Mueller, who was also backed by the machine for election, is said to have suffered a lessening of the support of the old line Republicans and as a result is receiving, along with Wilmas the condemnation of the machine because of enforcement conditions.

"Someone Getting Money."

"Everybody knows what resorts are running in St. Louis County," Autenrieth declared yesterday in his statement criticising Mueller and Wilmas. "The Sheriff should raid them for the sake of common decency and to keep the pledge he made to the Republican Committee before he was elected.

"I won't say who it is, but someone is getting money from these elements," meaning the forces of the law violators. Autenrieth pointed out that Mrs. Thompson had voluntarily gathered evidence of dry law violations against six county saloon keepers.

The Sheriff's office and the Prosecuting Attorney's office think they are fooling the people by "passing the buck," Autenrieth declared.

PAROLED AFTER 16 YEARS SHE RETURNS TO WORKHOUSE

Delaware Woman, Convicted of Murder in 1907, Is Convinced World Does Not Want Her.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 13.—Finding herself unwanted by the outside world and shunted from place to place, Mrs. Mary A. Powell, 74 years old, who was paroled in August, 1923, after serving 16 years of a life sentence for murder, at her request has returned to the workhouse, from which place she was paroled.

Mrs. Powell was convicted in 1907 of murdering Essie Albine during a jealous rage. After serving 16 years she was granted a parole and a home was provided for her by a family at Elsmere, who later asked the Parole Board to find other quarters for the aged woman. Since that time, Mrs. Powell has drifted from one family to another and, after 16 months of freedom, she became homeless, and the authorities ordered her returned to the workhouse.

50 MINERS TO AID POLICE

Union Men in Nova Scotia Strike Area to Patrol Streets.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HARTFORD, N. S., June 13.—Fifty members of the United Mine Workers of America were sworn in today as special constables to patrol the streets and act as an auvillary to the local police force in maintaining order during the strike of the workmen of the British Empire Steel Corporation.

Five thousand miners attended the funeral this afternoon of William Davis, who was shot down by a steel corporation policeman during the rioting Thursday when the power station was wrecked by strikers and the company's stores looted.

GANGSTERS AND POLICE SHOOT IT OUT; THREE DEAD

Two Chicago Patrolmen Assassinated by Gunmen, One of Whom Is Slain, Two Captured.

FIGHT FOLLOWS CHASE IN AUTOS

Third Policeman Critically Wounded — General Cleanup of Criminals Ordered After the Fight.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Chicago gangland and Chicago policemen met tody and as a result two policemen were shot to death, another probably fatally wounded, one gangster was killed and his two companions captured in one of the most desperate and spectacular pistol fights in the city's history.

Tonight 6000 Chicago policemen were scouring the city in what Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins described as a relentless and merciless drive on gangland and scores of suspects have been taken into custody.

The policemen and the gangsters met on the southwest side and the pistol fight followed a 60-mile-an-hour automobile chase which ended when the gangsters' car was wrecked and they fumbled from their machine with blazing guns.

Young Policeman the Hero.

The hero of the fight was William Sweeney, a young policeman, who escaped unscathed the fussillade of bullets that wounded or killed his three comrades and then singlehanded killed one of the gangsters and caught the two others after wounding them.

True to the gangland code, the captured gunmen remained stolidly silent through hours of questioning, but tonight the police were satisfied that the fight was the aftermath of a trip by the gangsters to avenge the death of Angelo Genna, gang leader, slain a few weeks ago. Michael Genna, his brother, was the gangster shot and killed today.

Half an hour before Genna and his men began their savage fight with the detective squad, six gunmen tried to assassinate an unidentified motorist several miles from the scene of the fight. They emptied sawed-off shotguns and pistols at the car, but missed the occupant. The police tonight believe that Genna and his companions were in that ambuscade and believed that they had been detected by the police and decided to shoot it out.

Gangsters' Auto Wrecked.

The police auto met the gangsters' machine racing over a Southwest Side boulevard and gave chase. The race was ended after a two-mile run at breakneck speed, when the gangsters' car crashed into a light pole. The three gangsters leaped from their car as the police car drew up a few feet away and the four detectives tumbled out. A shotgun volley met them. Patrolman Harold Olson, driver of the police car, was dropped in his tracks and a moment later Patrolman Charles Walsh also fell fatally wounded. The two policemen left advanced with blazing pistols until Sgt. Michael Conway collapsed, shot through the chest and probably fatally wounded.

Then the gangsters took to their heels. Patrolman Sweeney, who was uninjured, started in pursuit of Michael Genna. Genna turned as the policeman advanced and aimed his shotgun directly at the officer but the hammer clicked harmlessly. Then Genna threw the gun away and ran with the policeman still in pursuit and firing at every step. Genna started into the basement of a building a block away, Sweeney shot him dead and he crashed through a basement window.

Leaving Genna without a backward glance, the patrolman sped in pursuit of the other two gunmen who had boarded a street car. The car stopped as Sweeney clambered aboard and he knocked one of the gangsters down and overpowered the other after a struggle in which other policemen who had joined in the chase took part.

General Drive on Gunmen.

The two captured men gave the names of John Scali, alias Scalise and Albert Ammalino. Chief Collins ordered an immediate roundup of all gangsters, promoted Conway and Sweeney, and attributed the shooting to laxity of the law in dealing with those who kill policemen, and asserted that the men captured "should be indicted, tried and hung this afternoon." Mayor William E. Dever indorsed the drive on gangsters and gunmen. "We are going to put an end to the gunmen in Chicago," he said. "They are going to be cleaned up, driven from Chicago or jailed."

Today's battle recalled the assassination last December of Don O'Banion, gang leader who was shot to death in his flower shop by four assassins, and the death of Angelo Genna a few weeks ago. He was shot as he rode in his automobile. The funerals of these two gang leaders were said to have been the most pretentious ever held in Chicago. O'Banion's casket cost $10,000 and that of Genna was of solid silver.

An inquest into the death of Michael Genna and the two policemen was opened today, but continued indefinitely. Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney, said he would call a special session of the grand jury to hear evidence in the case.

TOWN'S SEARCH FOR PAROLED BANK LOOTER ENDS HERE

Mrs. Elizabeth Boozell of Bridgeport, made a business trip to St. Louis. She is the widow of J. A. Boozell, vice president of the Bridgeport Bank & Trust Co., who died some time after the failure from what friends said was worry and grief over the affair. The Boozell family was reputed to have lost upwards of $20,000 in the bank crash, and Mrs. Boozell was one of those who did not think Laughlin had been punished sufficiently. She, in fact, was a leader in the fight to bring Laughlin back for a longer prison term.

Heard Name Mentioned.

It chanced that Mrs. Boozell had occasion to call at the International Life Insurance Company's office in the International Life Building, at Eighth and Chestnut streets. While transacting business there she accidentally heard the name "Roy Laughlin" mentioned.

"I used to know a man by that name. Does he work here?" she inquired.

"Yes. He's one of the bookkeepers."

When Mrs. Boozell returned to Bridgeport she told Sheriff Sims where he could get his man. Yesterday morning the Sheriff and Andy Faust, a business man of Bridgeport, came to St. Louis. Sheriff Sims and city detectives arrested Laughlin at the insurance company's offices.

"I guess you know me, Roy," the Sheriff said.

"Oh, yes," said Laughlin.

Blames Plight to "Spite Work."

Laughlin, in his cell at Police Headquarters, last night refused to discuss but briefly the charges against him. He said he wished to consult his attorney, State Senator Joseph Brogan, to whom he was paroled, before making a statement.

He said that he knew he had been reindicted, but added that he had not been attempting "to hide out." He has frequently written friends in Bridgeport since his reindictment, he declared. Although refusing to give any particulars, Laughlin intimated there were others involved in the bank's failure. He attributed his reindictment to "spite work."

It is not known if he will waive extradition, but indications are that he will not. However, the papers already are in Gov. Baker's hands, and it is likely Laughlin will soon be back in Bridgeport.

The town remembers him as he was before the lure of sudden wealth led him to speculate with his neighbors' money. Looking back now, the Bridgeport citizens realize that Laughlin always lived beyond his means. His salary at its peak as only $127.50 a month, yet he bought and stocked a large farm and had a handsome house in Bridgeport.

Like most banks in small towns the Bridgeport Bank & Trust Co. was managed almost entirely by its cashier. The president and directors were business men or farmers who entrusted actual operation to Laughlin. The depositors were therefore absolutely at his mercy. Yet no one doubted Roy. He was a member of the First Baptist Church, a moving spirit in civic enterprises and a patron of Bridgeport culture. He organized Christmas funds in the Sunday school, kept the church money in his bank, induced school children to save their pennies and by one savings club or another got deposits from almost every responsible family in the community.

"He robbed us all," said Andy Faust, with some rancor, when interviewed yesterday. "We all trusted him and he took advantage of us. Now we don't intend for him to sneak out of his punishment."

They are shaking their heads grimly in Bridgeport today. Roy Laughlin's coming back to face the music.

fending forces without river transport facilities and therefore unable to launch a counter attack.

Innocent Are Stoned.

After landing, the Kwangtung troops gave the surrendering forces no consideration, although the defeated troops had voluntarily given up their arms. The winning forces then began looting the city.

Revolting scenes followed in all parts of the city, many of which were witnessed by Europeans from the foreign quarter. Innocent people were stoned and beaten by mobs.

Ten thousand Cantonese troops now are on the Canton side of the river, all wearing red neckties. Their success in capturing the city was attributed to the leadership of Russian officers.

Man Entombed in Mine Cheers His Rescuers

Foreman Reports Having Talked to Robert Hill, Trapped by Falling Rock Since Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

GRASS VALLEY, Cal., June 13.—The voice of Robert Hill, a miner, who has been entombed by a cavein in the Baltic mine of the Alta Combination mine near here, since Thursday, cheered today the miners who are attempting to rescue him. Robert Bedford, in charge of the rescue work, reported he had talked to Hill.

It is estimated the cave-in had covered about 60 feet of the tunnel in which Hill was trapped when he and the other miners were leaving the workings Thursday. Hill stopped to pick up tools and the rock and earth in the tunnel fell while he was doing it.

The tunnel is only large enough to permit three men to work in it at a time, and thus is being done continuously in relays. Hill's wife and two children have remained in the mine company's office since he was entombed.

"Bill" Daley, one of the rescue party, estimates that the debris between the rescuers and the imprisoned miner is not more than 10 feet.

Daley also conversed with Hill today, it later developed. Hill's first words in reply to a question by Daley as to how he was getting along inside.

"I'm all right but I'm cold and hungry."

Daley immediately ordered the imprisoned man to retreat back in the tunnel in the far end which is drilled through solid rock. This precaution was taken that Hill might not be caught under any subsequent cave-in.

The conversation with Hill was carried on through the air pipe, which passes through the debris.

RETALIATION TO TOLL MEASURE SUGGESTED

East Side Threatens to Treble Assesment on Unused Deck of Municipal Bridge.

A plan of retaliation has been suggested on the East Side in case St. Louis carries out its threat to collect municipal bridge tolls from nonresidents of Missouri by passing Mayor Miller's ordinance for the tolls. The plan is to treble the assessment on the Illinois end of the unused railroad deck.

As is known, the toll ordinance has been introduced in an effort to force retirement of opposition to the request that the Illinois Legislature exempt the bridge from taxes in Illinois. St. Clair County wants the taxes and its legislative representatives oppose the exemption. The Legislature will adjourn in a week.

Stewart Campbell, a member of the St. Clair County Board of Review, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the assessment on the bridge approach would be trebled if the toll bill is passed. Patrick F. Martin, another member, concurred in this assertion. Warren Hamill, the third member, declined to make a statement without consulting his colleagues, but Campbell and Martin were of the opinion that Hamill would agree with them.

Tax Only on Rail Approach.

"We do not want to take the position of the dog in the manger," Campbell said, "but we are tired of hearing the Fourth of July orations of certain St. Louisans who becloud the issue. We want it clearly understood that only the railroad approach has been taxed and that we never have taxed that part of the bridge used by vehicles and pedestrians.

"The railroad approach, about three miles long, is a white elephant on the hands of St. Louis. The fact that it is not used is no reason why we should not tax it. The assessed value of the railroad approach, the only part now being taxed, is on our books at $475,000. The value of that part of the bridge on the Illinois side which might be taxed is easily $3,000,000, the assessed valuation of which would be half that amount, or more than three times the present assessed valuation.

"If we are shown that it will be advantageous to St. Clair County to take the tax off the railroad approach, the tax will be removed, but we see no reason why property on which we collected taxes before the bridge was built should be exempt from taxation merely because St. Louis built a bridge there that isn't used."

Tax Was $41,762 in 1924.

Taxes on the railroad approach of the Municipal Bridge in 1924 were only $41,762, according to figures compiled by Dan O'Connell, a member of the Board of Assessors of St. Clair County. Taxes for 1924 for all of the Illinois portion of the Eads Bridge were $121,968. O'Connell said that he believed that a majority of the five members of the Board of Assessors would favor the retaliation suggested since it seemed just to him. The Board of Review would have authority to make the assessment in the event the Board of Assessors did not do so, Campbell said.

MILLER DEMANDS LOYALTY OF EMPLOYES

Says They Must Be in Harmony With Administration or Lose Jobs.

Mayor Miller, addressing a gathering at a banquet in honor of a recent city appointee, at the American Annex Hotel, last night, charged that there exists a conspiracy between three St. Louis newspapers to embarass his administration.

The charge was made before a gathering of about 450 men and women, at a testimonial dinner in honor of Alex. J. Filipiak, recently appointed Associate City Counselor, and attended by a number of other Miller appointees and city officials and Judges. The Mayor spoke following an address by Robert J. Kratky, attorney, manager of Miller's campaign for Mayor, who defended the Mayor's interpretation of loyalty in the discharge and appointment of city employes.

"Must Accept the Principles."

"I agree with Mr. Kratky in his definition of loyalty," said Mayor Miller. "No man who is not willing to accept the principles on which this administration was elected is entitled to stay there. And, insofar as the charter permits, I will see that they don't stay there.

"This administration was elected to do certain things. But from the very start it encountered an open, vicious and malicious conspiracy on the part of three of our daily newspapers to embarass it. They have lied more about the administration than I have fingers or toes.

"The greatest liability to the city of St. Louis is the Post-Dispatch. Whenever I have found a reptile it has been my aim to step on its head, and that is what I propose to do with the Post-Dispatch. The only way I have to fight its iniquity and viciousness is with my mouth, and as long as I can talk and can get somebody to listen, I will talk. Its opposition is my best recommendation.

"No Efficiency Without Loyalty."

Kratsky, emphasizing that he spoke only as a private citizen, asserted that "without loyalty in a city employe, irrespective of whether or not he is of the same political faith as his chief, there can be no efficiency whatsoever."

"An election to a municipal employe is a mandate," he said. "It is for the people to say who his superior shall be. If he finds he cannot be loyal to the superior elected by the people, the only honorable thing for him to do is resign. There can be no alternative for disloyalty but summary dismissal. Past experience has proved that the citizens heartily approve such action."

Others present included Police Judges Rosecan and Beck, Circuit Attorney Sidener, Circuit Judges Hall and Landwehr, Provisional Judge Frank B. Grodsky, City Counselor Senti and associate and assistant city counselors. Dr. E. E. Rommer was toastmaster and the guest of honor was presented with an automobile, the gift chiefly of Polish-Americans.

SAYS HE IS BEING FIRED BECAUSE HIS NAME IS KOELN

Christ Koeln, Fire Department Master Mechanic, Brother of Collector Koeln, to Lose Job.

CHARTER PROVISION IS AGAIN IGNORED

"Didn't Have a Good System" in the Shops, Director of Public Safety Declares.

"I am being fired because my name is Koeln," declared Christ Koeln, master mechanic of the Fire Department, and brother of Collector Edmond Koeln, in speaking last evening of his dismissal, which is to take effect July 1. Collector Koeln is a political antagonist of Mayor Miller.

Koeln's dismissal, announced yesterday by Director Brod of the Department of Public Safety, is the latest of a series of removals, in the 7½ weeks of the Miller administration, which have raised the question whether the city charter really protects employes in the classified service against dismissal for political causes.

Chairman Hertenstein of the Efficiency Board expressed his belief that the charter should be amended in order to give such protection, as the present charter provisions are contradictory and uncertain, though the spirit of the charter appears to be against political dismissals in the classified service.

Statement of Director Brod.

Director Brod, in making the announcement, referred to the discovery that some work for city officials, work not directly connected with the Fire Department's needs, had been done in the department shops, directed by Koeln, at Twenteth street and Washington avenue. However, the director said the removal of Koeln was not based on this discovery. He said he had made an investigation and had concluded that Koeln "didn't have a good system" in the shops.

Koeln, who has held his position 11 years, ranks next to the Fire Chief in pay, his salary being $3300 a year. He is subject to call 24 hours a day, attending all second-alarm fires, and he has never taken a vacation. Known as a "handy" man in all sorts of mechanical work, he has been asked occasionally to do work for friends, outside of his official duties.

Koeln said that neither Director Brod nor Chief Alt, from whom his notice of dismissal came, had said a word to him about the odd jobs done in the shops.

"If they had asked me about it," he said, "I would have told them that the work was done on my own time, and without use of any city material. A man not connected with the department told me today that the report as to those odd jobs was made to Mayor Miller by a man who was discharged from the shops recently.

Did Jobs on Own Time.

"I did fix a Christmas tree stand for the son of Charlie Regli, secretary to the Fire Chief. Regli furnished the material, and I did the work on my own time. I varnished some tables for my brother, Collector Koeln, at the shops one Sunday. I took the glass aquarium from the Collector's office almost a year ago, telling Ed I would repair it, but I have never got around to that job, and the aquarium is still at the shop.

"No material belonging to the city was used on any private job of mine. A few firemen helped me build a porch at my house. It was on their day off. I have receipted bills for the material, and am going to look them up."

Koeln said that, through his work with the department, he knew a number of material dealers, and that he had sometimes helped his friends to "get good prices" on certain materials. This matter was mentioned by Director Brod yesterday, though not to Koeln.

Order Issued by Brod.

The director issued an order threatening immediate discharge of any of his subordinates who should use the services of firemen or department mechanics for private work, or who used officials to obtain discounts for friends buying material or supplies.

One case mentioned by Director Brod was the building of a porch at the home of William Panzer, a Fire Chief, by firemen. Panzer said yesterday that the firemen did the work on their days off. "Not a cent's worth of city property was used," he said. "They mixed the concrete and I did the carpenter work."

SAYS HE IS BEING FIRED BECAUSE HIS NAME IS KOELN

Christ Koeln, Fire Department Master Mechanic, Brother of Collector Koeln, to Lose Job.

CHARTER PROVISION IS AGAIN IGNORED

Didn't Have a Good System" in the Shops, Director of Public Safety Declares.

"I am being fired because my ame is Koeln," declared Christ Koeln, master mechanic of the Fire Department, and brother of Collector Edmond Koeln, in speaking last evening of his dismissal, which is to take effect July 1. Collector Koeln is a political antagonist of Mayor Miller.

Koeln's dismissal, announced esterday by Director Brod of the epartment of Public Safety, is he latest of a series of removals, n the 7½ weeks of the Miller administration, which have raised the uestion whether the city charter eally protects employes in the lassified service against dismissal or political causes.

Chairman Hertenstein of the Efficiency Board expressed his belief that the charter should be mended in order to give such protection, as the present charter rovisions are contradictory and ncertain, though the spirit of the harter appears to be against political dismissals in the classified ervice.

Statement of Director Brod.

Director Brod, in making the announcement, referred to the discovery that some work for city officials, work not directly connected with the Fire Department's needs, had been done in the department shops, directed by Koeln, at Twenty-fifth street and Washington avenue. However, the director said the removal of Koeln was not based on this discovery. He said he had made an investigation and had concluded that Koeln "didn't have a good system" in the shops.

Koeln, who has held his position 11 years, ranks next to the Fire Chief in pay, his salary being $3300 a year. He is subject to call 24 hours a day, attending all second-alarm fires, and he has never taken a vacation. Known as a "handy" man in all sorts of mechanical work, he has been asked occasionally to do work for friends, outside his official duties.

Koeln said that neither Director Brod nor Chief Alt, from whom his notice of dismissal came, had said a word to him about the odd jobs done in the shops.

"If they had asked me about it," he said, "I would have told them that the work was done on my own time, and without use of any city material. A man not connected with the department told me today that the report as to those odd jobs was made to Mayor Miller by a man who was discharged from the shops recently.

Did Jobs on Own Time.

"I did fix a Christmas tree stand for the son of Charlie Regli, secretary to the Fire Chief. Regli furnished the material, and I did the work on my own time. I varnished some tables for my brother, Collector Koeln, at the shops one Sunday. I took the glass aquarium from the Collector's office almost a year ago, telling Ed I would repair it, but I have never got around to that job, and the aquarium is still at the shop.

"No material belonging to the city was used on any private job of mine. A few firemen helped me build a porch at my house. It was on their day off. I have receipted bills for the material, and am willing to look them up."

Koeln said that, through his work with the department, he knew a number of material dealers, and that he had sometimes helped his friends to "get good prices" on certain materials. This matter was mentioned by Director Brod yesterday, though not to him.

Order Issued by Brod.

The director issued an order threatening immediate discharge of any of his subordinates who should use the services of firemen or department mechanics for private work, or who used officials to obtain discounts for friends buying material or supplies.

One case mentioned by Director Brod was the building of a porch at the home of William Panzer, a Fire Chief, by firemen. Panzer said yesterday that the firemen did the work on their days off. "Not a cent's worth of city property was used," he said. "They poured the concrete and I did the carpenter work."

Charter Sections Cited.

When Chairman Hertenstein of the Efficiency Board was asked as to the protection afforded by the charter against discharge for political causes, he pointed to two sections of article 18, the article pertaining to the Efficiency Board. Section 7 says, "The appointing officer may suspend, discharge or reduce any officer or employe under him, with or without cause, except as in this charter is otherwise provided." The same section states that the discharged person may obtain a statement of the reason for his dismissal, by requesting it.

Section 12 says, "No person in the classified service or seeking admission thereto shall be appointed, reduced, suspended, discharged or in any way favored or discriminated against because of his political or religious opinions or affiliations."

Hertenstein said these two sections did not appear to be in harmony, though it might be held that the exception mentioned in section 7 was set forth in section 12. At present it is possible for almost any discharged employe to charge that he was removed for political reasons, in violation of section 12, while the removing official can cite section 7 in support of the right to remove him.

No Right of Review.

"The charter does not give the Efficiency Board or any other body the right of review in such matters," the chairman said. "I believe the charter should be amended, to establish a definite authority, so that these controversies, which are likely to arise whenever a man is fired, can be definitely settled."

The chairman also suggested that, to eliminate partisanship from the Efficiency Board, and to render that body independent of the appointing power, it would be a good plan to make the board an elective body, on a nonpartisan or at least a bi-partisan basis.

Others Ousted From Service.

Other discharges in the classified service under the Miller regime, which have been considered as having a political explanation, were those of Secretary Regli of the Fire Department; J. H. Arnold, negro Police Court clerk; Edward Monahan, Deputy Assessor, whose efficiency had caused him to be retained by the Kiel regime, though he was a Democrat; Richard Hatton, removed as City Jailer; H. H. Morgan, removed as Superintendent of the Workhouse; and some City Hall and Municipal Courts janitors and elevator men, who were removed ostensibly for reasons of economy, but whose places were filled by new appointees.

Jailer Hatton was an appointee of Nelson Cunliff when Cunliff was Director of Public Welfare, and was declared by Cunliff to be exceptionally efficient. In appointing M. C. Lefman to replace Hatton, June 1, a temporary appointment was made, as the Efficiency Board had no list of eligibles for the place. Before Hatton was named, the appointing officer waited for an eligible list to be established, which included Hatton.

Immigrant Wins College Degree in Four Years

Julius Bernard Maller, Lithuanian, Earns His Own Way by Working 19 Hours a Day While Mastering High School and Washington U. Courses.

JULIUS BERNARD MALLER.

Arriving in this country from Kovno, Lithuania, with 25 cents in his pocket in May, 1921, Julius Bernard Maller launched into a double program of self-support and higher education that enabled him to learn the English language, complete a four-year high school course and win a Bachelor of Arts degree from Washington University, all in a little more than four years.

He landed in this country without documentary record of a single year of school work to his credit and with a knowledge of English that included only a few words picked up from mariners on shipboard. Last week he received his diploma testifying that he had put behind him a prescribed four-year course in the Washington University College of Arts and Sciences. He had accomplished this singular scholastic feat by putting aside pleasure and recreation, attending night school and by devoting 19 hours a day to work and study from the day of his arrival.

Earned Way; Sent Money Back.

But these achievements are not all that ornament the record of this prodigy from the European Northland. At 22, he is conversant with 10 languages, has contributed numerous short stories, poems and philosophical articles to half a dozen magazines, has served for the last two years as principal of the Montefiore Hebrew School and besides earning his own living has sent back from $10 to $20 a month to destitute relatives and friends in Lithuania.

Maller plans to enter Columbia University, in New York, in September to take up advanced work for a Doctor of Philisophy degree, but for the summer will remain in St. Louis "to get a little recreation—the first in four years," as he expresses it. He resides at 6027 Westminster place.

Left an orphan at the age of 9, young Maller early became accustomed to making his own way in the world and missing meals now and then when circumstances demanded it. He worked at whatever jobs he could get, attending school irregularly and saving his pennies for books to study at home. Somehow his scholastic bent was toward mastery of languages and that inclination was to prove profitable to him in more ways than one.

Became Tutor at 14.

At 14 he was able to dispose of his services as a tutor, a profession to which he stuck until at the age of 18, he had saved money enough to finance a journey across the Atlantic and to Cincinnati, O., where his three married sisters resided. As it turned out he had barely enough to make the trip, but once in Cincinnati he found the going easy in spite of his limited knowledge of English, for he promptly got a job as assistant in the foreign language department of the public library, and that position paid the unheard-of salary incredible to him, because in of $100 a month. It was a figure Kovo he had tutored for as little as 2 cents a day.

Part of his first check, he told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, went back to his stricken relatives in his homeland, and the practice has never been discontinued.

Learning English was his first problem in getting an American education, but again his knowledge of foreign tongues came to his aid. With a reading knowledge of Latin, German, French, Hebrew, Russian, Aramaic, Polish, Yiddish and Lithuanian at his command, he found no great difficulty with English, and after six months of night school was able to read Shakspeare.

Scholastic Career Here.

It was in November, 1921, that he decided to cast his lot in St. Louis when he learned he could get a position as teacher in the Montefiore School. Because of his previous independent study which had included many college subjects, he was permitted to enter Central High School, as a special student with the privilege of pursuing courses at home in addition to those taken at school. By this method of doubling up curriculums he was able at the end of nine months to pass examination in subjects covering the entire high school course of four years, and, incidentally, he got a grade of 96 in a physics course carried entirely at home.

When he tried to follow the same plan at Washington University, however, he found the rules forbade the carrying of outside study for college credits and had to relax his program for a time, but after two years induced the university authorities to make a special provision for him. For the next year then, he centered his attack on science courses at school because of laboratory equipment and pursued his study of literature and philosophy alone.

Two weeks before time for graduation it was suddenly discovered that he lacked two years of required credit in Ancient and in Medieval and Modern History. Maller buckled to his task, reviewed both subjects and passed an examination in time to win his degree.

Writes for Publications.

Besides teaching five hours a day at the Montefiore school, Maller has found time during his college career to write, for "The Modern View," "Jewish Voice," "Jewish Record," and the "Y Journal," published by the Y. M. H. A. For the last two years he has been one of the editors of this publication and recently was elected librarian of the Menorah Society, an honorary Jewish organization.

Mallers first literary effort in English was a mystery story published in "Red and Black" Central High School publication, some months after his arrival in America.

TENNESSEE BAR TO INVESTIGATE ROSS' CONDUCT

Resolution Calls Upon Federal Jurist to Excuse Himself From Bench Pending Inquiry.

ORDERED TO PAY $32,000 ON DRAFTS

Liquidator for Closed Bank Notifies Him to Make Settlement on Protested Paper in Three Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 13.—The financial entanglements in which J. Will Ross, Federal Judge for the Western District of Tennessee, has found himself are to be investigated by a special committee named today by the Memphis and Shelby County Bar Associations. Two hundred and fifty members attended and the vote on the resolution was unanimous. Only when the suggestion was made that the Judge be told that the social amenities should be observed by his recusing himself (To retire from the bench pending a hearing) while te investigation was pending or under way was there a voice of dissent and that subsided quickly.

Judge Ross is to be given a thorough investigation. He is to be given an opportunity to tell why he drew drafts for $16,250 on lawyers practicing in his court while he had under advisement cases of those lawyers involving more than $100,000; why he gave a self-confessed, defaulting vice president of the Pebple's Savings Bank of Jackson, Tenn., when it was tottering, drafts for $27,000 and a check for $4750, which were retained among the assets of the bank until found by the State Bank Examiner.

Formal Notice to Settle.

He will be asked why he did not observe the canons of the American Bar Association that provide "that a judge should not incur obligations, pecuniary or otherwise, which will in any way interfere or appear to interfere with his devotion to the expeditious and proper administration of his proper judicial functions, and why he did not observe section 33 of the canons providing that a judge should in pending or prospective litigation before him be careful to avoid such action as may reasonably tend to awaken the suspicion that his social or business relations or friendships constitute an element in influencing his judicial conduct."

Judge Ross also will be given an opportunity to satisfy the public as to why Federal receivership funds were taken from Memphis to Jackson and placed in a bank that was in a failing condition.

Meanwhile, formal notice to Judge Ross to settle within three days the $32,000 of paper he signed and which has been protested was received this morning by the Judge from T. I. Taylor, special liquidating officer of the bank. Reports at Jackson are that his friends intend to make up the amount.

Whether Judge Ross will recuse himself in line with the recommendation remains to be seen. He always has been noted for the strength of his own convictions, even among his friends when he became interested in highly speculative land deals involving large sums of money. The committee which will conduct the investigation is composed of P. M. Canale, Estes Gwinn, Henry J. Livingston, Lois D. Bejach and W. P. Armstrong.

Amendment Adopted.

T. K. Riddick and George H. Poole, U. S. Commissioner, were the chief defenders of the Judge. Both stated that Ross had said that he will not take the bench unless he is expressly asked to do so by lawyers representing both interests in any case. Riddick opposed the amendment, advising Judge Ross of "the sense of propriety" of the association and in favor of him recusing himself. However, after much debate, this amendment, proposed by Grover McCormick, was carried unanimously.

Riddick stated that he had been authorized to say that Judge Ross would not oppose, but would welcome an investigation by the bar. He quoted from a letter from Judge Ross, asking for an unprejudiced and impartial committee.

Canale said that the committee had not presumed either on the guilt or innocence of Judge Ross, and that the investigation would proceed in a deliberate and cautious way.

Mrs. Ida Holstein, 49, 9803 Lincoln avenue, St. Louis County, scalp lacerations and body bruises.

Alvin Holstein, 3, 123 Mary avenue, lacerations of the forehead.

Charles Goldenberg, 18, 1610 Henrietta avenue, East St. Louis, fractures of the skull and right leg.

Edward Behnen, 9, 1621 Frederick street, East St. Louis, fractured skull.

Meyer Goldenberg, 4, 1610 Henrietta avenue, East St. Louis, scalp lacerations.

Mrs. Helen Burns, 80, 2125A Cass avenue, shock and lacerations of the head and face.

Miss Stella Burns, 40, 2125A Cass avenue, contusions of the face and head.

Although the Ford coupe in which they were riding was overturned four times and demolished when struck at 6 p. m. yesterday by southbound Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 41 at the Mary avenue crossing in St. Louis County, two women and a 3-year-old boy escaped serious injury.

The machine was driven by Mrs. Elmer Holstein, 28 years old, of 123 Mary avenue, St. Louis County. She was accompanied by her 3-year-old son, Alvin, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Ida Holstein, 49, of 9803 Lincoln avenue, St. Louis County. The train was moving slowly when the accident occurred.

All the occupants were thrown from the machine and Mrs. Elmer Holstein told physicians at the Missouri Pacific Hospital, where they were taken after the accident, that her son, calling loudly for his mother, crawled from beneath the engine after it came to a stop, suffering only from lacerations of the head. Mrs. Elmer Holstein and her mother-in-law escaped with body bruises and lacerations of the head and face.

Miss Stella Burns, 40, of 2125A Cass avenue, and her mother, Mrs. Helen Burns, 80, of the same address, were injured at 6:30 p. m. yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a parked automobile at Thomas street and Elliott avenue. Miss Burns suffered face lacerations and her mother suffered shock and lacerations of the head and face. Because of the latter's age her condition was described as critical at City Hospital.

Boy, 5, Is Killed by Auto When Crossing Street.

Robert Rosenstengel, 5 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rosenstengel, 3330 Ohio avenue, was knocked down and killed by an automobile driven by William C. Kerls, a printer, of 3331 Oregon avenue, at 2:15 p. m. yesterday.

The accident occurred on Cherokee street, near Texas avenue, when the child attempted to cross the street in front of the automobile.

Kerls told policemen he was driving slowly east on Cherokee and when near Texas the child darted out into the street from between a string of automobiles parked on the south side. He was directly in front of the car when the driver saw him, and so close that it was impossible to avoid striking him, Kerls said, although he used every eandeavor to avoid the accident.

The death was the seventy-sixth from motor vehicle accidents since Jan. 1, as compared with 65 for the same period a year ago.

Three Boys Injured, Two Seriously, in East St. Louis.

Three boys were injured, two of them critically, when the Ford truck in which they were riding was struck and overturned at 7 p. m. yesterday by a street car at State street and Alexander place, East St. Louis.

Charles Goldenberg, 16, of 1610 Henrietta avenue, East St. Louis, the driver of the truck, suffered fractures of the skull and right leg; his brother, Meyer, 4, scalp lacerations and Edward Behnen, 9, 1621 Frederick street, East St. Louis, a fractured skull. At St. Mary's Hospital it was said that recovery of Charles Goldenberg and Behnen was doubtful.

The accident occurred as Goldenberg attempted to make a left turn from State street into Alexander place. The street car, which was eastbound, struck the machine as it was making the turn, causing it to collide with another machine and overturn. The truck was owned by the Goldenberg boys' father, Mandel Goldenberg, a grocer, and the boys were making deliveries.

Neither the street car motorman, W. F. Weber, nor the conductor, P. G. King, was arrested.

KILLS 10-YEAR-OLD CHUM SHOWING HIM "REAL GUN"

Schoolmate 12, Produces His Father's Automatic and Friend Points at Objects With Air Rifle.

A desire on the part of Charles Kidd, 12 years old, to show off a "real gun," resulted in the death at City Hospital yesterday of his chum, 10-year-old Glenwood Coffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coffer, 1114A Mallinckrodt street, who was shot through the head when Charles pulled the trigger of an automatic rifle belonging to his stepfather. Police have accepted Charles' story that he did not know the rifle was loaded.

Charles and "Glen" were in the fifth grade at Clay Public School and have been chums for three years, Charles told police at the North Market Street Station after the shooting. About 9 o'clock yesterday "Glen" came to Charles' home, 3515 North Eleventh street. Both Charles' stepfather, Harry Weisharr, a teamster, and his mother, Mrs. Winnie Weisharr, were away at work. "Glen" found an old air rifle belonging to Charles, according to the latter's account to police and began pointing it at objects in the kitchen.

It was then that Charles went to a closet and produced the .22-caliber automatic rifle belonging to his stepfather. Half raising it to his shoulder, he pulled the trigger. There was the sound of an exploding cartridge and "Glen" sank to the floor with a bullet in his head. Charles returned the rifle to the closet and ran to the Coffer home, summoning Mrs. Coffer. "Glen" was removed to City Hospital, where he died at 2 p. m. without regaining consciousness.

In his first story to police, Charles said his chum had been struck by flying metal from an explosion on a lot at Fourteenth and Branch street. The explosion he related, had been caused by Glenwood striking at a pile of rubbish with a stick. He had then carried his chum a distance of six blocks to the Weisharr home, Charles told police. Further questioning bought forth the account of the shooting, as told, Charles explaining that he had fabricated the first account because he feared being sent to the Booneville Reformatory.

Capt. Charles Loepker, in charge of the North Market Street Station, and detectives accepted Charles story of the shooting, but he is being held at the House of Correction, as is customary in such cases, pending the outcome of an inquest tomorrow.

The dead boy is survived by two brothers and a sister in addition to his parents. The father is a mechanic.

WIFE DIES IN POISON PACT, MAN SURVIVES

Omaha Couple, in Death Agreement, the Parents of Five Young Children

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., June 13.—Mrs. John Worthen and her husband last night entered into a suicide compact and drank poison from which Mrs. Worthen died during the night but from which the husband, who took an overdose, may recover. Worthen is in a hospital under police surveillance and should he recover from the poson, will be tried for murder, the Nebraska law making the survivor of a suicide pact guilty of murder.

The Worthens have five children, the oldest 10 and the youngest 1 year old. Mrs. Worthen was 25 and Worthen 30 years of age.

Several months ago Mrs. Worthen submitted to an operation, by permission of the courts, to prevent the birth of more children. Because of her ill health physicians said nemind would give way entirely should there be another child. Furthermore, doctors said the child probably would be an idiot.

When the proposition to operate on Mrs. Worthen was first broached, there was a storm of indignation among the women's clubs of the country.

The suicide pact was made last night at supper. Mrs. Worthen put the five children to bed and kissed them all good night. In the meantime Worthen had gone to a drug store and with his last cent bought strychnine which he told the druggist he wanted to use to kill rats. When he got home he found that Mrs. Worthen had borrowed a little coffee from a neighbor, to whom she said she was ill.

After the children had gone to sleep, Mrs. Worthen made coffee and Worthen says he poured the poison into the coffee pot. Mrs. Worthen's cup or coffee was poured out first. Worthen got the dregs which contained so much of the poison that he got an overdose and may recover from its effect.

Sitting at the dilapidated kitchen table, husband and wife drank the poisoned coffee, without sugar or cream. "Then we kissed each other and lay down to die," Worthen mumbled to the police.

JOHN NICKERSON TO BE BURIED TOMORROW

Funeral Service for Former Banker Will Be Held at Christ Church Cathedral.

The body of John Nickerson, 88 years old, for many years vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, who died Friday night from the infirmities of age at his home in New York City, will be brought to St. Louis today and the funeral will be at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow from Christ Church Cathedral, with interment at Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Nickerson was born in New York State. He moved to Detroit in 1842 and to St. Louis in 1867. After being paying teller of the State Savings Association here for nine years, he was elected cashier of the St. Louis National Bank. He became president of this bank in 1896 and two years later was elected vice president and director of the National Bank of Commerce.

He is survived by his wife and two sons and two daughters. The sons are John Nickerson Jr., head of the investment firm of John Nickerson & Co., and Brian Nickerson. The daughters are Mrs. William Scott and Mrs. Lucy Wyman Nickerson.

Nickerson retired from business about 10 years ago. The family home was at 4336 McPherson avenue. He and his wife resided in New York for the past five years.

KELLOGG NOTE DESIGNED TO AID U. S. INVESTORS

Statement by Secretary on Increasing Friction Also a Warning to Three Mexican Groups.

OBSERVERS HINT AT CALLES' APPROVAL

President Now in Position to Say America Will Not Stand for Rigid Enforcement of Agrarian Laws.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Although Secretary Kellogg today refused to amplify his unexpected statement of yesterday regarding the increasing friction between this country and Mexico, officials conversant with Mexican political, economic and social conditions declared that the Secretary of State would reach three groups in Mexico and one group in the United States with his public warning.

The group in the United States is composed of capitalists like Henry Ford, who contemplated establishment or expansion of business in Mexico. The three Mexican groups are: First, the Calles Government, particularly those divisions adjudicating American claims and administering the agrarian laws; second, the labor group, headed by Secretary Morones of the Industry, Commerce and Labor Department, who is also president of the Mexican Federation of Labor, and third, the conservative group, represented by the Liga de Rancheros.

One official who has made a study of Mexican affairs declared that the State Department manifesto was in nowise unexpected, as conditions have long called for a strong stand by this Government. According to him, the glowing pre-election promises of candidates, the cupidity of the peons, and the weakness of office-holders after election are the cause of the trouble.

Obstacle to Harmony.

The tangible obstacle to harmony, said this authority, is the Mexican Constitution of 1917, promulgated under Carranza, which declared that the land and the subsoil of Mexico were the property of the descendants of the original inhabitants, and provided for agrarian commissions to allocate the land. The descendants of the original inhabitants are the Mexican peons. This clause of the Constitution was vigorously opposed by the Mexican landlords and foreign investors. Besides the Federal agrarian commissions, there are state and township commissions, and in addition to Federal agrarian laws, there are state and township laws. Enforcement of all these agrarian laws is supervised by Secretary Leon of the Agriculture Department, who is said to be as socialistically inclined as Colleagde Morones of the Labor Department. Secretary Kellogg said in his statement that a great deal of property of Americans has been taken over in violation of the agrarian laws, for which no compensation has been made.

Under the Constitution, owners of confiscated land were to be indemnified with Government notes. The Government, however, has not issued these notes, which, it is said, would be worthless if given. Officials explained that in addition to confiscating land under the laws, corrupt local commissions have sold out or have become tools of "agraristas," a loose organization of peons, strong in some localities, weak in others, who have taken the best property, exhausted it of its resources and then looked for new fields.

This is possible, Mexican authorities said, because of Socialistic state laws. Yucatan is virtually a Socialistic state, while Jalisco has Communistic land laws. Whether Secretary Kellogg's warning will affect these Govefnments is highly problematical.

Attitude of Calles.

Former President Obregon, who was elected to office by the laboring elements an dthe "Agraristas," made glowing pre-election promises. He was supported by De la Huerta and Calles, both of whom were considered radical. Last year, however, when Calles succeeded Obregon, he was markedly conservative in his inaugural address and subsequent utterances. Some observers declared that the Kellogg statement was made with the approval of Calles, who will now be able to say to his radical colleagues like Morones and Leon, "The American State Department won't stand for strict enforcement for our radical laws, and unless you become more conservative we'll get no more foreign capital and we may be overthrown."

Kills Woman and Himself.

By the Associated Press.

FORT DODGE, Ia., June 13.—Carl Litchfield, 33 years of age, shot and fatally wounded his landlady, Mrs. E. P. Elliot, and then killed himself today at the Elliot home. The woman's 13-year-old daughter witnessed the shooting. The motive is not known to police.

Hospital Given to University.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, June 13.—Coincident with the conferring of 521 degrees and prizes on the largest graduating class in the history of the University of Cincinnati today, President Frederick Charles Hicks disclosed in his address to the graduates that Cincinnati is to have a new $400,000 hospital in connection with the university. The hospital was given to the university through donations of William Cooper Procter, Mrs. Bettie Fleischmann Holmes, widow of Christian R. Holmes, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati.

ADVANCE IN FRANC, THEN A REACTION

French Exchange Rate Followed Largely by Belgian —Trading in Sterling Subject of Special Interest.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 13—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, today, says:

"Special interest was attached to the trading in sterling all through the week because of the evidence that exchange on London has been thoroughly stabilized, business being conducted within a range of from $4.86¼ to $4.85⅝ for demand. Action was taken on Wednesday by which the difference between demand and cable rates is arbitrarily fixed at ⅝ of a cent a pound. Continental rates during the week were generally ruled by the French developments. In the first few days of the week evidence of support from the banking fund made French checks rally from 4.82 to 4.95 cents, but the support was overcome in the last half of the week, when exchange on Paris was in heavy supply from several sources and it fell back, losing virtually all its previous gain.

"Belgian exchange moved in close unison with French, rallying in the first few days and then showing a substantial decline. Italian held firm all through the week, the market for lire presenting the same steadiness as it had shown when business was controlled by the Italian institute up to a short time ago. Banking circles here hold to the view that the French exchange will require support until after the July 1 maturities are arranged. Switzerland exchange showed pronounced strength, moving up 7 points to 19.41, at which it ruled at a good premium over parity. Its advance caused a discussion regarding the possibility of gold exports to Switzerland.

"Japanese exchange was extremely weak in the first four days, yen checks selling down to 40.25, a loss of near a cent, but it rallied on Thursday and showed a firmer tone near the end of the week. Chinese exchanges were influenced by the unsettled conditions in the coast cities. Bankers discontinued trading in cables on Shanghai, but sold checks at 76.00 to 76.25. Havana exchange was under pressure in the last few days, yielding from 100.04 to 99.98. Jugo-Slavia was strong, showing a gain of over 10 points at 1.76.

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, June 13.—Buyers in the steel market have continued to follow the same conservative policy being experienced in many other commodities and while sales for the past week were a trifle larger, there were no evidences of increased confidence in the future. In fact, the demand was largely of a hand to mouth character and values were unchanged to slightly easier.

The iron sales were somewhat larger but prices declined.

After easing off early in the week owing to declines abroad and fresh offerings that stocks of refined were decreasing and locally copper turned steadier on reports indications of increased buying interest both at home and abroad. It looked as if the offerings reported at the 13¾c basis had been pretty well cleaned up or withdrawn and producers generally were said to be holding firm for 13¾c at the end of the week.

Tin was easier, the decline to 55 cents bringing in more buying of prompt and future straights. Consumers generally, however, appear well supplied for the time being. Tin plate mills continue to operate at a high rate, but some lines are less active.

Lead has been quieter and prices in the outside market have receded to the basic price maintained by the leading producers. Zinc supplies appear ample.

Zinc was dull but the undertone is steady. Holders are not inclined to press sales at present levels.

The continued unsettled situation in China appears to strengthen the antimony situation and prices have been well maintained with a moderate consuming demand.

Weekly Bank Clearings.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Bank clearings in the United States for the week ending June 11, as reported by telegraph to Bradstreet's Journal, New York, aggregated $8,853,004,000, against $9,407,143,000 last week and $7,779,054,000 in this week last year.

New York Cottonseed Oil.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Cotton-seed oil closed as follows: Prime summer yellow, $10.70 to $11.25; prime crude, $9.75; $10.10 July; $10.37 August; $10.60 Dec., $10.64; Jan., $10.64; sales, 4,000.

Wall Street News and Comment —SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The stock market in today's short session displayed no signs of let-up in the buying movement. The only change was a diversion of interest into new quarters. While some of the oils were keeping on with their advance profits were being taken in others and the sellers were going into other things, notably the steels. U. S. Steel common was the big feature.

After having done nothing for the last week or more, U. S. Steel common suddenly picked up. It rose across 116 on unusually large transactions. Bethlehem Steel, Sloss Sheffield, Republic and Ludlum were drawn along.

Hudson Motors made a new high but toward the end felt the effect of profit-taking. General Motors 7 per cent preferred reached 110 for the first time.

Houston Oil was up sharply early in the day, and Independent Oil & Gas made a new high. Tide Water gained a point and Refining Oil picked up a half.

The market closed well up to the best of the day. Nearly a dozen assorted issues made new highs for the year.

The Bond Market

Bonds closed the week with prices at approximately the highest point of the present upward movement. Trading attention turned to individual issues, principally those affording high yields. Foreign bonds were conspicuously firm due to the reception of the new 7 per cent Belgium loan. Czecho-Slovak 8s were in demand above par. Jugo Slav 8s also shared in the improvement. In the South American group Argentine obligations were all strong, the new Argentine loan having been fully taken, as were the Belgian offerings.

The feature of the railway group was the Chicago, Terre Haute-Southeastern bonds above 82. No matter what the outcome of the St. Paul reorganization, the position of the Terre Haute bonds is assured.

Buying carried forward Brooklyn Manhattan 6s to a new high level.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, June 13.—The raw wool market closed the week strong with business showing the usual week-end slump. The trade was keenly interested in the report that a Boston firm bought all the wool at an auction at Kerrville, Tex., paying 41 to 45 cents a pound in the grease. At this basis this figures out to $1.18 to $1.30 at Boston, or very close to selling prices.

Among the oils Sinclair 6s and Skelly 6½s showed improvement. While Libertys maintained their position, there was a slight reaction in the Treasury issues, the 4½s and the 4s, not surprising in view of the large advances.

EUROPEAN RECONSTRUCTION BONDS ARE IN GOOD DEMAND

Special Wireless to the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, June 13.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"Fluctuations of the franc and the semi-official announcement in Paris of the definite agreement arranged with Great Britain attracted attention in Europe this week.

"London's position is now largely that of a spectator, the recent crisis of the franc having clearly demonstrated the fallacy of having a financial stake. In the meantime the view here is sympathetic toward France in her difficulties, but is felt in London that France is deceiving herself through lack of courage and through a lack of political stability.

"All history shows that all increases in currency can have but one effect, but the French logic always finds a reason why their particular act of inflation will not produce the inevitable effect. The latest example is the repayment of 200 millionfrancs in maturing bonds in currency.

"The fall of the French rentes to a point where they yield 9 per cent against the Bank of France rate for advance of 8 per cent suggests a further rise in the bank rate for advances.

"While the position of the market for new capital in Paris remains such that it is necessary to issue new securities at a continually higher interest rate, the London market is closed to any French issues in sterling. It is noticeable that the forward discount rate of the French franc has shown a decided tendency to increase despite the threat of Joseph Caillaux, Finance Minister, to speculators that this large discount suggests increasing sums of French money held abroad.

"In the meantime there is a good investment support for European reconstruction bonds, possibly due in part to increases in French capital here, although operation of sinking funds has been an important factor.

"Belief that foreign buying is largely responsible for strength in this class of securities receives confirmation in the reflect that scarcity for isolated issues, the yields run from 5 to 7 per cent.

"Dullness of the market for gilt-edged issues as a result of an overabundance of colonial financing has led underwriters, it is understood, to protest against any further issues in the immediate future, pending a postponement of certain large colonial financing operations, which has been arranged for this time.

"Our industrial position generally remains obscure, but the demand for structural steel is quite good and building activity holds up well. Nearly all of the large banks are rebuilding head offices, including the Bank of England. Other large building operations are getting under way in the city, including the vast new Lloyds Corporation premises. Railways are placing large orders for rails and rolling stock.

"Unemployment figures still continue unfavorable with nearly 1,260,000 out of work, nearly 250,000 more than a year ago.

"The Government has normised legislation on unemployment that soon will benefit the situation, and this is demonstrated by the fact that the noncontract agreement of rates in October. That is, unemployment benefits contracted for in the industrial scheme, or, in plain words, the dole will be abandoned."

BSTANTIAL UPTURN IN HOGS AND LAMBS

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.

Hogs	62,136	65,911	85,818

Horses and mules	166	180	476
Totals	107,803	105,135	129,791

Substantial advances were recorded at St. Louis National Stock Yards last week in hogs and lambs. Cattle, on the other hand, received a sharp setback under increased receipts. There was no change in calves and horses and mules. Combined receipts at 107,803 head were moderate, as cattle and calves alone amounted to 226,000 against 23,223 the previous week. Early with a few exceptions, was comparatively dull to medium. Beef steers were firm in the week's opening, but liberal receipts and at most other markets, coupled with a poor outlet for eastern beef caused a break in the market mid-week, with the result that closing prices were 25c and in a few cases 50c lower for the period. The bulk of native beef steers occupied at $8.25 to $10.50 per cwt., and offerings reached $11.25. Texas and Oklahoma grass steers, numbering approximately 30 cars, sold mainly at $5.75 to $7.50. Light yearling steers and heifers, in limited supply, declined about 25c, but the plainer end of the run, of which there was an excessive offering, depreciated 50c to $1 or more. Best steers and heifers sold at $10.75, while the plainer grades quotated down to $3. Beef cows, like the better yearlings, were slow property most of the week and sharp declines were the result. The average loss was 50c, making the bulk of sales $4.50 to $5.50. Canner and cutter cows figured at 25c lower. Outside making $3 to $4 largely and canners ranging from $2 to $2.75.

Veal bull market suffered a relapse of 50c. Good weighty beef offerings took bolognas centered around $5, while the lighter trims graduated down to $4 under and canners sold down to $3. Stocker and feeder market also suffered the effects of drouth-ken pastures and demand from the country was so small that a considerable part of the run had to sell to killers. In the main, prices were 25c lower, making the bulk of sales $6 to $7.50, with some of the steers shipped to countryward at $7.50 to $8 per cwt. Stockers closed at $2.50 to $4, heifers at $3.25 to $5.50 and bulls at $3.50 to $5.

Veal calves, in line with the general market, suffered a sharp set-back, the break in this class of cattle averaging from a $10 top at the close of the previous week, the figure fell to $8.25 last Monday.

Cattle and calves, 26,163 head, against 23,223 last week and 22,943 a year ago; hogs, 62,136, against 65,911 and 85,818; sheep, 19,338, against 15,821 and 20,554; horses and mules, 166, against 180 and 476.

Hog Receipts Smaller.

Receipts in hogs the past week ran somewhat under the previous six-day period in volume, both locally and at other markets, quality grading only fair for the most part. The number of hogs showed a material increase with the mid-week session, especially carrying a large proportion of pigs. The hot weather recently caused a decreased shipping demand, the natural movement of hogs being slow at such times, especially the case in hogs, a good supply normally coming from local killers and big packers furnishing a steady demand for the weightier offerings. Closing prices for the week show a material gain over the close of the week with the better grades of butcher hogs in most cases barely steady, while a few extra choice lots sold 10c higher at $12.25 to $12.40, with the bulk of sales 10c lower for the period. The top of the week's operations, but liberal receipts and at most other markets, coupled with a poor outlet for eastern beef caused a break in the market mid-week, with the result that closing prices were 25c and in a few cases 50c lower for the period. The bulk of native beef steers occupied at $8.25 to $10.50 per cwt., and offerings reached $11.25. Texas and Oklahoma grass steers, numbering approximately 30 cars, sold mainly at $5.75 to $7.50. Horses and Mules.

The horse and mule trade continued at a minimum the past week, arrivals amounting to only 166 head. This supply was ridiculously enough to test the demand, although the few sales made appeared steady with the previous weeks.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Fall River sales of print cloths last week reached 100,000 pieces, the largest for some time. Southern print cloth mills were not so much curtailment in production in June and July. It is said, are closely sold on the more staple goods. Demand for cotton was moderate. Yarns were quiet and irregular. Cotton fabrics continued in good call for immediate use. The printed lines leading. Fine silks ruled steady. Summer worsteds and woolens have been reduced in price for the spring of 1926. Burlaps ruled steady. Linens were in slightly better request.

Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 13—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Easily the most interesting feature of the market nowadays is the abundance of money and the ease usually available for current use more likely than not to be temporarily swelled by the forthcoming Government transactions. On the other hand, the bulls have been able again and again to force different groups into new high territory. The market has reached a point where sharp advances from present levels are not to be as easily as before, but by offering activities upon groups heretofore neglected the professionals still find life in the market. The movement in oils this week among the most significant developments of the year. The unprecedented demand for automobiles during the spring months has caused the season for gasoline consumption earlier than usual. Ordinarily we do not expect gasoline consumption to overtake production until early summer, but this year all companies may look forward to a long season of large demand for gasoline and increasing prices as the peak months of August and September approach. Meanwhile, we know that while our output of heavy oils has mounted steadily that of light or gasoline-producing oils has not increased in proportion. Doubtless stocks will soon begin to run down substantially this summer, improving the statistical position of the industry.

Belgian Issue Readily Taken.

"Significance attaches to the readiness with which our market this week took a $50,000,000 Belgian offering and with which it has responded to the listed foreign obligations. More and more as money tightens and as conditions abroad improve our investors become willing to accept the risks of foreign countries.

U. S. Steel Saturday's Leader.

"Although a goodly portion of the trading element was away from the financial district today, the stock market displayed a decidedly strong tone during the short business session. Early heaviness due to realizing in certain directions gave way to strength midway through the morning, and under the leadership of United States Steel common, and other active issues, such as Baldwin and American Can, the entire list rallied smartly during the final hour. Steel common was carried to new high levels for the recovery under a wave of buying which had the earmarks of strong accumulation for interest in close touch with the corporation's affairs. The oils came back quickly when selling pressure relaxed, and motors participated actively in the final upturn. The most striking advances, of course, again were found in the specialties. Strength in General Railway Signal turned attention sharply to Westinghouse Air Brake, which developed unusual activity with a consequent sharp upturn. Rails were more or less neglected though generally firm.

Some Profit-Taking.

"Profit-taking in some of the recent leaders such as the oils was in evidence on a moderate scale during the first hour, but that character of selling did not exert a disturbing influence on the general list. Apparently many traders were inclined to withdraw from the market for the time being until the effect of Monday's Treasury fiscal operations on the money market is noted. It is unlikely, however, that credit accommodations will be unsettled by reason of Government withdrawals. On the contrary, there will probably be a temporary plethora of funds, if precedent is maintained. Realizing sales were easily absorbed and the process of bidding up certain specialties was resumed. General Railway Signal, which has been a most spectacular performer since its listing, staged another sensational upturn. Motor shares advanced vigorously under the leadership of Mack Trucks and the food stocks were strong.

New York Bank Statement.

"The actual statement of New York Clearing House member banks showed surplus reserve of $41,764,380, an increase of $8,717,670 compared with a week ago. Loans and discounts stood $32,194,000 above a week ago and net demand deposits were up $30,838,000. Reserve of member institutions with the Federal Reserve Bank was increased $12,121,000."

Exchanges Are Quiet.

"Aside from the further recovery in Japanese yen, which advanced to 40.87 compared with the previous closing of 40.57 cents and a low of about 40 cents early in the week, there was nothing of interest in the foreign exchanges. Demand sterling, French francs and other European currencies barely moved.

Other Markets Featureless.

"Similar conditions prevailed in the commodity markets and in the foreign exchanges. Grains fluctuated aimlessly within a fractional area. Further pressure against wheat at Winnipeg where the July option lost more than a cent a bushel, did not influence the domestic market to any extent. Chicago trading was made up largely of professional adjustment against the week-end closing.

"Some buying by the trade, together with moderate covering by speculators sufficient to offset the scattered selling which appeared in cotton at the call. After receding slightly in early dealings, the active months developed a much firmer tone.

ASKS THAT POLICE CHECK SALACIOUS MAGAZINE SALES

Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer Suggests Patrolmen Watch Literature Offered in Places on Beats.

A suggestion that all policemen patrolling beats in St. Louis inspect magazines offered for sale at stores in their respective territories, and that store proprietors be warned against selling salacious literature, was made by Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer yesterday in a letter to Chief of Police Gerk.

In his letter to Chief Gerk the Prosecuting Attorney offered the co-operation of his office in ridding the city of salacious magazines, declaring that an immoral influence is being exerted among young people, particularly high school students, through the reading of suggestive publications. The letter, in part, follows:

"It has been brought to my attention that in high schools and other places in this city magazines of a salacious character have gotten into the hands of young people and are undoubtedly working an immoral influence. To prosecute the distributer and allow the seller to continue operations would be a farce. I believe such procedure would only serve to advertise the magazines in question. It is my suggestion that pressure be brought to bear through the Police Department on every magazine seller in St. Louis, and that the proprietors of stores offering magazines and books for sale be warned that the selling of salacious literature is a violation of sections 3518 and 2623 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, punishable by a maximum sentence of one year in the workhouse and a fine of $1000, or both."

Prosecutor Schweitzer requests that all store proprietors and clerks failing to heed the police warning be arrested and that warrants be applied for at his office.

The campaign to rid the city of salacious magazines was launched last month by the Department of Protection and Delinquency of the Board of Religious Organizations. Petitions asking that existing laws be enforced to forbid the sale of this literature are being circulated among organizations of the Jewish and Protestant faiths in an effort to obtain 100,000 signers.

In his letter to Chief Gerk the Prosecuting Attorney names 12 publications, copies of which were supplied him by investigators for the Board of Religious Organizations, as examples of the magazines against which the campaign is directed. Several are reputed translations of French publications of known salacious character.

Girls! No More Pale, Sickly Complexions

Get Back Your Rosy Cheeks With This Red-Blood Food

Doctors say that the real reason why thousands of girls are pale and sickly looking, with sallow complexions, scrawny figures and tired, unattractive appearance is simply lack of nutritious iron in the blood. By merely putting more iron into their blood these pale girls can quickly have the clear smooth skin, radiant cheeks and sparkling eyes that make healthy girls so attractive.

But be sure that the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not the old inorganic iron that often injures the teeth and upsets the stomach. Nuxated Iron contains iron, like the iron in your own blood. Within just 2 weeks and notice the color come to your cheeks and lips, and the sparkle in your eyes. Money back if not satisfied. At all good druggists.

VICTOR WINS REMARKABLE APPROACH SH

Takes Only One Putt Held Outdrives Op Hole but Loses A proach Shots.

By J. Ro

Jimmie Manion, steel-nerved champion of the St. Louis District yesterday afternoon and in gaining the gonquin the worst beating of his 9 up and 8 to play and even that curately the degree to which Ma

Held never was up. After the second hole he never was even. H went to lunch six down and won only two holes during the match the ninth in the morning and the seventh after lunch.

Remarkable accuracy in pitching for the greens and in chipping approach shots to the pin won fo Manion. Held outdrove him o almost every hole. In the morning, on the twelfth hole, Manion had the better drive by 15 yards. That was the only time during the first 18 holes that the defending champion did not have an advantage of from 10 to 60 yards after the tee shots.

Held Always First to Putt.

But the distance from the tee did nothing for Held. Time and again he appeared to have an advantage. He would have a short chip or pitch for the green while Manion was so far away that he had to take a full iron shot. But after the second shots had been made, Held would be putting. He would be away.

Manion's short game was uncanny. In the morning round he chipped to the pin so accurately that on six of the 18 greens he needed only one putt. On only one green during the morning did Jim take as many as three putts and that was on the 17th, an expensive green which Jim barely reached with his tee shot. In the afternoon Manion was just as deadly with his chip shots and on five of the ten greens after lunch Manion took only one putt.

Held did not play with his usual brilliance. His putting went to pieces first. Then he began to be short with his approaches and before the match ended, Eddie's game was a ragged thing. His drives were hooking into the rough and his iron shots were finding traps. His putting became steadier in the afternoon, but it was too late then.

Manion Takes Early Lead.

Manion took the lead at the second hole after the first had been halved in par four. Held hooked his tee shot to the left of the green while Manion's pitch gave him an easy three. On the third hole, 360 had good drives, and when Held's second landed on the green and Manion's found a trap, it appeared that the match was to be squared. But Manion doesn't mind traps any trouble. He chipped neatly over the bank to the green and ran down a ten-foot putt for his par. Held's approach putt overran the cup and when he missed the return ing three-footer, Manion won two up.

The fourth and fifth holes were halved and then came an error by Held that increased Manion's lead. Held had the better drive by 15 yards, but both were on in two. Manion's long putt hung on the rim of the cup. Held was not stymied but he played a bit too cautious. His first putt left him 2½ feet from the cup. He again putted gently. The ball rolled up to Manion, rested against it and stopped. Manion thus became three up.

Seven and eight then were halved, after which Held won the first hole. Manion dubbed his tee shot, slicing to the right where a tree trunk saved him from out of bounds. He topped this second shot but was still away. He was short on the green with three, but pitched on in four. Held's second was pulled to the left of the green, but he pitched on in three. Manion barely missed a long putt for a five and Held, down in two putts, took the hole, making the turn to be down.

Held Out of Bounds Twice.

After the tenth had been halved in four, Held shot two balls out of bounds on the 210-yard eleventh

VICTOR WINS BECAUSE OF REMARKABLE ACCURACY OF APPROACH SHOTS AND PUTTS

Takes Only One Putt on Each of 11 Greens — Held Outdrives Opponent on Almost Every Hole but Loses Advantage on Iron Approach Shots.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Jimmie Manion, steel-nerved little golf machine, won the championship of the St. Louis District Golf Association at North Hills yesterday afternoon and in gaining the honor he gave Eddie Held of Algonquin the worst beating of his tournament career. The score was 9 up and 8 to play and even that lop-sided result does not reflect accurately the degree to which Manion dominated.

Held never was up. After the second hole he never was even. He went to lunch six down and won only two holes during the match, the ninth in the morning and the seventh after lunch.

Remarkable accuracy in pitching for the greens and in chipping approach shots to the pin won for Manion. Held outdrove him on almost every hole. Manion's long putt hung on the lip of the cup. Held was not stymied, but he played a bit too cautiously. His first putt left him 2½ feet from the cup. He again putted gently. JIMMY MANION: District Title Winner for the Second Time

American Flag Wins $50,000 Belmont Stakes

Man O'War's Son Wins in Record Time by Eight Lengths.

By G. T. F. RYALL,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Breezing from the three-sixteenths pole to the stand, almost as easily as his great sire did five years ago, American Flag, Man o' War's best son so far, won the fifty-seventh running of the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park this afternoon.

Eight lengths behind him and driving under the whip, Dangerous, which Clifford A. Cochran hoped would add this race to the Preakness and Kentucky Derby to the stables' winnings beat Swope four lengths for the place while By Himself of which so much had been expected was fourth only because the other three starters were dead on their feet.

In addition to winning, American Flag equaled the record for the mile and three furlongs, 2:16 4-5, set by Gray Lag, when he won the classic in 1921.

The Belmont, which had a guaranteed value of $50,000, was worth $38,000 to the winner and this purse with the $13,000 won in the Withers, puts the son of Man o' War and Lady Comfy well up on the winning list.

American Flag Misbehaves.

Six runners went to the post for the Belmonth. American Flag was rather on his bad behavior at the post and delayed the start several minutes. When the break came, Sande on Prince of Bourbon shot shot his mount right to the front. Pack Bone, which made the running in the Preakness, went with him, while Swope was up there too, rounding the first turn.

Albert Johnson on American Flag dropped back to fourth place until they passed the mile pole and by this time Prince of Bourbon had carried Backbone and Swope along so fast that they dropped back. The Prince continued in front by open daylight in the rundown the back stretch till they approached the far turn. Here Johnson let out a wrap on American Flag and he moved up and ran lapped on the Son of Prince Palatine. Sande used all his cunning but his mount was through, three furlongs from home. From there American Flag just breezed in the rest driving behind him.

Then, as is the custom, instituted this spring, Samuel D. Riddle led in the winner and the crowd cheered.

How fast the race was run may be judged by the fractional time by quarters, which follow: :24, :47, 1:12, 1:37 2-5, 2:03, 2:16 4-5.

It was a great day for Sam Riddle and Gwyn Tompkins, his trainer for they won the Keene Memorial with Friar's Carse and then finished second, with Dress Parade, another son of Man O'War, beaten a head but beating one of John Madden's "good things," Flat Iron.

It takes quite a 2-year-old filly to give 10 pounds to colts and beat them in a gallop, but that is what Friar's Carse did in the thirteenth running of the Keene Memorial Stakes at five furlongs, that was second in interest on the card. The daughter of Friar Rock-Problem, which is bigger than most colts of her age, picked up 122 pounds and going to the front in the first furlong was just breezing at the end to win by four lengths from Pun-

RAIN STORM STOPS DODGERS AND REDS AFTER THREE INNINGS

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 13.—A heavy downpour of rain caused a postponement of the Brooklyn-Cincinnati game here today after three innings had been played. The score at the time was 1 to 0 in favor of Brooklyn. It was the first day or Zack Wheat's reign as active manager of the Brooklyn team. The game will be played off Aug. 10.

Hill and Jarrett, both Roosevelt High School athletes, tied for individual high point honors with 15. Graham, a star runner of Cleveland High, scored 13 points, while Readmon of Roosevelt, accounted for 12 of the winning church's points, with two firsts and two thirds.

JOHNSTON WINS AMATEUR TITLE OF MINNESOTA FOR FIFTH SUCCESSIVE YEAR

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 13.—Harrison (Jimmy) Johnston of St. Paul won the Minnesota State amateur golf championship for the fifth consecutive year this afternoon when he defeated 17-year-old Lester Dolstad of Columbia Golf Club, Minneapolis, 9 and 8, in the 36-hole finals of the State tournament. Johnston is a member of the White Bear Golf Club.

FLACK'S SINGLE IN TENTH BREAKS TIE; JACK SMITH STARS, MAKING FIVE HITS

Hornsby Poles 17th Home Run With Two On in First Inning and Bottomley Follows Him With Four-Bagger — Seven Pitchers Used in Hectic Game.

By Herman Wecke

The Cardinals gained their objective yesterday—fifth place in the National League pennant race—but they were forced to go ten innings before the Phillies of Philadelphia relinquished their hold on the position. The score was 10 to 9 and it was a single by Max Flack, the veteran right fielder, which scored Jack Smith with the deciding tally.

It was a great week for the Cardinals. The team jumped from eighth to the top of the second division in the space of seven days. It is the most rapid climb shown by any team in the Heydler circuit in recent weeks. It also marked the second successive seven days under the management of Rogers Hornsby. The teams figure was 5—2 and made the record under the new leader, 10 victories against four defeats, for a winning percentage of .714.

During the week, the men of Hornsby first hopped out of the cellar to seventh position. The next day a victory enabled them to climb another notch. There they stayed until the conquest in the second clash of the series with the horde by Art Fletcher. And the conquest was needed badly. A defeat would have dropped the Cardinals back to seventh position. The Cubs won and would have passed the St. Louis team.

Since May 31, Hornsby's first day as manager of the club, the team has gained 100 percentage points, jumping its figure from .342 to .442.

A Wild Contest.

The game that landed the men of Hornsby at the top of the second division was a wild affair. It was a clash in which the sluggers had all the better of the pitchers. There were a total of 31 safeties and of this number, an even dozen were good for extra bases. Of the swats good for more than one base, the Cardinals had six and the Phillies a like number.

The Cardinals went out and won after the Phillies had knotted the score by pounding out three clean raps against Johnny Stuart in the ninth. In the tenth, with one out, Jack Smith singled for his fifth hit of the contest. Then Manager Hornsby struck out. After Smith stole, Bottomley was purposely passed. O'Farrell was safe on a low throw by Huber. Flack then cut down the third base line and the contest was over.

Hornsby was forced to employ four pitchers—Dickerman, Day, Stuart and Dyer. The lefthander was credited with the victory. Fletcher used Knight, Ulrich and Decatur.

Knight's Hardest Day.

Knight stayed on the hill only long enough to pitch six balls. But on those half dozen efforts, the Cardinals scored four runs. Blades, with a one-one count, singled. Smith singled on the first ball. Hornsby connected for a home-run on Knight's next pitch. It was the Cardinal manager's 17th four-bagger of the campaign. Bottomley continued the assault by pounding the next pitched effort into the right center bleachers. Here Fletcher waved Knight to the bench and Ulrich was the Phil hurler. O'Farrell singled, but the next three batters went out.

More long distance shelling came in the second, but this time from the enemy camp. It was a drive

7500 Saw Cardinals Advance

A good crowd, estimated at 7500, saw the men of Hornsby climb to the top of the second division.

Jack Smith, Cardinal center fielder, starred. He had five hits out of six tries, and only a great stop by Fonseca robbed him of another. He stole two bases and tallied the winning run. In the field he made several nice catches.

When the locals counted four runs on the six pitched efforts from Jack Knight it constituted something of a record. It has never been seen here in quite a day.

Hornsby went behind second for a brilliant stop of Ulrich's bound-er in the second and tossed perfectly to Bottomley for the out.

George Burns was not good enough for the Reds. But he made a catch off Blades that took two runs away from the Cardinals by running to deep left center for a glove hand capture of a line drive.

There were four double plays for the Cardinals, and George Toporcer was mixed up in each one. His catch of Henline's liner in the ninth was a brilliant piece of work.

Until the Phillies tied the score in the ninth, Stuart had gone four innings without a safety.

SIX RECORDS BROKEN IN NATIONAL COLLEGIATE MEET

Hubbard Sets World Mark in Broad Jump; Wins Century Dash

Hartranft Heaves 16-Pound Shot 50 Feet; Discus, 880 and Mile Run Records Are Established.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Competing under the colors of the University of Michigan for the last time, DeHart Hubbard, the Wolverine's sensational negro athlete, today achieved the ambition of his athletic career when he smashed the world's record for the running broad jump, setting a mark of 25 feet 10⅞ inches, a record that experts say may stand for all time.

The marvelous leap was the outstanding performance of the national collegiate track and field championship meet, which drew the flower of America's intercollegiate stars into competition on Stagg Field to decide the individual championships of the 1925 season. The meet, with an entry of more than 400 athletes from 62 universities and colleges from coast to coast, reveled in avalanche of record-breaking performances, including a world's record, a national intercollegiate mark and six records for the meet.

Beats Legendre's Mark.

Hubbard achieved his record-breaking leap on his last jump, as he had reached the end of his trials. Pulling off his sweater, the 21-year-old negro flash swiftly got away to a perfect start, cleared the takeoff with perfect form and sent his body hurdling through space, kicking his legs in scissors fashion just before his feet hit the earth.

The jump beat the record of 25 feet 6 3-16 inches by 4 and 11-16 inches, established by R. L. Legendre of Georgetown University in the Olympic games in Paris last season. It was the tenth time that Hubbard had cleared the 25-foot mark, a performance heretofore achieved only twice by two other athletes—Ned Gourdin of Harvard and Legendre.

Before making his record-breaking jump Hubbard established himself as the leading collegiate sprinter in America by winning the 100-yard dash from a sparkling field in :09 8-10. Hubbard, winner of the century in the Penn relays at the Western Conference meet, beat Sweet of the University of Montana to the tape by nearly four yards, after getting away to a bad start. The negro's performance bettered the record for the meet by one-tenth of a second.

The other records to fall were in the shotput, which broke all existing American intercollegiate marks, the mile run, half mile and discus throw. Glenn Hartranft, champion of the Leland Stanford University team, won the shotput with a record-smashing score of 50 feet. This performance broke the best previous intercollegiate mark of 49 feet 11¼ inches hung up by C. L. Houser of the University of Southern California in 1924. The national collegiate meet record was 46 feet 8 inches, established by Norman Anderson of Southern California in 1923.

Three Missourians Place.

Three University of Missouri athletes, Doss Richardson, K. R. Lancaster and T. J. Bransford, took a share of the honors in the finals.

Lancaster was Missouri's individual star. He won sixth place in the broad jump, a good record in the face of today's remarkable jumping. Lancaster then proceeded to tie for first place in the pole vault, at 12 feet 4 inches. Five were tied for first in the pole, Lancaster, Missouri; Northrup, Michigan; McKown, Kansas State Teachers; Bouscher, Northwestern, and Potts,' Oklahoma.

T. J. Bransford made a leap of 6 feet 2 inches, to tie for first in the running high jump with Hampton of California, and Russell of Chicago. Bransford just knocked the bar off at 6 feet 4 inches.

Doss Richerson placed in two events, garnering a fourth in the shot-put, and a fourth in the discus. Records were set in both events.

Reese of the University of Texas captured the mile run in the record-breaking time of 4:18 4-5, lowering the former record of 4:20 2-5 made by M. L. Shields of Penn State in 1922. The lanky Texan sprinted to victory in the last 100 yards of the race, breaking the tape three yards ahead of Carter of Occidental College of Los Angeles. Hornstein of Ohio State set the pace for the first half-mile when Little, of Purdue, passed him and led for part of the third lap. Jimmy Cusack of the University of Chicago, winner of the mile in the "Big Ten" championship meet at Columbus a week ago, then took the lead, only to be passed by Reese on the back stretch.

Stanford Unofficial Victor.

Today's meet, the climax of the intercollegiate outdoor season, was staged to determine the national individual championship in each event, with no effort made to determine the relative team strength of the contesting teams, with the result that points were not counted. The point system was discontinued two years ago. If points counted today, however, Leland-Stanford would have been declared winner with approximately 31 points with Michigan second with 26.

jab with Fiddlesticks, which chased her to the eighth pole, third and the other eight starters strung out down the course.

Friar's Curse Is Fast.

Fiddlesticks outbroke his company and showed a high turn of early speed but the filly just went to him in the first eighth of a mile and the race was over so far as first money was concerned right there. She stepped the first quarter in :22 3-5, the half in :46 2-5, five furlongs in :58 3-5 (this race is round the turn), and the full distance in 1:05 2-5. The race was worth $67,700 to the winner.

Only three horses finished in the Steeplechase, which was won by the Greentree Stable's Al Fresco, but the crowd had an additional thrill for the rider on Houyhnhnm, the favorite, which finished second, lodged a claim of foul and the stewards deliberated for about 10 minutes before they disallowed the protest.

Clever riding by Earl Sande won the Rocksand Handicap, at seven furlongs for Shuffle Along. This race preceded the Belmont Stakes and furnished plenty of thrills for the crowd. Lucky Play, with C. Kummer up, made the early running, with Shuffle Along half a length back. Sande took back just at the right time and let Gibbons, which slipped upon the rail, carry Lucky Play along. Then, when he was straightened out in the stretch, he set Shuffle Along down and the colt went to the front to win going away.

Manion Beats Held 9 Up and 8, in Title Final and conceded the hole when Manion's tee shot left him a putt for a two and a sure three.

On No. 12 Manion had the better drive by about 15 yards and his second, a run-up shot, rolled three feet past the pin. Held was short with his approach and took four, Manion sinking his three for a birdie and going four up.

After halving No. 14, both hit tremendous drives on the 495-yard fifteenth hole. Manion left an opening when his second failed to reach the green, but Held was beginning to falter. He looked up on his iron second or did something wrong. At any rate, the ball popped into the air and carried only 50 yards or so. Manion chipped his third to within three feet of the cup and when Held missed a long putt, Manion became five up.

Manion made a great shot to halve the sixteenth hole. Held had the better drive by 35 yards and was on the green in two. Manion was short with his second and had to pitch over a hill to the elevated green. The chip was perfect. The ball rolled up to the cup, hit the far side and bounced back, resting six inches from the hole. Whereas it had seemed that Held had the hole won, he had to play it carefully to get a half. Unnerved perhaps by the bad breaks, Held missed a three-foot putt on the seventeenth for a win.

On No. 18 Held hooked badly and his ball lodged against a tennis court screen. He had to drop the ball and take a penalty of one stroke and it cost him the hole, Manion going down in five and going to lunch six up.

The Afternoon Round.

Held started bravely in the afternoon. He outdrove Manion by 30 yards on the first hole and was on the green nicely in two, while Manion was short. Jimmie, however, nearly sank his approach shot, the ball stopping six inches from the cup. Manion increased his lead to seven up on the second hole, going down in par three, while Held, in a trap with his tee shot, missed a seven-foot putt for a par.

Both made birdie fours on the 455-yard fourth hole. Held was in the rough on his tee shot, but pitched to the green. Manion's second hit a spectator and bounded into a bunker, but he made a fine recovery and ran down a long putt.

Held sliced his drive on the fifth hole. He was half stymied by a sapling and his second was wide of the green. His third was on, but he missed a long putt and went eight down. No. 6 was halved and then Held won his second hole, the last one he was to win during the match. Manion hooked his iron second into the gallery on the 405-yard seventh, while Held was on the green in two. Manion missed a four-foot putt for a four and Held won the hole. It was Manion's only poor putt of the match.

Jimmy came back with a brilliant tee shot on the 185-yard eighth hole, his ball stopping 20 feet from the pin. Held hooked his first into a trap and his second overran the green, his four to Manion's three putting him eight down with ten to play.

Nine Down and Nine to Go.

Both were short with their second shots to the ninth hole, but Manion's better approach and his excellent putt gave him a four, whereas Held, on in three, took two putts and was nine down with nine to play.

Both tee shots to No. 10 reached the green and each took two putts, the halved hole giving Manion the match and the title.

A gallery of more than 1000 followed Held and Manion during the afternoon round.

A special prize was put up to induce Held and Manion to complete the round, to give the gallery something for the long ride to the North Hills course.

Manion's Card Is 69.

Manion continued his brilliant shooting and finished the second nine holes of the east course in 34, giving him a medal score of 69 for the afternoon round. Held took 37 for the nine, giving him a total of 75.

It was Manion's second victory in a district tournament. He won the title in 1923 and lost it to Held at Sunset last year.

Results in other classes follow:

CHAMPIONSHIP CONSOLATION—Frank Watts, Country Club, defeated Everett Brooks, Glen Echo, one up, 36 holes.

CLASS A—J. W. Irwin, Forest Park, won by default from S. B. Wagoner, Kirkwood.

CLASS B—H. K. Chappell, Forest Park, defeated L. L. Scott, Algonquin, 6 and 5.

CARDINALS TAKE FIFTH PLACE FROM PHILS, WINNING, 10-9

into the left field seats off the bat of Catcher Henline.

Infield hits by O'Farrell and Flack and Toporcer's swat added another to the Cardinal total in the third. There would have been more tallies, but with men on second and third, Burns made a great running glove-hand catch of Blades' liner to center.

Dickerman Batted Out.

Dickerman was driven from the pitching peak in the fourth. Harper and Henline singled and Harper counted on Wrightstone's long fly to Smith. Smith then misjudged Huber's liner and it went for a triple.

Here Day replaced Dickerman. Fonseca singled Huber over with the third run of the round, but Ulrich ended it by clubbing into a double play.

Hornsby's men came back with three. Smith doubled and Hornsby walked. The pair pulled a double steal and Smith scored on a passed ball. Then O'Farrell walked and Flack tripled. Decatur replaced Ulrich and the rally ended.

Score Twice Tied.

There was more heavy firing in the enemy fifth. Burns singled and Hawks walked. Williams tripled and Harper belted out a sacrifice fly. Henline walked and scored on Wrightstone's double. Here Stuart went to the hill. Huber filed to Smith and Wrightstone was doubled trying for third. This rally by the Phils knotted the score at eight all. A pass to Blades, Smith's single, his fourth straight hit and Hornsby's sacrifice fly put the Cardinals ahead in their portion.

With one out in the Phillie ninth, Hawks and Williams singled and Hawks scored on Harper's double. Then Henline lined to Toporcer, who ran to third to double Williams off the bag.

For the third game of the series today, Allan Sothoron and Hal Carlson are the probable pitchers.

In the Realm Of Bird Dogs

Indications Point to Unusually Good Season for Trials in Canada.

By A. F. Hochwalt,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JOHN WILLIARD MARTIN, who trains dogs at Three Notch, Ala., and who is developing the great field trial setter Shore's Ben, owned by Dr. A. F. Stone of Bay City, Mich., and the great pointer, Doughboy, owned by E. J. Rowe, of Birmingham, Ala., will make the field trial circuit again this season.

Last year Martin attended but few trials after he returned from the prairie circuit in Canada and the report got around that he had decided to retire. Martin, however, recently stated he had no notion of quitting the field trial game and that he was gathering up his string of pointers and setters for his annual trip to the prairies. He plans to leave his southern home late in June. Martin's summer training quarters are near Melita, Manitoba, close to the Saskatchewan border.

Good Season for Birds.

EARLY reports from Canada, bring the assurance that conditions are likely to be far better than they were last year. The statement that conditions are excellent does not come only from the local people, however, but from officers of the Manitoba Club. Last year the supply of young birds was small. The insects off which the chickens feed were late in appearing and many young birds starved to death. The old birds weathered the conditions very well and there were plenty of them left over.

This year the season seems to be at least two weeks in advance and chickens are already nesting in great numbers all over those vast prairies of that part of Canada. Secretary Walsh of the Manitoba Club has been making a survey of the country and his report is particularly encouraging, and from the present outlook, there will be more prairie chickens in Manitoba and Saskatchewan this year than ever.

Trials on Two Grounds.

WORD comes from Senator Thomas B. King of Bronsville, Tenn., who is secretary of the All-American Club, that his organization would very likely run over the grounds that were used two years ago, instead of utilizing the same country that the Manitoba Club occupies. The old grounds, as they are called, are just across the border of North Dakota within easy driving distance of Antler. It was at Antler, N. D., that the All-American Club made its headquarters for three or four years, but last season Gainsborough, Saskatchewan, was the selection. This did not work out so well, however, for with two large trials—the Manitoba and the All-American—running over the same grounds, the birds became too wild for the best results. The decision of the All-America Club to run over the old grounds seems to be meeting with general favor.

Among the trains traveling Northward early are R. K. Armstrong, Ed. Farrior, J. W. Martin, Cresley Harris and John Campbell, all from Alabama. From present indications there will be a larger representation of handlers on the prairies this year than ever before.

Indiana Gains Its First Big 10 Baseball Title

Two Defeats of Ohio State by Michigan Give Hoosiers Honors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 13.—For the first time in the history of Big Ten Conference baseball, Indiana captured the championship. Indiana achieved the title by winning its final game over Purdue, aided by Michigan. The Wolverines handed Ohio State, leaders in the race throughout the season, two defeats the past two days. Chicago jumped into second place, Ohio State finishing third and Michigan fourth.

The title is the second major honor annexed by Indiana since the Big Ten was founded, the Hoosiers winning the basketball title a decade ago.

The first game between Michigan and Ohio State ended 4 to 2, with Michigan on the long end. The second contest, the final of the season in the conference, resulted in a 6-to-5 victory for the Ann Arbor team.

Beat Purdue Three Times.

To win the championship, Indiana defeated Chicago and Northwestern in two games, won over Purdue in three games, and Iowa and Minnesota in one game each, and dropped one game to both Minnesota and Ohio State.

It was the first time in 10 years that Michigan and Illinois did not share in the title. Last season Michigan tied with Ohio State, the year before Michigan held it, while in 1921 and 1922 Illinois held the championship. In the four years prior to 1921 Michigan grabbed the honors. Carl Lundgren, former Chicago Cub star twirler, was coach at Michigan from 1917 to 1920, inclusive, when the Wolverines won four straight, and then he went to Illinois, where his teams won the next two years, giving him the distinction of having won six championships in as many years.

WASHINGTON CLUB IS FINED $500 BY THE DIRECTORS OF A. L.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Because of the failure of the Chicago White Sox to take the field in Washington last Tuesday to play off a game postponed from the day before, the board of directors of the American League, meeting at the Hotel Belmont today, decided that the game could not be forfeited and instead fined the Senators $500.

It was explained that the board could not consider the forfeiture of the game because the Chicago club had not appeared ready to play. However, it was found that the constitution had been violated by the Washington club in its refusal to play the postponed game on the following day and on that basis the fine was levied. The constitution provides for the playing of a postponed game on the next open date.

Meusel's Homer Wins for Yankees

Waite Hoyt Scores His First Victory of Season—Score 7—4.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, June 13.—Waite Hoyt turned in his first winning game of the year today and the Yankees evened up the series with the Cleveland Indians by a score of 7 to 4.
Uhle and Hoyt staged quite a struggle till the last half of the seventh inning, when with two men on the bases due to a base on balls and an error, Bob Meusel hit his sixteenth home run of the year into the left stands. That accounted for three runs and although the Indians tried hard to stage rallies in the eighth and ninth Hoyt was just a trifle too strong for them.
McNulty made a homer in the eighth and Uhle a triple in the ninth, but one run in each spasm was all the Indians could get.
The attendance was 20,000.

Pitcher "Most Valuable"---Vance

Hurler Rated as 60 Per Cent of a Team

National League's "Best Player" Choice, Ineligible for Trophy Again Declares Moundman Means as Much as Any Other Player.

By Dent McSkimming.

The showing this season of Arthur "Dazzy" Vance, the Brooklyn Dodgers' star pitcher and the National League's "most valuable player" in 1924, seems at first glance to add weight to the theory expounded in some quarters that when a player award is made, pitchers should be given a separate classification.
Vance has had trouble winning games this season whereas Rogers Hornsby, the man who finished second in the vote of the Player Award Committee, has maintained his wonderful pace of last season and has actually become more valuable to his club.
In their first meeting this season, Hornsby came off with all the honors, hitting Vance for a single and a double, coaxing a walk, scoring two runs, driving in one more and scoring three himself. Vance was hit hard and retired from the box after six innings.
Vance, himself, has very definite and, perhaps, novel convictions concerning the relative value of pitchers and other players.

Vance on Hurler's Value.

BEFORE entering the game in which he was returned the loser, he was coaxed into a discussion of the question.
"Well, without wishing to make a personal issue of the question, I must say that I believe pitchers should be placed upon the same plane as infielders, outfielders and catchers," said Vance.
"I believe in one prize.
"It is true that a pitcher gets into only one game in four but when he is in there he dominates the game to such an extent that he is said to represent at least 60 per cent of the team's strength McGraw, Connie Mack and other veteran managers have been quoted as saying a pitcher represents 60 per cent of the team's strength.
"Well, divide that 60 per cent over four games and you will find that each pitcher represents 15 per cent of the club's strength. That makes the remainder of the team worth 85 per cent. There are eight other players on the field and one-eighth of 85 per cent is 10⅝ per cent.
"Thus, at a conservative estimate, a pitcher is 60 per cent of the team when he's pitching or 15 per cent of the club every day, as compared with 10⅝ per cent for any other player.
"I have been in games where our shortstop handled the ball only three times in the entire game. And the pitcher actually directs the course of the game on almost every play. He pitches an average of 110 times in the game and when the score is close he is personally responsible for the winning or losing of the game on almost each one of those 110 pitches."

The Market Value.

"BUT, 'Dazzy,' doesn't the question come down to the market value of a pitcher as compared with the market price of an infield or outfield star?" Vance was asked.
"I have heard that question before and I have always answered it this way," said Vance. "When an owner buys an infield star—a Hornsby, we'll say—he is thinking not alone of this man's value to the club today or this season but his value over a period of five years.
"Now, if he is buying a pitcher—a Vance, we may say—he knows that he is buying a very delicate piece of bric-a-brac. He considers the pitcher's value to the club only for one or two years, knowing that the average life of a pitcher as a league leader is comparatively short.
"Purchase price and 'most valuable player to his club' are not analogous," he added.
"Tell me now," continued 'Dazzy,' "do you think the owner of a ball club would prefer to have on his roster three star pitchers and a mediocre team or would he choose three star fielders and mediocre pitchers. Ask the managers and find out," he added with a convincing nod of his head.

Individual Record.

"ALSO tell me, did the Cardinals last year win as many as 22 games solely because of Hornsby's presence in the batting order? The records show that I won 28 and lost 6. That was 22 games I won above the number lost. Without me in there, Brooklyn would have won some of those games, but not nearly 22 of them. Would the Cardinals have lost 22 more games than they actualy did lose last season if they had had an ordinary man in Hornsby's place.
"It is extremely difficult to measure the relative merits of pitchers and infielders since you have no common standard on which to work, but I sincerely believe that in justice to the pitchers there should be only one award for all players and not one for pitchers and another for 'other players.'"
Vance's discussion of the question was entirely without any apparent desire to force himself into the foreground of the picture. He was arguing the case for pitchers as a whole for he understood that he was not eligible for another National League award because of a rule which prohibits the committee from honoring any player more than once.
Last season Vance won 28 games and lost only 6, although he was pitching for an ordinary club. He had a total of 262 strikeouts for the season.
Hornsby, playing with an admittedly weak team, set a modern batting record with an average of .424.
This season, Vance has won 6 games and lost 5. His strike-out performance has been almost as wonderful as last season for he has fanned 79 batters in 91 2-3 innings. However, his control has not been as good as in 1924. He has walked 24 batters in the equivalent of 10 full games.

Why Arthur Vance Is Called "Dazzy"

"WHEN I was a schoolboy, out in Hastings, Neb.," related Vance, "there lived on the outskirts of the town a very picturesque ex-cowboy.
"He had guns and saddles and chaps and lariats and everything a boy likes to play with, and when I visited him he would show me the treasures and would say ain't that a 'dazzy'? There's a 'dazzy.' That saddle's a 'dazzy,' ain't it?
"I picked up the expression from him and everything for a while was a 'dazzy' to me. The boys grabbed it and gave me the nickname 'Dazzy' and I've been 'Dazzy' ever since."
Most baseball fans are under the impression that Vance got his nickname from pitching a dazzling fast ball."

Flinger Who Last Year Led List With 28 Victories and Six Defeats, Is Having Trouble This Year Keeping Up His 1924 Pace.

Wills Assails Moguls

Charges Persecution by Referee

Negro Challenger Tells of Obstacles Put in Way of His Getting Bout for Heavyweight Championship.

His troubles with boxing officials and referees are the subject of Harry Wills in this installment of his life story as told through a representative of the Post-Dispatch.

Every one who has followed my ring career knows of the many obstacles that have been put in my way to prevent me from meeting Jack Dempsey in a battle for the heavyweight championship.
The New York State Athletic Commission heads the list of those who seek to prevent such a meeting. When a body of such prominence uses roundabout methods to that end it is hardly to be wondered at that many referees believe they are merely following a good example when they go out of their way to discredit me.
Because of the opposition to the Dempsey match in some quarters I have to watch my step continually. My opponents and what they will do never cause me one-half as much worry as the referees and what he will do. I know the most of them are looking for just half an excuse to disqualify me.

Controversy With Referee.

As careful as I have been I have not been able to escape trouble on several occasions. What happened up in Buffalo when I boxed Bill Tate there is a good example of what I have to contend with.
Tate was a sparring partner of Jack Dempsey and was managed then by Jack Kearns, manager of the champion. Before I got my hands up Dick Nugent, the referee, who was a friend of Kearns, began riding me.
Nugent aroused my suspicions by making a long speech in which he said that at the first sign of a fake he would throw me out of the ring.

Harry Scores Official.

The truth of the matter was that Tate and I did not get along well together. We never did have any use for each other. Tate was a member of the Dempsey camp and he had been boasting all around the country that he could whip me. The idea that I would agree to "hold him up" in a fight was so ridiculous that it would have given me a good laugh if I had not been so sore.
In the first round Tate did a lot of holding, but I did not want to give Nugent a chance to call a foul on me by saying I was holding and hitting, so I refused to do any infighting whatever. That gave Nugent a chance to make a big play to the crowd. He kept shouting at me to prepare the crowd for my disqualification.

A Two-Round Fight.

All through the round I did nothing but jab with the left at long range and I had Tate dizzy from these pokes. During the intermission Nugent came over to my corner and in a loud tone demanded to know why I did not use my right hand more.
"I'll use it when I get good and ready," I told him. "I'm doing this fighting."
The reason I did not use my right was that Tate was watching that hand and nothing else. He had a perfect defense for it, but was wide open for the left.
In the second round I let Tate land a few light blows to get him to open up. Then I cracked him on the chin with a left hook and he went down and out. I helped his seconds carry him to his corner.
"Well, do you still think the fight was a fake?" I asked Nugent. He had nothing to say, but scowled at me.

Plans Are Drawn For Field House At Washington U.

Increased Interest in Basketball Makes Francis Gymnasium Too Small.

Architects' plans for a new field house and basketball pavilion for Washington University have been completed and a drive will soon be inaugurated to raise funds for the project. The proposed building will cost between $250,000 and $300,000, and will seat 8000 basketball fans in addition to having an indoor track and handball courts.
The erection of the new pavilion has now become a necessity, according to Dr. Edmunds, director of athletes. Last year the Pikers played their games on the Coliseum floor, but the Coliseum will not be available for basketball games next spring.

Forced to Build.

Unless the pavilion is erected before January, the Pikers will have to go back to playing their games in the close confines of Francis gym, where 2000 spectators can barely be squeezed in. Since about 4000 Washington students are practically obliged to buy student tickets to witness athletic contests, whereas the gymnasium holds only 2000, the Piker authorities are faced with a serious problem. The need for a large basketball stadium becomes more apparent when it is remembered that 7400 spectators witnessed the Washington-Kansas game at the Coliseum.
If the money for the proposed building is raised in a reasonably short time, the pavilion could be completed in time for the opening basketball games early in 1926.

MARYVILLE CLUB SIGNS O'CONNELL, BUT HE WILL NOT BE ALLOWED TO PLAY

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 13.—Jimmy O'Connell, excommunicated member of the New York Giants, has been signed by Manager Jack Dooley of the Marysville club in the Sacramento Valley Baseball League. However, he will not be permitted to play in the league, as the other clubs protested, Charles Clark, president of the league, announced today.

Ruether pitched effectively throughout and never was in danger.

Slim Harris permitted 11 safeties, but was stingy in the pinches. The Macks solved Lyons' stuff early in the game, making all their runs during his tenure. Blankenship finished up and yielded only two hits.
In the third inning Simmons hit one of the longest homers seen here this season.

ATHLETIC TRAINING FOR BOYS TO START MONDAY AT PIKEWAY

Beginning tomorrow, Washington University will start a six weeks' summer athletic course for boys from 8 to 48 years of age. The course will be under the direction of John E. Davis, basketball and assistant football coach of Washington University, and formerly star athlete at Iowa University.
A physical examination will be given to each child when entering the training course and the exercises prescribed are planned to be such as will overcome any constitutional defects the child may have.
Personal coaching will be given in swimming, baseball, tennis, track, boxing and tumbling, and instruction will be given by Coach Davis, Bill Summers, Rodowe Abeken, Dr. Edmunds and a number of prominent Washington athletes.

DR. SIMPSON NAMED FOR WASHINGTON U. STUDENT HEALTH POST

Dr. Eber Simpson has been appointed head of Washington University's student health service and will take active charge of his post next fall, according to a recent announcement.
Simpson was an all-Western quarterback while at Wisconsin and was, with Dr. Joe Evans, now of the Browns, the outstanding player on the Pikers' famous S. A. T. C. football team.
In addition to giving a physical examination to all students entering the university, Dr. Simpson will help students of athletic promise to overcome slight physical defects. He will also take care of injured athletes and may, in addition, be of more direct assistance to Head Coach Bob Higgins. Simpson last year had a successful season as football coach at East St. Louis High School.

TOMMY MILTON WINS 250-MILE ALTOONA AUTO RACE

De Paolo Is Beaten Only A Few Yards

Winner of Indianapolis Derby Forces Victor to Record an Average of 122 Miles an Hour.

By the Associated Press.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 13.—Riding to victory in the face of stiff opposition, from Peter de Paolo, winner of the recent Indianapolis grind, Tommy Milton, the veteran, won today's 250-mile spring automobile race classic on the Altoona Speedway. Milton's margin of victory was but a few yards, for a second or two after Starter Fred Wagner gave Milton the checkered flag, De Paolo crossed the line.

For more than 30 miles they jockeyed for position, but Milton had the advantage and his iron nerve kept him in front of his flying brother racer. Milton's official time was 2 hours, 10 minutes and 21:43 seconds. Hartz came in third and Frank Elliott fourth.

Only One Minor Injury.

The race was marred by only one slight accident. As Milton flashed home as the winner, Wade Morton crashed through the rail on the back stretch. He crawled from his racer as it hung to the fence and waved his arms to signal that he was not hurt seriously. He was removed to the field hospital, however, where physicians treated him for a sprained back.

Several other incidents served to thrill the crowd. Ralph Hepburn blew a tire shortly after the 100-mile mark was reached. His machine skidded down the boards near the grandstand, sending up a cloud of dust. The crowd gave him a lusty cheer when he went back on the track uninjured.

Duray's Axle Breaks.

Leon Duray's left axle gave way while he was speeding to the west curve. His wheel sagged and the fans held their breath until the skillful pilot brought his car down to safety. Earl Cooper and Bennett Hill, who led the pack for some distance, were forced to leave the race. The former when the goal was in sight. Cooper was well out in front when he blew a tire on the back stretch. At this point, the 179-mile mark, it was believed that Cooper would maintain his lead. He made one lap with a new tire and then left the track.

Hill took the lead at the start and held it for 80 miles. His motor went bad as he crossed the 100-mile mark and he retired.

De Paolo Starts Slowly.

De Paolo did not show his speed until after the racers passed the century mark. Then he settled down, overtook the flying motors one by one and near the finish he went ahead of Milton. But Tommy was not to be denied. He pushed De Paolo to the limit, making better than 122 miles an hour. Finally on the back turn, Milton breasted De Paolo and a few seconds later he flashed into the lead, holding it to the finish.

Another for Man o' War.

WRITE down another great victory for Man o' War and for the Glen Riddle Breeding Farm. The success of American Flag in winning the $50,000 Belmont Stakes yesterday was a triumph of even greater importance to American breeders than his racing conquests.

It means that America will, in the years to come, have a racing strain that may some day rise to the importance of the St. Simon and other famous foreign strains.

It is most unusual for young sires to produce great racers early in their retirement. But Man o' War seems to have transmitted his very best traits to American Flag, one of the very first of his progeny.

Continued success as a sire will give Man o' War the leading place in American turf annals.

Not to Run at Latonia.

AMERICAN FLAG is not eligible to run at Latonia, where he might otherwise meet the pick of the year's 3-year-olds at the derby distance of one and one-half miles.

Too bad he could not have been in form and entered in ALL the big stakes, to try for a record not yet won by any horse, even by American Flag's great sire—namely, the honor of winning the Preakness, the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont and the Latonia Derby.

Sir Barton came nearest to turning this trick. He won the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, the Withers and the Belmont, and he was a maiden when he won the Derby. But a foot injury compelled his withdrawal from the Latonia Derby when it seemed at his mercy.

Man o' War was not campaigned in the West, but he won the Preakness, the Belmont and many other stakes, in addition to the match event with Sir Barton for a $50,000 purse.

Only a prejudice against too early racing and traveling saved the Kentucky Derby from Man o' War.

Some Slickers.

ALL fear that Bill Tilden's writing, or his tennis activities, might be wrecked or even limited by the interpretation of the amateur rule against capitalizing his great name, by syndicating stories of his matches for pay, has vanished.

The loophole has been discovered.

Bill will write in such tournaments as he does not see fit to compete in. In tourneys where he DOES compete, Tilden will not write. Oh, dear no! None of that syndicate stuff for Bill!

But rather than see the world suffer deprivation of his reports of the matches—prohibited under the rules—he will not rebuff any interviewers that the syndicate may send against him.

Bill will be INTERVIEWED, as to his ideas of the style matches in which he competes. But he sure he will never jeopardize his amateurism by writing.

And so it goes—if you can't reach your destination by the main thoroughfare, go up an alley.

Then and Now.

FIGHT managers can never sleep on the job. As it was in the past so it is in the present.

Thirty-five years ago John L. Sullivan's manager had the hek of a time trying to keep John from encompassing a brewery or two every 24 hours.

Today, Jimmy Bronson is reported to have a 24-hour-a-day job trying to rescue his ace, Jack Zivic, from ice-cream dives.

Beer for ice cream. It all runs to flesh, and flesh is not for champions to indulge in. Hence, managers must watch or weep.

Misconstrued.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us the following excerpt from a San Francisco sport editorial:

"From time immemorial we have been taught that the decision of a sports arbitrator was final. • • • Yet we learn in the recent court action by which Stanislaus Zbyszko tried—to claim the wrestling championship that the referee testified he made an error in giving Big Munn the title. And the court ruled that Lewis is still the title-holder of all the grapplers."

Our correspondent wants to know if this is true.

According to dispatches received here, the item is correct in all particulars EXCEPT—

That Zbyszko did NOT "claim" the title, but was seeking to have Lewis enjoined from claiming it.

That Referee Walter Bates did not testify, because no trial was held, the Court declaring that it lacked jurisdiction.

That the Court did NOT rule Lewis was title-holder.

That Zbyszko WAS champion at that time by reason of his easy defeat of Munn.

"Tough Breaks."

THE Peabody School nine defeated the Bates team, in the play-off of a protested game, and then won the public school title and the Post-Dispatch trophy and medals.

The tragedy back of this lies in the fact that the Bates School pitcher, in winning the first and protested game decisively, had hurled a no-hit contest, and really DESERVED to win.

Because his principal coached his team on the field during the game, Pitcher Guy Wells and his club have dropped out of the title race, despite a no-hit performance.

A similar case is on record in the Municipal League. The Curlees won their title on a protested game, after having been defeated.

Their protest was based on a rule which holds that a coach must be a member of the team he coaches for. And the Curlees opponents' coach didn't fill the bill and the Curlees won their case. Also the replay and the title.

In both cases technicalities, not interference with the course of play, caused the loss of a title chance.

More Sob Stuff.

JOHNNY DUNDEE, in the sere and yellow, although he made $500,000 fighting, has returned to the boxing game again and it is rumored that want of a bank roll forced it on him.

Dundee has fought over 400 battles, won two titles and amassed a fortune. Now, while descending the sunset slope of his career he must face about and start climbing again. Few have surmounted the peak of success from that side of the mountain.

Still more tragic is the reported fact that the "ponies" took it from him.

Some one bought Johnny a horse named War Mask against his will. But the horse persversely insisted on winning for Johnny, arousing his interest in the racing game.

The disease soon became deep seated.

Also his losing streak. And so Dundee's fortune flitted away.

Owning race horses is about as economical a pastime as maintaining a circus during the rainy season.

Zach Wheat Is New Manager of Brooklyn Club

Temporary Selection Announced by President Wilbert Robinson.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 13.—Zack Wheat, Brooklyn outfielder, was today named temporary manager of the Brooklyn Nationals by Wilbert Robinson. This was announced just before the game with Cincinnati.

Wheat was put in charge of the team for the first time today when Robinson appeared in the grandstand in civilian clothes. This was the first time since he became manager of the club in 1914 that Robinson has failed to direct his team from the field.

"I am eager to see how Zach will make out when the playing end of the team is in his charge," said Robbie, in announcing the temporary shift. "I will not have anything to do with directing plays or picking pitchers while Wheat is the manager."

Robinson said Wheat's trial would last several days, after which a permanent appointment would be made.

PRACTICE RUN FOR JUNIOR MARATHON TO BE HELD THIS MORNING

The first practice run for the boys who are intending to enter the junior marathon of the Tuberculosis Society will be held this morning at 10 o'clock, starting from the baseball dressing room in Fairground Park. The dressing room is located about 100 yards northeast of the corner of Kossuth and Fair avenues within the park.

Verne Lacy, chairman of the marathon committee of the Tuberculosis Society, is very anxious that every boy who intends running in the race July 15 take part in the Sunday practice runs, in order that every boy may be in the best possible condition for the final big race and have the benefit of the expert advice of the trainers who will be on hand at each practice to supervise the workouts.

Lacy will be assisted by Robert L. Probst, Henry Levinson and Joe Forshaw and others of the marathon committee.

Probst and Levinson, both distance runners of long and varied experience, will run with the boys at each practice, to see that they maintain the proper pace, and cover the gradually increasing distance from week to week, that will properly round them into condition without any undue strain.

Long experience well fits these men for the task. Probst recently returned from the East, where he had opportunity to see Paavo Nurmi in action a number of times as well as some of his notable opponents, Ray Ritola, Hellfrich, Hahn. Probst interviewed these men, with the idea of turning his knowledge of training and running methods.

The training ground this year is the actual site of the race in July.

One week later, June 30, Johnny Farr, Cleveland, and Danny Kramer, Philadelphia, will open a new arena in Brooklyn, a Cleveland suburb.

Southern Illinois Golfers to Start Tourney June 23

Willie Mertz, Three Times Champion, to Defend Title at Mt. Vernon.

Southern Illinois golfers will start their fourth annual championship tournament at the Mount Vernon Country Club June 23, with an 18-hole qualifying round. Match play will start Wednesday, June 24, with 18-hole matches, with two rounds scheduled for Thursday and the 36-hole semifinals on Friday. The finals at 36 holes will be played Saturday, June 27.

Willie Mertz of St. Clair, who was defeated by Jimmie Manion of Riverview in the semifinals of the St. Louis district tournament at North Hills, is defending his Southern Illinois title, won three years in succession. The first two tournaments were held at Centralia, while last year the competition was over the St. Clair course.

George Reeder of Mount Vernon is Mertz's most dangerous rival this year, though John Wood and John Rainey of Mount Vernon also have a chance. John Parish and T. W. Clarida of Centralia also will be among those who may give Mertz a battle.

Mount Vernon's course is in excellent condition and the greens rank with the best in the St. Louis district, thanks to the work of John Rainey, chairman of the Greens Committee.

The Southern Illinois Golf District comprizes territory on or south of the Vandalia Railroad. The clubs in the district are Benton, Cairo, Centralia, Greenville, Harrisburg, McLeansboro, West Frankfort, Marion, Metropolis, Mount Carmel, Mount Vernon, Sparta, St. Clair, Vandalia, Effingham, Olney, Robinson, Herrin, Salem, Lawrenceville and Jackson County C. C.

The committee in charge of the tournament includes Ray Hitchcock, Arthur Ward, W. A. Bodine, E. E. Fearheiley, C. R. Keller, Edwin Rackaway, H. B. Ward, L. L. Tuck, H. R. Cawood, Walter Boyd, F. F. Stables, John A. Wood, Earl B. Hinman, George F. Reeder, Tom Maloney and F. G. Thompson.

HOOVER TO COMPETE IN DIAMOND SCULLS EVENT IN ENGLAND

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, June 13.—Henley regatta week, which begins July 10, will have a distinct international aspect, although the present prospects are that only Walter M. Hoover, who won the Diamond sculls in 1922, will represent the United States.

English rowing enthusiasts had hoped to see American college eights on the Henley Beach of the Thames this summer but it is evident these hopes will not be fulfilled. There will be Dutch eights, Polish eights, and other continental crews to oppose the native oarsmen of Britain, however.

Besides Hoover, three other scullers are coming from overseas, but British oarsmen believe the American's strongest opponent will be the young Briton, J. Barefoord, Jr., the rowing son of an old Thames Champion, who beat Hoover in 1923 when the former Duluth man broke a blade on a boom in the river.

EUREKA PLAYS CREVE COEUR IN BIG GAME OF COUNTY PROGRAM

Creve Coeur and Eureka will battle today for the supremacy of the St. Louis County League. If Eureka wins a tie will result as Creve Coeur is a game in the lead. If Creve Coeur wins it will virtually mean the pennant.

Bill Beckmann, sensational Clayton High hurler, will pitch for Creve Coeur. Ollie Fink, ace-er star; Bill Seibert of last year's Sacramento team, and Walter Mueller, who played with Pittsburg last season, will also be in the game.

Maplewood plays Kirkwood and Ballwin plays Valley Park in the other County League games.

Doubles Final Today in A. A. A. Tennis Tourney

Josties and Barnes to Play Wray and Woody Brown for Title.

By Davison Obear.

The doubles event in the Triple A Club tennis championship will be completed this afternoon when Fred Josties and Charlie Barnes oppose Wray and Woody Brown. Josties and Earnes are the present holders of the title.

A close battle is expected. Josties and Barnes advanced to the deciding round by winning from Karl Kammann and Joe Werner in one semifinal match, while the Brown brothers defeated Karl Hodge and Elmer Schwarz.

Wray and Woody Brown have been playing doubles together for a number of seasons. They won the championship of the Missouri Valley at Sioux City, Ia., last August.

Josties and Barnes are slight favorites. The match is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock. Dr. E. M. Carson, local chairman of the umpires, will officiate.

Josties Star of Match.

The only other match scheduled is a semifinal round encounter in the Class A doubles in which George Finger and Tom Flanigan will oppose Arthur Hearting and T. M. Corwin.

Owing to a change in schedule the singles final between Wray Brown and Karl Kammann will be played Tuesday afternoon.

Josties was the individual star of the doubles semifinal between Josties and Barnes and Werner and Kammann. His excellent volleying was mainly responsible for the straight set victory. The scores were 6-1, 6-2, 6-2.

The stroke analysis of the Josties-Barnes and Kammann-Werner match follows:

	Outs.	Nets.	Pl. D.	Flts.
Werner	27	9	8	4
Kammann	14	16	13	4
Josties	13	12	12	0
Barnes	10	16	15	1

Umpire—Dale Morton. Linesmen, Wray Brown, W. H. Brown, F. Stuckman, H. L. Fassett.

ONE-THIRD OF BOXES FOR CLAY COURTS TOURNEY ARE SOLD

More than one-third of the boxes for the fifteenth annual National Clay Court Tennis championship have been sold, according to Dan W. Jones, chairman of the Finance and Ticket Committee. Twenty-three persons have purchased boxes seating six each. They are W. B. Orthwein, Jr., Henry S. Cushman, Charles J. Besch, Wheaton C. Ferguson, Joseph L. Garner, L. G. Burkham, Howard V. Stephens, William J. Lemp, Clarence O. Gamble, Charles G. Moore, John Gates Williams, Henry McRee, L. D. Dozier Jr., Russell Gardner Jr., Dr. E. J. Senseney, Adolphus Busch III, Webster Tilton, Leacock Sporting Goods Co., C. Raymond Jones, Roland M. Hoerr, Dan W. Jones.

The grandstands are so arranged this year that 68 boxes are available. Of this number 34 will be placed at the top of the west stand and 20 along the western side of one of the championship courts. Fourteen boxes will be placed on the top of the south stand for those who wish to view the matches at a different angle.

At least five of the world's leading tennis players will compete. Entries have already been received from Howard and Robert Kinsey, national and clay court doubles champions; Brian I. C. Norton, No. 8 in the United States ranking for 1924, and George Lott Jr., the sensational Chicago youth. Lott ranks No. 9 in the national list.

Pikers Lose 11 By Graduation

Seven Are Football Men, Three Ball Players and One a Swimmer.

Washington University lost 11 of its athletes through graduation last week. Seven of the casualties were football players, three were baseball players and one a swimmer. Several of the men had won letters in more than one branch of athletics.

Weil, Neupert, Gragg, Hersch, Goessling, Walsh and Lyle are the gridiron performers. Weil and Lyle also played basketball. Walsh and Gragg had baseball letters and Hersch was a good wrestler.

Roberts and Hoshour, fielders, and Adolph Thym, star left-hand pitcher, were the baseball graduates. Thym, incidentally, had the best season of his conference career. He deserved to win every game he pitched, but lost three and four hit games because of errors.

"Doc" Helbing, star performer of the Pikers' championship swimming team, has not yet graduated from the medical school, but will not be eligible next year, since he has had three years of collegiate competition.

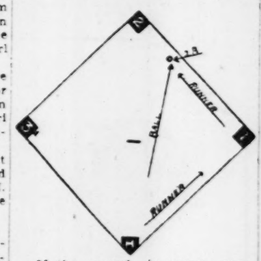
TIPS ON INSIDE BASE-BALL

THERE is a runner on first base and one or none out when batsman grounds to second baseman, who fields the ball just ahead of the runner directly on the baseline.

What is the best way to make a double play? What should runner do advancing do to prevent the double play?



If the second baseman can touch the runner on the base line without being subjected to any great delay, it is an easy matter for him to complete the double play by throwing to first.

The action of the runner advancing from first to second is the determining factor for the success or failure of the double play.

To prevent this play the runner should stop abruptly, rather than attempting to get by the second baseman, thereby making it possible for a touch.

By slowing up, the runner so delays the play that if the fielder insists on making the touch, he will be unable to get the runner at first.

If he shifts from the touch, passing up the chance in an effort to retire the runner at first, the man going from first to second can make another break for that bag.

Speed Boats to Race in Local Harbor, June 2

Naval and Aviation Officials Assist in Motor Regatta.

The committee in charge of the motor boat regatta to be held on the Mississippi on Sunday, June 28, has received assurance of co-operation from naval and Government air service authorities, it is announced by C. Koenig announced last night.

Commander G. F. Schwartz of the United States Naval Reserve Flotilla and Major W. H. Leininger of the 35th Division Air Forces have promised material aid to the regatta.

Twenty or more speed boats, designed and built exclusively for racing, will compete in the various events scheduled. At the conclusion of the regular program, the winner of the free-for-all race will race an airplane over the course.

A course measuring 2½ miles to the lap will be laid out on the Mississippi between the Municipal Free Bridge. Collector of Customs W. J. McBurney has already informed the committee that he will have the course patrolled and closed to ordinary navigation during the races.

Seats on Government Dock.

At the lower turn, opposite the Government dock at the foot of Rutger street, accommodations will be provided for about 1000 spectators. Chairs will be placed on the dock.

A parade of cruisers will open the program after which there will be a special 5-mile cruiser race, a runabout class race and a championship free-for-all race. A test of speed boat against airplane will close the program.

Trophies to be given to the winners of winning boats have been donated by Joseph Mogler, Gus Welck, E. C. Koenig and S. P. Ely and George P. Skouras.

Team Wins In Spite of Kerr's Loss

Nine Plays Motorbus Crew in Municipal League Feature — Donnelly's Play Yellow Team.

The Shell team, whose steady march back to first division in the Independent League, has been a feature of the past few weeks, will play the Motorbus nine at Fairgrounds today in an interesting Municipal League game. The Shells took a big slump following Dickie Kerr's resignation in the early part of the season, but of late have been winning steadily and now stand in a position to threaten the leading Kuhs team and the second-place Meletios.

The Kuhs take on the Polish Cadets in another Independent League contest and the Meletios play the Polish Falcons.

Mercantile Schedule.

In the Mercantile League the Donnellys should have easy sailing as they play the Yellow team, which has won but one game this season. The Donnellys dropped their first game last week, losing to the Rock Islands, when their sluggers failed with the bases full in the ninth. The Swifts play Rock Island. The Southwests and Daimlers, which are tied for second with the Swifts, meet.

The undefeated Lischko Indians take on a tough one in the Lawton-Byrne-Bruner club. The latter team has been advancing steadily and now stands in third place. In view of their showing the Lischkos stand in a better position to be trimmed than they have this year. Miller pitches effectively for the Lawton-Byrne-Bruners.

The standings in the Empire are likely to remain unchanged as the Y. M. H. A.s, who took first place last week, and the Typos play second division teams. It is possible, however, that the dark horse, Wiles-Chipmans, will beat the Y. M. H. A. nine, in which case the Typos, by winning, would tie for first place.

Naval and Aviation Officials to Assist in Motor Regatta.

The committee in charge of the motor boat regatta to be held on the Mississippi on Sunday, June 28, has received assurance of co-operation from naval and Govern-ment air service authorities. Edw C. Koenig announced last night.

Commander G. F. Schwarz of the United States Naval Reserve Force and Major W. H. Leininger of the 35th Division Air Forces have promised material aid to the regatta.

Twenty or more speed boats are signed and built exclusively for racing, will compete in the five events scheduled. At the conclu-sion of the regular program, a winner of the free-for-all race will race an airplane over the course.

A course measuring 2½ miles in the lap will be laid out on the Mississippi between the Eads and the Free Bridge. Collector of Customs W. J. McBurney has in formed the committee that he will have the course patrolled and closed to ordinary navigation dur-ing the races.

Seats on Government Dock.

At the lower turn, opposite the Government dock at the foot of Rutger street, accommodation will be provided for about 1000 spec-tators. Chairs will be placed on the dock.

A parade of cruisers will open the program after which there will be a special 5-mile cruiser race, a runabout class race and a cham-pionship free-for-all race. The test of speed boat against airplane will close the program.

Trophies to be given to the own-ers of winning boats have been do-nated by Joseph Mogler, George Weick, E. C. Koenig and S. P. C. Lund and George P. Skouras.

SHELLS HAVE CHANCE TO GAIN ON LEADERS TODAY

Team Wins In Spite of Kerr's Loss

Nine Plays Motorbus Crew in Municipal League Feature — Donnelly's Play Yellow Team.

The Shell team, whose steady march back to first division in the Independent League, has been a feature of the past few weeks, will play the Motorbus nine at Fair-grounds today in an interesting Mu-nicipal League game. The Shells took a big slump following Dickie Kerr's resignation in the early part of the season, but of late have been winning steadily and now stand in a position to threaten the leading Kuhs team and the second-place Meletios.

The Kuhs take on the Polish Cadets in another Independent League contest and the Meletios play the Polish Falcons.

Mercantile Schedule.

In the Mercantile League, the Donnellys should have easy sailing, as they play the Yellow team, which has won but one game this season. The Donnellys dropped their first game last week, losing to the Rock Islands, when their slug-gers failed with the bases full in the ninth. The Swifts play Rock Island. The Southwests and Dan nines, which are tied for second with the Swifts, meet.

The undefeated Lischko Indians take on a tough one in the Lawton-Byrne-Bruner club. The latter team has been advancing steadily and now stands in third place. In view of their showing, the Lischkos stand in a better position to be trimmed than they have this year. Miller pitches effectively for the Lawton-Byrne-Bruners.

The standings in the Empire are likely to remain unchanged, as the Y. M. H. A.s, who took first place last week, and the Typos, play sec-ond division teams. It is possible, however, that the dark horse, Wiles-Chipmans, will beat the Y. M. H. A. nine, in which case the Typos, by winning, would tie for first place.

SIR PETER WINS ENQUIRER STAKES FROM GUEST OF HONOR

Qualifies For Derby By Victory

Winner Is Aided by Miserable Ride on Princess Doreen Which Finished in Third Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LATONIA, Ky., June 13.—Sir Peter won the Enquirer Handicap here this afternoon, and the manner in which the son of Paicines demonstrated his speed over a mile and a sixteenth on good track through a light rain, convinced more than 15,000 devotees of the turf that he must be recognized as one of the best in the Western handicap division. He took the event, without being extended, by 1½ lengths from Guest of Honor, Princess Doreen and three others. The 1 1-16 miles was run in 1:44 3-5, rather slow, fractional time being, quarter, :23 2-5; half, :47 4-5; three-quarters, 1:12 2-5; mile, 1:37 2-5.

The race was worth $6,140 to the winning owner, J. Bell, who was on hand to see his colt win. He was presented with the E. B. McLean trophy. The race last year was won by Jeff Livingston's Actuary.

Starter William Snyder lined the half dozen up at the post and they went away in order without much trouble, Sir Peter elected to make pace with Guest of Honor, second and Princess Doreen next to rail, third. The Princess ran well up to the leaders and Garner got her into a jam on back stretch and pulled her up. Sir Peter lead at head of the stretch by a neck, challenged by Guest of Honor, and when Princess tried to get through she was shut off and was compelled to take the long way around.

Guest of Honor tired, but not enough to allow the Princess to take the place, holding it safe by one and a quarter lengths. The Princess hung slightly but saved the show by a neck from Beau Butler. Hopeless showed a dull performance as did Gold Bug.

K. Spence, trainer of Princess Doreen, stated after the race that he would wager $10,000 that his mare could defeat Sir Peter over this distance any time during meeting.

Matt J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey club said that the best of American three year olds with exception of the Belmont stake winner American Flag, would be here to contest the $25,000 derby. He stated that he would make an effort to bring Flying Ebony, Son of John and American Flag together before fall meeting at Latonia in a special race.

Beau Butler finished fourth and saved his stake, while Hopeless finished fifth and Gold Bug last.

Sir Peter qualified handsomely for Latonia derby. While no credit was taken away from the winner, Jockey Mack Garner on Princess Doreen, the favorite, was severely criticised for his poor ride on the Audley farm mare. Jockey J. McCoy, who piloted the winner, rode a perfect race under the conditions.

How the Belmont Was Run

FIFTH RACE, mile and three furlongs, purse $50,000 added, for 3-year-olds. Start good; won easily; place ridden out; went 4:22; off 4:24. Winner, C. H. C. 3 Man o' War-Lady Comfey. Trained by G. R. Tompkins. Value to winner, $38,000, and plate valued at $500. $5000, $2000, $1000. Time, :24, :47, 1:37 2-5, 1:50 1-5, 2:03 1-5, 2:16 4-5.

Backbone	126	7	4	2½	5½	7	7	7	McAtee	15 to 1

Scratched—Kentucky Cardinal, Almadel.

American Flag broke well, but was taken back off pace; he made his run leaving the back stretch to dispose of Prince of Bourbon quickly and win with plenty to spare. Dangerous, sluggish early, worked his way up steadily on outside on final turn and finished with good courage under punishment. Swope, closer than usual to the early pace, hung on well in the final drive. By Hisself, far off pace, picked up tiring horses in the stretch. Marconi raced evenly. Prince of Bourbon was done after a good mile. Backbone quit early.

Ladkin to Oppose Sting Tomorrow In the Brooklyn

Butler's Four-Year-Old Has Five Successive Victories to His Credit.

By O'Neil Sevier.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1925.)

NEW YORK, June 13.—Sting, 4-year-old son of Spur and New York bred, which has ousted gallant little Sarazen, a Kentuckian, from the eastern racing spotlight, is small, like Sarazen, but not as small as the second Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt's sorrel. He is about the same size as his sire, a Virginia-bred son of King James and Friar Rocks, most formidable rivals among the 3-year-olds of 1916. Spur beat Friar Rock in the Withers renewal of 1916, but not after that.

Sarazen is no more than 15 hands at the withers. Sting, a bay, stands about 15 hands 1½ inches on racing plates. Comparatively long underneath, he is short of back, close-coupled and splendidly muscled. His short legs are as clean as hickory saplings. He and Sarazen have one valuable attribute in common—smooth, frictionless action. Military opinion the world over long ago accepted his type as the standard for cavalry.

Five Straight Victories.

Sting led home 11 of the smartest horse that had competed in a Surburban in 16 years, when he won that event, at Belmont a week ago. The victory was his fifth in a row. He had won revivals of the Excelsior and Metropolitan handicaps at Jamaica and Belmont Park and a couple of overnight races. In one of the overnight races he had shouldered 124 pounds and established a new world's record of 1.41—1-5, for one mile and 70 yards. Ladkin seems to be the only horse standing between him and victory at Aqueduct Monday. In the $10,000 Brooklyn handicap, a gallop of one mile and a furlong. He is the biggest eastern gleaner of the season next to Coventry, the Preakness victor at Baltimore.

That Ladkin, which fell lame in Kentubky last October training for the third of the Epinard races, will beat Sting in the Brooklyn is doubtful. Ladkin has not raced this season.

After the Brooklyn Sting will rest a few days and then begin his preparation for the Empire City handicap, a $10,000 race of one mile and a quarter, that will be run at Yonkers in mid July.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS To Baseball Queries

Runner on first and second. Catcher tries to get the runner at first napping. He throws the ball to the first baseman and the latter, trying to tag the runner, runs his arm under the runner's foot, lifting it from the base. One umpire calls it out and one safe. What was it?—Second Baseman.

Umpire was justified in calling the runner safe if he was satisfied the fielder interfered with him and the decision should have been made by the field umpire.

Batter hits the ball and the ball bounces up and hits his bat and rolls fair. The batter is standing in his box. Is it a fair or foul hit?—Cardinal Rooter.

The hit is foul. The batter is on foul ground when he is in his box.

A high fly is batted into the air and the third baseman and pitcher both run for the ball and both stop and watch it while it hits the ground. After striking the ground the ball bounds outside the foul line between third base and home. The umpire calls the batter out because he did not run to first. Is he right?—M. E., Collinsville, Ill.

It was a foul ball and the batter was not out. Because the ball was a fly and bounded out of the infield was no reason why it would not be a foul.

Ward to Dispute State Golf Title With St. Louisans

Former Kansas City Star, Back From East, Will Compete This Year.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 13.—It is only natural that advance indications each year should point to a larger State golf tournament, yet it safely can be said that the twenty-first annual Missouri championship. This was John L.'s last fight over the Lakewood Golf and Country Club course, here, this week—June 17 to 20 inclusive—will carry with it fully three times the interest of similar events in the last two years.

This is true because of the fact that for the first time in several years Kansas City appears to have a formidable field of contenders entered.

The old stock question—"Which St. Louis golfer will it be?"—must be broadened a bit this year, James Ward of the Kansas City Country Club, former city and State title holder, who has been out of Missouri tournament competition for the last four years, having been attending school in the East, is back on the trail of the crown.

There are about six other golfers in whom Kansas City is placing great hope, but Ward admittedly is the most finished golfer of proved ability to oppose the "four horsemen" of St. Louis—Manion, Held, Bockenkamp and Anderson.

No other Kansas City club has ever made the preparations for a State tournament that are being completed at Lakewood. Eighteen new tees; a 60-foot addition to the clubhouse and many improvements of the course have been under way during the last three months. Not a sand trap is to be found in Lakewood, practically all of the hazards being natural. Construction of the new tees has lengthened several of the holes. Par for the course, formerly 71, has been increased to 72.

There is only one water hole—No. 2—but several ditches and the rough on several holes will make one sweat blood, if he is inclined to throw too much right shoulder into his swing.

Thus far, more than 150 entries have been received, including the pick of St. Louis and Kansas City golfers. An entry list of more than 250 is anticipated and from present indications the number will exceed that mark.

SARAZEN NOMINATED FOR CHICAGO SPECIAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Sarazen and 91 other leading handicap and stake horses have been nominated for the $20,000 added Chicago Special, to be run at Hawthorne Saturday, Aug. 22, according to the list of nominations made public today. It is a weight-for-age at a mile and three-sixteenths.

Among the older handicap horses nominated besides Sarazen are Princess Doreen, Spot Cash, Senator Norris, Shuffle Along, Beau Butler, Chilhowee, Stanwix, Wise Counsellor, Cherry Pie, Little Celt, Osprey, General Thatcher, Mad Play, Altawood, Transmute and others. Practically all of the high-class 3-year-olds of the year were also named for the race.

Edward R. Bradley's Idle Hour Farm of Kentucky leads the list of nominations, with seven. Harry Payne Whitney entered five.

STING IN FINAL WORK FOR HANDICAP RACE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 13. — James Butler's Sting yesterday had his last workout over the main track at Belmont Park for the Brooklyn Handicap at a mile and a furlong, which will be the feature at the Aqueduct race track Monday. Sting's performance was a sensational one.

Few horses race faster than he worked, the fractional times being as follows: 1:14 3-5, :22 1-5, :33 2-5, :45 4-5, :58 4-5, 1:10 4-5 for the six furlongs; 1:24, 1:36 2-5 for the mile and 1:50 for the full distance.

Benny Breuning had the mount and the Suburban Handicap winner moved freely and easily all the way. The track record for a mile and a furlong at Belmont Park is 1:49, showing the amazing speed Sting developed. He seems to be getting better and better.

Two other Brooklyn Handicap candidates also worked. R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Wilderness covering the distance in 1:53 3-5 and the Rancocas Stables's Mad Play in 1:54.

THE LIFE OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN—By R. F. DIBBLE—He Uplifts the Stage

Makes Tour of the Country In Thundering Melo-drama And Takes Play to Australia

"Honest Hearts and Willing Hands" Proves to Be Successful Vehicle for the Former Champion When He Becomes an Actor.

In the preceding chapter the author told of the battle with James J. Corbett in which Sullivan lost the championship. This was John L.'s last fight. It was necessary for him to do something for a living, however, as he was practically without a dollar to his name and he decided to go upon the stage.

CHAPTER VII

WHEN John made the great decision to go on the stage the theatrical world was all agog with delight. Great American actors were all too rare, it was felt, but the addition of Sullivan to the profession heralded a restoration of the best traditions of the classic stage. Producers and playwrights tumbled over each other, in their haste to be the first to woo him. Dramas, written in feverish haste, came to him by the score; and, after a great deal of consultation and advice, he at first decided upon one which seemed to offer every possible inducement for his peculiar tastes.

Its plot, a most fearful and wonderful thing, ran thus. Act I. John, the hero, was to come in a balloon to the timely rescue of the heroine from a band of "bad Willies." Act II. John was to be hilariously but harmlessly blown up by a gang of bloodthirsty, red-coed anarchists. Act III. This was to be rather tame, as it was rightly believed that, by this time, the audience would need relaxation; therefore, John was merely required to fight a ten-round bout with a mildly disposed villain who held a mortgage on "the old home farm" of the heroine. Act IV. Action returned with a bang, for John was to engage in a ferocious pistol battle with the promoters of the mortgage scheme. Act V. The play was to end happily when John, after leaping over a precipice into a concealed tank of real water, pulled off a happy reunion with the heroine and her long-lost brother."

Sullivan was so intrigued by the measureless possibilities of this that he decided to accept it. When he suddenly recollected an experience he had had with the circus. He had been billed to go up in a balloon at a county fair held in a Western town. As a preparation for his ascent, he had been "trundled to the fair grounds in a coach drawn by four white horses," preceded by a gorgeous circus band. When the balloon got shouted that all was ready, he climbed into the cage; but no allowance had been made for his weight—for at this time he was out of training and very fat. The result was that the balloon, after rising a scant 10 feet, became partially crippled, dropped back, and began to whiz along on a horizontal course so close to the ground that Sullivan was mercilessly bumped up and down. While the crowd of farmers fled in shrieking dismay, the basket that held John went crashing against the fleeing multitudes, knocking scores of people right and left. Then the runaway monster slapped poor John through a row of tents, and at last ended its murderous journey by hurling him against a fence. The hanger, having turned completely over, spilled him out on the ground, and the gay balloon then shot toward the zenith. The memory of this nerve-shaking experience caused John to abandon all idea of appearing in a play which necessitated the use of another balloon; and besides, the plot offered some rather difficult problems from the standpoint of stage presentation. Thus a play, which might have been the long-anticipated Great American Drama, was ruthlessly nipped in the bud.

"Honest Hearts and Willing Hands," His Stage Vehicle

For a time, John felt very unhappy. What a pity it was, he remarked in aggrieved tones, that such a rip-snorter of a show was spoilt by one stunt that no wise cuss like I am would dare to pull off." His sorrow was soon alleviated, however, by the memory of the gorgeous spectacle called "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands," in which he had once appeared during his championship days. Its plot, to be sure, had differed but little from the one he now felt compelled to sacrifice, save for the absence of any bumptious balloon. In one particular, indeed, it surpassed its defunct rival, for it ended with a monologue — to be spoken by Sullivan—that offered him every opportunity to display those oratorical flights of which he was so pardonably proud. After striding majestically to the front of the stage, he was to raise his right hand aloft and, with the utmost solemnity, pronounce these affecting lines:

> There is no time, no place, no power,
> No land serene, no roseate bower,
> No heaven, no sainted place of bliss,
> Nor baby's cheek, nor baby's kiss,
> That's grander, sweeter, purer than
> A woman's love for thoughtless man.

No audience, it was believed, could resist the emotional appeal of such a powerful climax, and so it turned out. In August, 1890, John had signed a contract which claimed his services as the hero of "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands" for two continuous years, including a trip to Australia. For nearly a year, he had appeared in almost all the principal American cities, on a tour that "went clear through to San Francisco," as he proudly asserted.

The American tour had been so successful that, in June, 1891, Sullivan and his company had sailed for Australia. On the way they stopped at the Samoan Islands; and, after seeing the renowned pugilist perform his marvelous histrionic exploits, the natives gave vent to their barbaric delight in a mixture of shrieks and contortions which, being interpreted, meant "Great Chief." But Australia itself proved to be very disappointing. Appreciation of the drama was very weak—it was even suggested that Sullivan might appear to better advantage in the ring than on the stage—and the audiences were so small that the company ran into debt. "I got an awful deal all over Australia, and never saw such a mean lot of cuss in my life," was John's caustic summary of his experiences there. After six weeks, he began to feel homesick; for his work was arduous, Australians of both sexes were curiously cold, and he therefore had little opportunity to amuse himself after his customary fashion. "I didn't give myself up to much pleasure in Australia," he admitted after he had landed in San Francisco in October 1891. Nor was he made any happier when rumor insisted that the ship's captain had been compelled to confine him in irons during most of the return voyage because, freed from his stage duties, he had broken all bounds and had almost swamped the ship by tearing around in an ecstacy of abandoned intoxication. Though he denied this accusation with violent rage it still refused to be quieted; and he accordingly tried to conceal his chagrin by "growing whiskers all over his face."

Back in Old Part.

So it came about that John, recalling the American success of this play and failing to discover a worthy successor, resumed it early in 1893, and for some months to come repeated and even bettered his former triumphs. Wherever he appeared he was universally acclaimed. Hundreds of audiences were alternately thrilled and moved to copious tears as heroic John, evening after evening, put hydra-headed vice to a most ignominious rout, and gloriously saved despairing and much-wilted virtue. He was, so some hundreds of thousands of idol-worshippers maintained, a theatrical star of the first magnitude. He stirred up bitter jealousy in the breasts of other stars, one of whom cruelly commends: "Him an actor? He acts about as well as he says that Charlie Mitchell fights." The great Modjeska, however, came gallantly to his defense. After witnessing his exhibition in Cincinnati, she expressed her delight in these words: "Oh, I like him very well, indeed. He speaks his lines naturally, and one likes that bluff, hearty manner." Finally, after a tour that was even more gratifying than the first had been, it was decided that John must be cast for a new part, since, admittedly great though it was, "Honest Hands and Willing Hearts" could hardly be expected to draw crowds forever.

A worthy successor was at length discovered in "A True American," which was succinctly described by a glowing critic as a superb example of a play that "expresses a fine contempt for everything that is low and mean." The plot more than substantiated the critic's praise. The chief villain was an Englishman who perpetually pursued a perpetually fleeing American heroine. At the end she was miraculously rescued by John, who, cast in the part of an intensely Irish-American hero, saved her from the vile machinations of a horde of English rogues after five acts of heart-breaking, tremendously tense action. John was, we are told, "subtly humorous, courtly, tender, romantic, terrible, impressive and, always amusing." The play's emotional tone is indicated by two lines which constituted almost the whole of John's repertoire: "I am a true American" and "I will fly to your assistance." But these lines gave John an opportunity to show his real magnitude as an actor; for, in repeating the phrases in scores of different situations, he employed such an infinite variety of tonal effects and delicately shaded nuances that the same critic went into wild raptures over John's magnificent rendition of his part.

Yet, despite his surpassing art in this play, it lasted but a few months. Its temporary successor was "The Man from Boston," which was deliberately chosen because it made capital out of Sullivan alone. The result was that it soon met with the fate that justly overtakes all plays which extol the hero to the utter neglect of the heroine and the villain. Sullivan's sorrow at its failure was twofold; for at this time—1895—his spendthrift habits had brought him so close to poverty that he was unable to pay a bill which was charged for printing the play. The publishers finally got a judgment against him; but in spite of all the efforts made to collect the money, none was forthcoming.

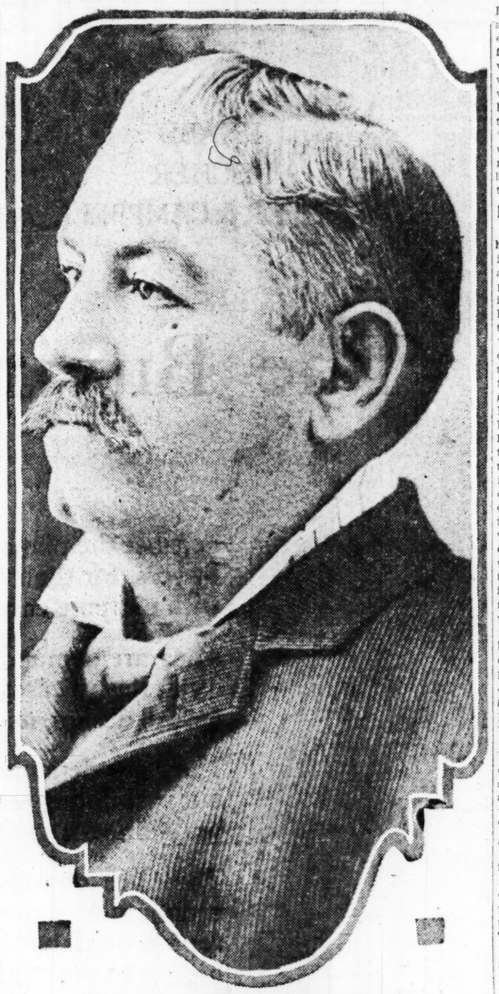
Falls off Wagon Again.

All this litigation, however, soon killed the already dying play; and John, wretched and almost penniless, tried to drown his sorrows in sentimentality and drink. Just at this time, it happened that one of his theatrical friends died, and Sullivan, together with a number of friends, attended the funeral. The dead actor had requested that someone should sing "My Old Kentucky Home," and before the song was finished, everybody present had broken completely down—everybody, that is, except John, who sat staring blankly at the ceiling without a tear in his eye. But it happened that the minister, during the course of his comforting remarks, used the phrase, "Now I lay me down to sleep," upon which John collapsed. After the services were over, a maudlin discussion arose concerning the most touching expression that the preacher had used, and, since nobody agreed, John finally settled the argument in summary fashion. "You fellows are all wrong," he said, in a tone that wavered between bluster and tears. "The prettiest thing was when the preacher said, 'Now I lay me down to sleep'"—and he sagged to the floor, his great frame shaking with uncontrollable anguish.

During the next three years Sullivan acted whenever he could, and in whatever capacity he could. His repertoire, however, was so limited that his services were rarely needed, and so he sank more deeply into poverty and dunkenness. But when the Maine was blown up in February, 1898, he forgot all his troubles in a great outburst of patriotic ardor. Spain, he firmly believed, was utterly, despicable. "Spain! Who in hell is she and what's she done to make her think she's got a chance against us?" he shouted one day at a cheering audience. "If she wants to fight us, let her go and get a reputation first, just like I done before I was champion." He urged all his friends to enlist when war at last came; he offered his time, his reputation and his money to the Government in case of need—in fact, he did everything except try to enlist himself. In a long letter to the New York World, he expressed himself at length concerning the proper course for the Government to follow. The disaster to the Maine, he repeated over and over, had moved him to tears. "Yes, Mr. Editor, and friends, I, John L. Sullivan, wept as though my heart would break. . . . Blow every Spaniard to hell! . . . My old-time fighting blood is up. . . . Can we do it? Yes, we can lick Spain in 15 minutes. . . . If I was President of this great and glorious United States, I'd have settled this matter long ago. The pugilists today fight their battles in the papers and over the telephones—I guess McKinley has learned the same methods. If I could only lick Spain myself, I'd be so happy I'd lay down and die." After this letter appeared, consternation reigned at Washington until war was finally declared.

John was overjoyed when McKinley and his Cabinet did their manifest duty. During the course of the conflict, he continued to give valuable advice to both the military and naval authorities. Then, when the victory was won, he felicitated the Republican party in glowing language; but he also pointed out the many grave mistakes that it had made, both in Cuba and in the Philippines, in such scathing language that a deep gloom settled upon Washington—a gloom that was not dispelled until after the election of 1900. When some of John's acquaintances suggested in a mild sort of way, that he had not done much that was definitely concrete to help win the war, he flamed out: "Done much? Ain't I talked? Ain't I told them Washington guys what to do, and ain't they skedaddling around doing it? Ain't I been giving exhibition bouts, and refereeing patriotic boxing matches? Ain't I saved about a thousand carloads of people from going loony from thinking too much about the war? And, besides, ain't I been sick?"

In Boston, also, John had acted as a referee of boxing contests, which were held for the purpose of raising money to fight the Spaniards. These patriotic frays were held mostly in the Boston Music Hall, where statues of Beethoven and Wagner looked down upon the fistic encounters. Amid these classic scenes, John served his country faithfully and frequently.



JOHN L. SULLIVAN AS AN ACTOR.

In the summer of 1899, another attack of a strangely complex disease had confined him to his bed for several months. This time it went by the name of dropsy. He was swollen to an unbelievable size, was almost blind for a time, and all his friends cheerfully assured him that he was probably going to die. "Well, I can't help it, can I?" he would ejaculate. "I guess it'll land me this time; but—hell! A short life and a merry one's been my motto."

Back on the Stage.

Little by little he recovered, however, and occupied his time during his convalescence by poking fun at the lugubrious persons who had prophesied his decease. Once again, in 1900, the lure of the stage won him. For a time he acted as the tender-hearted but valiant hero of "The Two Orphans," but it soon came to an ignominious end. John then reached the long-delayed but final conclusion that he "wasn't no good no more for the hero stuff." For, in spite of all the praise that had been poured on him, he had at last discovered that, as a hero on the boards, he could not register the proper emotion when the heroine told him that she could, or could not, be his. He was told by competent critics that the most artistic way to perform in such scenes was to clap his hands over his eyes and take three steps backward, as if stunned; but, despite this excellent advice, he persisted in looking around as if for some ropes to cling to, and for a man with a pail, a bottle, and a sponge.

Having finished with the hero business, he formed a company under his own management which presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin." John acted the part of Simon Legree—a role which suited him so perfectly that for a time the play was fully as successful as "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands" had been. That John was his own best critic is sufficiently proved by his succinct summary of his performance: "In 1900 I was starring with some bloodhounds in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' Me and the dogs give hundreds of audiences their money's worth of noise." One incident of his tour made him rightfully indignant. A story was circulated that some Canadian reporters had asked him whether he thought that the "story of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' had really brought on the war," and Sullivan, so the tale went, had replied, "You can search me, but we certainly did give them Spanlards a run." Then John burst out in an unusually aggrieved speech. "Why," he said, "I've took a lot of joking from the reporters in the American papers because most of 'em is my friends, but when them Canucks get gay, and try to slip across some of their foreign humor at me—well, I'm there with the short-arm poke." Nevertheless, the Canadians continued to have a good time at his expense, and his Canadian tour was soon brought to a disastrous end by other unkind stories that were circulated everywhere. The negro who played the part of Uncle Tom—according to these vile slanderers — always turned white with fear when Legree caught him. It was also affirmed that the show was running on the rocks, for the most telling scene in it had been ruined; Liza could not make her thrilling escape across the icy river, because John used all the ice to make highballs for himself.

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

My old friend Tom Mix was just back through New York a few weeks ago on his return from Europe. It was just twenty years ago this Spring that Tom and I come to New York with a little Wild West Troop. Now here he was returning from Europe like the Prince of Wales when he returned home from his visit to Long Island. In fact the Prince brought his own ponies to America to show us there was horses he could ride, and Tom had taken Tony with him to keep his riding record intact while he was over there. Tom lost his record as a Bad Man while there. He worked a big Charity Show in Paris and at the finish of his performance a Male Frenchman come right out on the Stage and kissed him. Now you have all seen Tom shoot as many as twenty men in pictures without reloading his Six Shooter for doing less than kissing him.

He give me one of those big Beach Umbrella Hats. It cost more than my whole costume has cost for twenty years. (I hope the Income Tax Man don't see this, as I did charge off something for costume).

What reminded me of this in regard to "BULL" DURHAM was, that here was Tom with twenty-two trunks and when he first come here he used an empty "BULL" DURHAM sack for his clothes, and as I didn't smoke, I didn't have any use for that.

New Ford economy—now made possible by this oil created for Fords exclusively

MANY Ford owners complain of the cost of operating their cars. Frequent repairs, low gasoline and oil mileage, costly chatter, excess carbon—all these pile up expense and defeat economy.

Yet the car itself is not to blame. The Ford can be, should be in fact, the most economical of all cars to operate.

Correct lubrication is the most important factor in economical Ford operation. This is because the Ford has a unique lubricating system.

The special Ford system of lubrication

The engine and transmission of your Ford are combined in one housing. Both are lubricated by one oil—the same oil. This should be a definite economy—and it is, if the oil you use lubricates both the engine and the transmission perfectly.

Ordinary motor oils are not designed to do both these jobs. They may lubricate the engine perfectly but fail as a lubricant for the transmission. This failure results in jerky chatter—destructive vibration—when you start, stop and reverse.

You can now eliminate this costly chatter, and, at the same time, lubricate your Ford engine perfectly by using Veedol Forzol, the economy oil made for Fords exclusively. Veedol Forzol was perfected by Tide Water engineers only after 4 years of experiments and actual road tests. It gives these eight economies in operation.

The Eight Economies of Veedol Forzol

1. 10 to 25% gasoline saving
2. 10 to 25% saving in oil
3. 10 to 25% less carbon
4. Eliminates costly chatter
5. Resists heat and friction
6. Increased ability to coast
7. Resists fuel dilution
8. Reduces repair bills

Drive around to the nearest dealer or authorized Ford Agent who sells Veedol Forzol. Have your crankcase drained and refilled with Veedol Forzol. Then test the "8 Economies" yourself.

MOTION TO QUASH INDICTMENT IN TENNESSEE EVOLUTION CASE

Statute on Which It Is Based Attacked as Violative of State and U. S. Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Tenn., June 13.—Judge J. L. Godsey, counsel for the defense, today entered a motion in Circuit Court to quash the indictment against Prof. John T. Scopes, Rhea County High School teacher charged with violation of the Tennessee antievolution law. This action is in line with the rule that all motions of this kind must be filed 20 days after indictment is returned.

The motion attacks the act, which is the basis of the indictment and which the defendant is charged with violating, as unconstitutional, and that it violates the whole spirit of the State Constitution and the Constitution of the United States.

A jury to hear the Scopes case will be selected at the meeting of Rhea County Court on July 6. A venire of about 30 men will be summoned.

SANFORD JURY DISAGREES

Panel at Clinton 7 to 5 for Conviction of Banker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLINTON, Mo., June 13.—The jury in the case of E. L. Sanford, former Springfield banker, was discharged at 10 o'clock this morning, being hopelessly deadlocked. The jury retired at 4:35 yesterday afternoon. Sanford was charged with receiving a $30 deposit in the Holland Banking Co., of which he was president, when the bank was insolvent. The case was brought to Clinton on a change of venue.

The State charged juggling of bank paper by Sanford. The defense admitted this juggling, but declared that the bank was solvent. The vote was six for conviction and six for acquittal until the final ballot today, when the vote was seven for conviction and five for acquittal. Sanford has been convicted in another case growing out of the bank failure and has appealed from a four-year sentence.

TILLIAN TAKEN TO DENVER TO FACE SWINDLE CHARGE

Edward W. Tillian, president of the Lakeside Furniture Co., and an ex-convict, who the police say is Edward Barth wanted in five cities for swindling banks, was taken to Denver yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Harry Bevers of Denver on warrants charging him with swindling two banks there out of $1984. Tillian admits being an ex-convict, but declares he is not Barth and is innocent of the charges.

Before he left Police Headquarters he was the center of a dispute with his attorneys over their fees. He had signed power of attorney to Jerome F. Dugan, and Dugan attempted to collect from the police all of Tillian's property held since his arrest. Tillian told Chief of Detectives Kaiser to keep the property until it could be turned over to his wife, Rose Wand Tillian, who is now in Chicago.

To Pile Sufferers

I am presenting in this advertisement extracts from letters written by former cured, grateful patients. I have hundreds upon hundreds of just such letters, written by people in every walk of life, such as ministers, bankers, mechanics, farmers, merchants, lawyers and doctors. Almost every one of them come to me with a very bad case of piles, fistula, or fissure. Many had been trying for years to get cured, had doctored and spent much money. Some had given up all hopes of ever getting cured. Therefore, it will pay any afflicted person to come and see me, let me examine and tell them exactly what I can do for them. I give consultation and make examination free, and when I examine them I can tell exactly how much my fee will be, and about how long it will take to effect a cure. To those who wish, I will give terms so that they can pay as they go along, or they can deposit the fee we agree upon in the First National Bank, in St. Louis, payable to me after they are cured, and the patient will be the judge. This is fair to both you and me. All I want to know is that after I cure you, I will get the fee we agree upon.

Read the contents of this advertisement carefully, and then write to any, or as many of the parties whose names appear, as you wish, and learn from them what I did for them. It is perfectly reasonable that what I did for them I can do for you.

HERE is another illustration position to save money.

John's younger brother, Fr when the Civil War broke out. asked for a loan of $75 to cover ing to war.

John couldn't see the going-to-war idea. He told his brother that he would be a wild, foolish boy to go away and waste youthful years that he might utilize in getting a start and making money.

So Frank went to his brother's partner, George Gardner, and asked for a loan of $75. Gardner told him that John had plenty of money and should be the one to stake him, but that if John wouldn't, to come to him again.

Frank once more endeavored to "touch" brother John, but John —for Frank's own good, as he explained it—absolutely refused to advance money for any such martial purpose.

"I let Frank have the $75," related Commodore Gardner. "I told him to take it and pay me back some time if he could, and if he couldn't well and good. And so," added Gardner with a chuckle, "Frank never did."

Throughout the war Frank Rockefeller fought for his country. Then he returned and engaged in business with John, apparently having forgiven him for his refusal to let him have that $75. John D. Rockefeller left school at 16, when about half way through his high school course. Prior to going into partnership with Messrs. Obviously he could not have saved that amount out of his meager wages, even though he never indulged himself in frivolities and spent practically nothing except 10 or 15 cents each week contributed at Sunday school. The answer is that most of the $5000 was put up by his father, William A. Rockefeller, man of mystery.

"One of the most companionable and most likable old men I ever knew was John Rockefeller's father," said George W. Gardner. It had been our custom in our business for each partner to draw interest at the rate of 10 per cent of what ever money he had to his credit on our books.

"Now, here was the strange thing. Immediately after each visit of John's father to Cleveland John would either add $500 or $1000 to his account, or else draw out a like sum. The natural supposition was that John's father either gave or took away the money. I wondered what busines

HERE is another illustration of John D. Rockefeller's early disposition to save money.

John's younger brother, Frank, was anxious to go to the front when the Civil War broke out. Frank went to brother John and asked for a loan of $75 to cover the expense of preparations for going to war.

John couldn't see the going-to-war idea. He told his brother that he would be a wild, foolish boy to go away and waste youthful years that he might utilize in getting a start and making money.

"I had to go to Philadelphia one day to get some information regarding some customers we had there. As I didn't have the acquaintance of another soul in the Quaker town it struck me that John's father might be able to help me in getting the information I was after. So I asked John for his father's address. He hesitated and finally said he couldn't remember it.

"That seemed strange, but I made no comment and asked him to get it from his mother when he went home at noon. I thought no more about it until that evening when I got ready to start for my train. Again I asked him for the address. He flushed up and said he'd forgotten to ask for it when he went home. I pressed him no further, and never found out where his father lived."

According to Commodore Gardner, Rockefeller never was guilty of but one extravagance during the years that they were associated. That was in regard to his clothes. While still in his early twenties John began to have his clothes made by the most expensive tailor in Cleveland, paying probably as much as $50 for a suit.

He is known to have wasted money only one other time, and that waste was not willful. This story is vouched for by a close relative of Rockefeller's partner, the late Samuel Andrews, and was told to this relative by Andrews himself. Whenever the partners would succeed in buying up a competing oil refinery Rockefeller would exhibit great glee. It was not uncommon for him to rush into Andrews' office, grab his partner by the shoulders and dance about him like a tom-tom bearer, shouting excitedly, "We've got another one, Sam! One more into the fold!"

Often he would throw his hat into the air in his exultation, like an undergraduate at a football game. On one of these occasions in his hilarity he accidentally jumped on his hat as it fell to the floor. The hat was a complete wreck. He could wear it no more. After making certain that its usefulness was quite ended he went forth sadly to the marts and bought another.

Retained Old Home.

One needless extravagance that Rockefeller carried on for many years was the maintenance of his old town house at Euclid avenue and East 40th street, Cleveland. Before days of automobiles, when it required considerable time for him to drive from the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church to his Forest Hill estate in East Cleveland, he would stop at the town house after church for Sunday dinner.

For years the Cleveland town house lay idle. He could have sold it or leased it long before he did, and invested the money more profitably, but he preferred to keep the old home ready for use on short notice, despite the expense. Long after he had severed all business connections in Cleveland, he continued to spend his summers at Forest Hill—until a few years ago when his house there burned down.

On the golf links he is as careful of the little gutta-percha spheres that he knocks about the field as if he knew not where to

HOW TWO MISSOURIANS BOUGHT $25,000,000 RAILROAD WITH $50,000 CASH AND GOT BACK SOME CHANGE

Unusual Story of High Finance in Which a Lawyer and a Financier Aquire the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient, Nearly 1000 Miles of Track, at Foreclosure Sale, by Actual Cash Payment of Only $37,000.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, June 13.

PREPARATIONS are being made to appeal from Federal Judge Pollock's order confirming the sale of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad. This property, which cost more than $25,000,000, and includes nearly 1000 miles of road in the United States and Mexico, recently was bid in at a foreclosure sale at a price of $3,000,000 under circumstances which required an actual cash payment of only $37,000.

If the order is sustained, the people who had their money invested in the road stand to lose it. Among them are Henry Ford, who had $500,000 invested, and Senator Couzens of Michigan, who has an investment of $125,000. Some of the largest investors were English noblemen, and they are resisting the sale tenaciously. The objectors say their appeal will be taken to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

As the matter stands now, the road has passed into the hands of a local syndicate, headed by William T. Kemper of Kansas City, Democratic national committeeman from Missouri, and Clifford Histed, a Kansas City attorney. The event was made possible by a strange and romantic procession of events, culminating in a spectacular display of generosity on the part of the Government, which not only furnished most of the money with which the bid was satisfied, but loaned the purchaser an additional $1,000,000 with which to buy new equipment.

Investors Couldn't Believe Such a Plan Possible.

Writing several months ago to the authors of the scheme, a lawyer representing some of the investors said:

"If we understand your plan, you are proposing that in return for the $5,640,000 which the noteholders put into this railroad they get substantially nothing, while in return for putting in substantially nothing you get the railroad.

"To take another aspect of the matter, after the noteholders and the public have been beaten off the bidding line by the terms of the sale (fixed by Judge Pollock) requiring $3,000,000 cash, you are now seeking to acquire the property for no cash. To consummate this plan, you have asked the Secretary of the Treasury and the Interstate Commerce Commission to join with you and use $3,000,000 of public property. We do not think you can entertain the romotest hope that either the Secretary or the commission will do any such thing, or that any Federal Court will sanction such a thing."

In this, however, he was mistaken, for that is precisely what happened. In consequence, the local syndicate now has the railroad and the Government is financing it to the extent of $4,000,000, under extremely liberal terms. Many of the original investors, that is, the people who built and equipped the road, are said to have abandoned hope of recovering any of their investment.

To be sure, the picture has another side. Kemper and Histed declare their plan was the only one which offered any solution of the road's difficulties, that the investors repeatedly failed to come to its rescue, that unless they had stepped in the road would have been scrapped, and the Government might have lost all it already had loaned. They took the road over only after its rightful owners had plainly indicated their intention of washing their hands of it, they declare. Much is to be, much has been, and more undoubtedly will be said on both sides of the dispute.

Small Investors Carry Out "Vision" of A. E. Stillwell.

The history of the Orient, as the road is called, is romantic and tragic. It always was a maverick. It was built by "little" people, small fry investors, living far from Wall Street, where such enterprises usually are financed. Started by a man who had little besides an idea and an enthusiasm which he was able to communicate to others, it has survived some dizzy financing. Its present ownership, some investors allege, is the fruit of a scheme carried out over a period of 10 years. In denial of that charge, the owners offer much evidence.

Arthur E. Stillwell was the ace among high-pressure insurance salesmen in Kansas City 30 years ago. Reluctant purses yawned at his magic voice. He became a Christian Science practitioner, and turned to larger things. He envisaged a railroad 1650 miles long, that would extend from Kansas City diagonally west and south across Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, and the Mexican States of Chihuahua and Sonora, ending at Topolobampo Bay, on the Gulf of Southern California, thus tapping a rich but largely unsettled empire. He said the plan came to him in a vision.

Such a project would eventually cost in the neighborhood of $75,000,000. Stillwell had no such sum, but raising money was his forte. He went into one of his trances and came out prepared. In addition to organizing a railroad company, he organized numerous subsidiaries, such as construction companies, townsite companies and others. And this was his unique scheme. The construction companies would build the road, taking, in pay, the stocks and bonds of the railroad company. Investors in the construction companies would get, in addition to stocks and bonds of those companies, stocks and bonds of the railroad company. In addition, securities of all the companies would be sold to the public.

Stillwell sold his idea—for that was all he had to sell—to small bankers, small business men, and others throughout the Middle West and Southwest. He also sold it to some large English investors, men with big league banking connections. They furnished about 40 per cent of the original investment.

Instead of a continuous line, the road was built in patches. It never got farther east than Wichita, although an expensive terminal, known as the Outer Belt, was constructed at Kansas City. Eventually, however, a line that stretched 737 miles, from Wichita to Alpine, Tex., with but one 12-mile gap, was completed, and three widely separated stretches, including one at Topolobambo Bay, were built at Mexico, a total of about 250 miles on that side of the border.

Downfall of Diaz in Mexico Followed by Receivership.

If, however, Stillwell was unable to enlist influential support in America, he was more successful in Mexico, as well as in England. President Porfirio Diaz gave him every encouragement, and Diaz' son-in-law, Enrique Creel, was a member of the board of directors of the Mexican line. More practical still, Diaz promised an outright subsidy of $2,655,000, of which about half actually was paid. In those old days, the "Iron President" did about as he pleased with the Mexican Treasury.

The Orient never was adequately equipped. In 1924 alone, it paid $450,000 to other railroads for rented cars, and $250,000 in freight on coal for its own locomotives. Although traversing the oil fields of Oklahoma, it has no oil burners. To install them, and to buy more cars, will be one of the new company's first concerns. The Orient never paid a dividend, and never paid a cent of interest on its bonds or notes.

The 1910 revolution unhorsed Diaz and drove him from Mexican soil, and Stillwell lost his most powerful backer. Creditors filed a foreclosure suit in Judge Pollock's court in 1912, and receivers were appointed. One of them, the late Col. Edward Dickinson of Kansas City, is said to have sunk much of his fortune in efforts to rehabilitate the Orient.

In the ensuing reorganization, attempted at the instance of the English group, Stillwell was squeezed out completely, and retired to live in Paris. The Orient's original bonds being worthless and unsalable, and comprising, in consequence of Stillwell's extravagant plan, a top-heavy structure, it was virtually agreed to dump them into the waste basket, and to issue $6,000,000 of gilt-edged, two-year gold notes, secured by everything the Orient possessed, lock, stock and barrel. Many of the investors bought these notes. In addition, they were bought by new investors, including Ford and his then associate, the present Senator Couzens.

The plan swept away the flimsy paper structure hanging over the road; moreover, it brought the new life blood which the Orient most needed, namely, hard cash.

Alas, the Orient, instead of being at last out of the woods, was headed deeper in. Actually, $5,640,000 of the notes were sold, but it later was charged that much of the money, intended for the purchase of new equipment and the settlement of claims, went for counsel fees and other unproductive purposes. It was charged that members of the Reorganization Committee sold notes at 95 cents on the dollar to corporations in which they were interested, while the notes were bringing par on the open market.

Meantime, it should be recorded, three of the original construction companies, the International of Delaware, the International of Texas, and the Union, had gone into bankruptcy and their assets were in the hands of a trustee. These three concerns, subsidiaries of the Orient, had built much of the road, taking its bonds in payment. This had been easily arranged, because the railroad officers were also the construction company officers, and to accomplish the "payment" they had only to push the bonds across the table and then go around and pick them up.

English and American Committees in Disagreement.

The new Orient company made no headway toward pulling out of the hole, and defaulted on the interest on the notes which, falling from the noble estate of gilt-edge paper, were now being kicked around the street and picked up at 8 cents on the dollar. At this stage, certain investors now charge, was conceived a plan by which the road eventually was to be taken over by Kemper, Histed and their friends. This writer certainly has not the hardihood to assert that the charge is true; it is sufficient here to recite the facts which are advanced by each side in support or denial of it.

There appeared in 1916 a self-constituted Noteholders' Deposit Committee, of which Histed was a member, and of which he later apparently became the guiding spirit. Herbert F. Hall, wealthy Kansas City grain man; J. Z. Miller, banker; William J. Gray of De-

Things to Worry About, to Watch, and to Rejoice In As Outlined by Dr. Butler

President of Columbia University Dislikes Too Many Laws, Applauds Entrance of Labor Into Business and Spread of Adult Education—Keep an Eye on the Orient.

NEW YORK, June 14.

PRESIDENT NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER of Columbia University, before he sailed for Europe the other day, picked out of the tangled and changing fabric of our national life the things which we ought to worry about, the things we ought to watch with intense interest and the things we ought to rejoice over.

They are, in the order in which President Butler named them:

The heaping up of power in Washington. Something to worry about.

The new international position of the United States, the wealthiest and one of the greatest nations. Something to watch carefully.

The growth of great industrial corporations and trade associations. Something to welcome.

The sharing of labor in the management of industry through stock distribution and labor banks. Something to welcome.

The struggle of educators to define their mission anew. Something to worry about and to watch sympathetically.

The spread of adult education. Something to rejoice in.

The lack of contact between scholars, scientists and technicians and the rest of us—a lack of leadership, in other words, by those best fitted to lead. Something to worry about.

The impatience of the countries of the Orient at what they feel is the unwarranted dominance of the white race. Something to worry about.

An Impartial Onlooker.

Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia is the first university president since the days of Dr. Charles Eliot of Harvard to take a decisive part in shaping the world around him. No one is more fitted to take apart the life of today and to show what is happening deep in the core.

In the faculty of Columbia University he has a source of intimate contact with the men who are striding ahead in the formal arts and sciences. Beyond the university's gates his long career of public service has placed him in close association with all the significant figures of his time. Because he is an author and speaker, he has what is probably the largest personal mail of any man in New York. His letters come from all conditions of people in all parts of the world. Rarest of all, he has received all academic honors which can be bestowed upon him. Of late years he has been identified with no cause except the cause of Columbia, and he is one of the few men who can afford to look on the pushing and shouting crowd around them with impartially critical eyes.

There was an example of this a year ago, when Dr. Butler, for years an important figure in the Republican party, said there was no difference between a conservative Republican and a conservative Democrat. They agreed on every principle of government, he said, and went to the polls on election day to vote opposing tickets simply through force of habit. He urged that the nominal conservatives of both parties, who he said were the true liberals, unite against those in both parties who wish to give the Government in Washington more power.

Causes That Don't Matter.

Dr. Butler was asked what the things are which the citizen needs to worry about.

"Right now there is a wave of intolerance rushing over this country," Dr. Butler said. "The Ku Klux Klan, the Anti-Saloon League and the forthcoming anti-evolution trial in Tennessee are all phases of it. I am not sure but that the more virulently it is fought the longer it will persist."

The subject closest to Dr. Butler's heart, which he has discussed in books and speeches, is the tendency toward too much government. As he talks about it, it is evident he feels deeply. For an hour, hands clasped behind his back, he paced the library of his home on Morningside Drive. Historical illustration and epigram poured out in torrent. Examples of the endless ramifications of his subject were heaped up in an ever mounting pile.

Too Much Government.

"There are a few signs of a reaction against this tendency," he said. "I regard the defeat of the Child Labor Amendment, the Nationalization of Children Amendment, I call it, as the best evidence of political good sense the American people have given. With this stands the speech of President Coolidge at Arlington Cemetery on Memorial Day. No man is listened to as the President of the United States is. His able advocacy of decentralization of authority in that speech will be read and discussed by every one for days to come."

But generally, Dr. Butler finds, this tendency has been increasing since the Civil War.

"Since the beginning of nations," he continued, "there has been the division between the field of authority and the field of liberty, the things which must be done as the law provides and the things that may be done as we want to do them. The problem has been to take as much of life as possible from the field of authority and put it in the field of liberty. Now we are taking things which people have been doing by themselves perfectly well for years, and deliberately putting them under the supervision of some official in Washington.

"There is a great deal of talk about law enforcement. Laws can't be enforced unless people want to obey them. When a law like the Volstead act is passed, which large numbers of the people do not want to obey, it simply falls into desuetude. We do not need to worry about law enforcement. We need to see rather that only those laws which are capable of being enforced are passed.

Advice to Young Men.

"It isn't a question of States' rights. That question ceased to exist when, in the Civil War, it was decided that States could not refuse to obey Federal laws and could not withdraw from the Union. It is a question of preventing the Government from interfering with our daily lives any more than we can help."

Dr. Butler told what we can do about this.

"This country is governed necessarily by one of two great political parties. Young men and women come to me every year and ask me what they should do to fulfill their duties as a citizen. I tell them to join their local political club, to try and make the other members see as they do, and to vote for the men who, as President Coolidge has shown himself to be, are for less government and more liberty."

That is one thing for us to worry about. The next is the foreign affairs of the United States.

"Now we are feeling the exhaustion which follows hysteria and confusion," said Dr. Butler. "After the war, regard for our obligations to other nations and our own interests demanded that we assume a definite leadership. That leadership, temporarily at least, we have now lost.

"Economics will teach us that we cannot withdraw from the rest of the world. We are a great food-producing nation. At last our farmers realize that the price of their grain is determined by the world market in Liverpool, and that if the market is injured by the loss of Oregon and Tennessee.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

TWO of the 48 states that have stars in our flag have the unenviable distinction of attempting to abrogate our constitutional guarantees.

The State of Oregon attempted to force its public school system upon the patronage of the citizenry to the exclusion of its unquestionable right to have private or institutional schools of their own. The final decision on such a vicious statute was rendered by the United States Supreme Court, and that decision was made the more emphatic by the fact that there was no "dissenting opinion;" the decision being unanimous.

This State of Tennessee is now in the limelight of another attempt to strangle American freedom. The Tennessee Legislature has passed a law forbidding the teaching of any theory of Creation contrary to that taught in the Bible? and thus has made itself the butt of ridicule of all thinking men, and, besides, has exposed itself to the satires of paragraphers, humorists and cartoonists.

If the States of Oregon and Tennessee could find such statutes referred to as "constitutional" when submitted to Supreme Court decisions, what, alas! would be the next steps in the way of abolishing human freedom! It is indeed a sad plight that State legislators—the very men whose acts should stand as a buttress against the attacks upon constitutional freedom—that these "solons" should be the first to assail that which every American holds dear. Such acts, it would seem, are treasonable, and should they become more prevalent, it would not be a surprise if the legislators who pass such iniquitous laws and the Governors who sign them will find themselves required to answer to their constituents in trials for "impeachment."

Is This Convincing?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I NOTICE there is a fierce controversy going on in your columns as to who wrote the plays usually attributed to Shakspeare—Marlowe or Shakspeare himself. Now, I have an entirely new solution of the question, which, so far as I know, has never been thought of before. The plays were written by Edgar Guest. If any one objects that Mr. Guest could not possibly have written them before he was born, I answer he could just as easily have done so as that Mr. Marlowe could have written them after he was dead.

Keeping a Promise.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE one thing that makes and leaves the most lasting impression is the lack of character shown in the utter disregard of a promise, because it is an inseparable attribute of civilized people. We all know how much we admire the man or woman on whose word we can implicitly rely; but we all know at the same time how very seldom this admiration is experienced. Honor—it is all summed up in that. The man or woman of honor regards the most trivial promise as sacred. This honor is usually ingrained in the nature. Seemingly, it cannot be taught or acquired; and yet there is such a thing as instilling and acquiring it. In a nation of civilized people we can place about as much reliance in the promise of an enlightened person as we could in the utterance of an unlettered and uncivilized barbarian. Since education has for its object the uplifting of the race, why does character-forming still hold a secondary place, or no place at all, in our schools? This character-forming should begin in the public schools; because it is in the very young that the seeds of good most easily take root, but along with all other changes, our public schools are now given over to fads and theatricals.

Birds of a Feather.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN answer to "Modern Girl," if she is looking for a modern sheik and drug store cowboy she has no kick coming. Many girls today call themselves decent and modern, but I doubt it very much. The decent modern girl must not look for a drug store cowboy as the "more modern girls" command his attention. "Birds of a feather flock together" and if you are not one of the "more modern girls" you have and command no attention from that class. You can find decent fellows who do not cater to the sheik class. But if you do not care for a plain, decent fellow, you must resign yourself to your self-made fate. A plain, decent fellow will always appreciate and respect the company of a decent girl, but he is not going to go on his knees for the chance. The girls of today give young men an impression that they are doing them a big favor. I know this will be hard to soak in for those that have shingled roofs and are "modernism personified."

HAUK.

A DIPLOMATIC BOLT.

The American people were quite dumfounded, we are sure, by Secretary of State Kellogg's so-called statement on the Mexican situation. The Associated Press dispatch describes it as a "blunt warning." It is all of that and more. It is a severe, unfriendly, even hostile declaration. It sounds like an ultimatum which could only be warranted by protracted dereliction and bad faith, plus overt acts against the persons and property rights of our nationals in Mexico. If such grievances exist the American people as a whole are unaware of them.

Mr. Kellogg says that "relations are friendly, but conditions are not entirely satisfactory." It seems that complaints have been made to our State Department by American property owners in Mexico. But the complainants are not the owners or lessees of oil lands, as most of us would at once assume. The complaints, it is explained, have to do with agricultural lands. It is charged that a Government bureau, called the "National Agrarian Commission," with headquarters in Mexico City, has been "seizing farms and ranches under real or pretended Government authority." The extent of its seizures is not indicated, nor is the identity of the American victims of this policy disclosed, and until those facts are given out public judgment as to the justification of our Government's position must be withheld.

But the manner of our State Department is extraordinary. Moreover, there are certain statements of alleged fact in the Kellogg pronunciamento to which exception must be taken. The implied weakness of the Calles Government, for example. Whatever Calles' defects, weakness cannot be included in them. His is a career of iron will, iron purpose, iron strength. From an adobe hut to the Castle, by way of teaching school and preaching the gospel of enlightenment and land ownership for the peon and fighting for his vision—there is a path no weakling could have traveled.

As a matter of fact, the general impression in the United States has been that President Calles was more than meeting the high expectations which his election inspired. Indeed, that is the information which has come out of Mexico in numerous articles by American observers recounting the achievements of the Calles administration and stressing the fine tone of integrity in that country's official affairs. The belief has prevailed on this side of the border that Mexico was at last emerging from the night of feudal caste into a day of dignity and freedom and opportunity for the masses of the Mexican people.

That such a transition, or, rather, such a transformation, could be accomplished without harsh experiences and roughshod policies in many instances, is of course impossible. It is very likely that confiscation has been employed and it may be that American holdings have been partitioned in the process of making the peon a freeholder. If that is the case, just compensation for property honestly acquired should be demanded. But it is difficult to believe that Americans have been ruthlessly and persistently victimized in this fashion. If they had, would we not have heard something about it? How is it that those wrongs have been silently borne until they attained a stature calling for such a blast as has just issued from our State Department?

Either the situation in Mexico is far graver than the American people suspected or Mr. Kellogg's statement is inexplicable. And as for the rumors of a revolution by that professional malcontent, Huerta, which the statement hopes are unfounded, there is just this to say: If Huerta is not plotting a revolution the statement from Washington may well encourage him to start one.

Secretary Kellogg, we believe, has unwittingly done a serious disservice to the Calles Government by his departure from diplomatic traditions and from the usages that obtain between friendly nations.

WARREN S. STONE.

The late Warren S. Stone represented the highest and most valuable type of labor leader. After 25 years at the throttle, he assumed the chieftainship of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in 1903, on the death of P. M. Arthur, notably able and conservative. Now, after 22 years of Stone's leadership, the brotherhood is literally bursting with prosperity and well-being. The wealth of the organization, accumulated largely through the executive capacity of Stone, is in banks, trust companies and office buildings, and amounts to the huge sum of $150,000,000.

For a labor union to embark in enterprises hitherto regarded as the special province of capitalism has caused no end of wondering and, from some quarters, ironic comment. Assuredly, such affluence as the brotherhood's was unknown and undreamed of a quarter of a century ago. Yet the results are in every way satisfying.

In labor disputes, Stone's methods were agreement and arbitration. Stone never lost a fight completely, nor—mark the fact!—was one major strike ever called by him. He met the railroad executives on their own plane. A business man he was, not an agitator. A diplomatist, not a user of violence or fanaticism.

While Stone, because of the restricted nature of his office, never became such a public figure as Samuel Gompers, he made for himself a very decided place in American life. He was respected by his adversaries, and loved by the men to whom he gave 22 years of unremitting service—service crowned with brilliant achievements.

STUDENT REVOLUTIONS.

"It has been decided that students of three countries—China, Germany and Russia—will start an organization which will unite the nations of the world in the cause of the revolutionary party."

Thus reads a letter signed by Yu Hankao, dated from a Berlin address and found at Shanghai University in raids made by the police in connection with the present disturbances.

A revolution by students. What a pity that they take themselves so seriously until they arrive at years of riper judgment, sobering experience. Students in revolutions are not the exception but the rule. Disgusted with the conditions and injustices they see about them, unacquainted with human nature in the mass, ignorant or forgetful of the slow, painful processes of history, untutored in their perspective of values, fired with idealism, blinded with the optimism of the juvenile, they lend themselves whole-souled to the gospel of a new order. Down with gray beards, down with experience. We will teach the docile, stupid oldsters. We know.

Naturally student revolutionists have the courage of their convictions. They shoot to kill and expect their foes to do the same. Of course, they should be restrained. It is a pity that a better way than shooting cannot be found. There are fine spirits among the student revolutionists who only need experience and knowledge to mellow into strong, progressive men.

CORRECT THIS INJUSTICE.

Now that the point has been brought into the limelight and suits are to be filed against Mayor Miller, his clients and others who have refused to make State income tax returns, is it not time to join the issue in favor of an amendment to the State law to permit a taxpayer to deduct his losses from the income on which he pays a tax?

This question is entirely apart from the legality or propriety of Miller's course. On the latter point Attorney-General Otto indorses the contention of the Post-Dispatch when he says that Mayor Miller as a lawyer should have known that the way to proceed, if he believed the clause unconstitutional, was to file his return and then seek a court test on the clause that he believed unconstitutional.

The clause disallowing deduction of losses is manifestly unjust, but, as former Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court says in commenting on an income-tax decision, a law may be palpably unjust without being unconstitutional.

The Missouri income tax law, in forbidding the taxpayer to deduct losses sustained in investments for profit outside of his regular business, except as they exceed his profit, is "palpably unjust." It was copied from the Federal income tax law of 1916. But when the Federal law was amended to permit of the deduction of losses from taxable income, the Missouri Legislature failed, from neglect or oversight, to amend the State income tax law accordingly. It should have been amended, and every cent collected on income lost in investment has been an extortion. Because of the small amount of the tax, men have paid it rather than go to law about it, and some have not paid and have not gone to law.

Let justice take its course on the issue of not making returns or of refusing to pay. But to prevent further injustice in this matter, the Legislature should amend the law with the least possible delay.

GENEVA'S "COMEBACK."

The Geneva conference on the traffic in arms, following early discouragement, has begun to work out its salvation. Familiarity, through work and association, has reduced fear and mistrust. Cynicism and defeatist prophecy have been routed. The apostles of failure had their day of gloating over the ruins of the conference before it fairly began, and at the time seemed justified. But a turn has come. Warships and airplanes are to be brought back to the scope of the convention.

The climax of the conference was reached, however, under the spell of the oratory of Theodore E. Burton, at the head of the American delegation, and Paul Boncour of France. The speeches of these delegates aroused the convention to a high pitch of enthusiasm which registered itself in a decision to go on record as favoring the immediate framing of a special protocol outlawing for all time the use of asphyxiating gas and bacteria in warfare. The protocol was later adopted.

Mr. Burton declared further that President Coolidge stood ready to extend an invitation to a special conference in Washington to act on the recommendations of the Geneva gathering. This expression of more than a passive interest on the part of America made a deep impression on the delegations.

Boncour not only called for condemnation of the barbaric use of gas in war but insisted on penalties. Such sentiments from France, now the leading military Power of Europe, and from the United States, the greatest Power outside the League of Nations, were regarded as especially significant.

Next to the amelioration of war will follow the endeavor to outlaw war itself. And while the pessimists and reactionaries flit from one imaginary ruin to another the determined champions of organized peace are devoting themselves to continuous effort and are getting results.

AS MUSSOLINI FADES.

In his vigor, Mussolini made himself the most powerful autocrat in the world. Now, with a physique wasted by a cancerous growth, he is trying to perpetuate a rule of iron which he alone was able to attain. In the course of preparation for his retirement, a dispatch from Italy says that Mussolini is preparing laws abolishing all constitutional guarantees and placing the entire executive budget in the hands of the Ministry, thereby removing power from Parliament.

Mussolini knows he must go, but he wants fascism to stay. He is obsessed with this thing which has been built around his own remarkable personality. This organization he wants to perpetuate as his memorial. For men to desire that their work should go on after they depart is a common, and often a laudable, ambition. But it is curious that Mussolini does not realize that his dictatorship is a peculiarly personal one, more than likely to crumble when passed to other hands.

Even his most loyal supporters in Parliament must be alarmed at this latest move. Is it likely that they will pass laws shearing themselves of power, making of themselves puppets in the hands of a future master—not the opportune dictator who saved Italy from disaster but an unknown clothed only in supreme power?

ESSAY ON TENDERNESS.

Soon, we are promised, there will be a way to test the tenderness of beefsteaks. Little by little the uncertainties of life are being measured by science. Nothing is more uncertain than a beefsteak. Hitherto the word of the butcher has been our only assurance. A butcher's word, we are sorry to say, is usually as uncertain as his steak. He pats it lovingly and murmurs comforting words to us as we carry it from his shop, but we are never sure. We eye the steak as it comes to the table and with a hopeful knife explore the unknown. We struggle, we clench our teeth on gristle and are disillusioned.

But all this will shortly be set right. The Bureau of Standards of the Department of Agriculture has developed instruments to ascertain the tensile strength and torsional strain of a beefsteak. Armed with instruments like these housewives will reduce beefsteak buying to a certainty. "Try our beefsteaks," the butcher will advertise. "They are guaranteed to have low tensile and torsional equations. Save your husband's teeth and temper." The wife will but have to measure the angular force of her husband's jaw and the tensile resistance of the beefsteak to be scientifically sure that the steak is tender. If he questions the tenderness of the steak she can prove that her calculations were accurate.

KIM—AN OZARK MELODY.

Kim is a silent girl with knee-long hair
Of deepest brown, and morning-glory eyes;
Eyes where young dreams lie, softly as dew lies
Upon the sleeping rose, and she dwells there
Amongst the mountains where she can look down
On twenty blue hills in a row, and a valley town.

On Echo Mountain, where with globes of light
Wild grapes empurple all the autumn wood,
And drape old fences, and with sun-sweetened blood
Dark apples redden through the mellow night,
She dwells, and hears across the fields of dew
The sky-lark singing high in heaven's blue.

She walks with bare brown feet in fern-soft ways,
Hears sunset's trumpets shout across the skies;
She sees the long cathedral arches rise
Vaulting the wood—she sees the summer haze
Ripen above the hills into a fold
Of rose and turquoise edged with purest gold.

She knows the waterfall where dark pines sigh—
And as one knows a friend she knows the dim
And lilied pool upon whose shadowed rim
The cool wind dreams while summer heats pass by—
She knows the spring hills where white clouds lean
To earth, and violets sod the dells between.

And in a cabin set against a hill,
Wild rose embowered to the mossy eaves,
An old man dozes and an old woman weaves
A pattern of vague memories, watching still
The meadow path, of pinkies and sweet grass
Where Kim's light feet on various duties pass.

Nor is she daughter, but of alien race
A foundling left by circus folk in town—
Keeping the old nest when the rest have flown,
Lighting those dimming lives with her sweet grace.
How willingly she lends her youth to make Ease for her gentle foster-parents' sake.

Sometimes beneath the rising moon in spring
I hear her singing homeward from the fields,
Or laden with apples that an orchard yields
In summer twilights; nor can the skylark sing
In sweeter cadences than she, so light and clear
Her untaught voice enchants the atmosphere.

And sometimes Sunday in unaccustomed shoes,
And plain dark dress and collar crisp and white,
She stands 'neath the church window and the light
Paints her with rose and gold and twinkling hues,
That, singing ancient hymns, devout and quaint,
She is as lovely as a haloed saint.

With coronal braids about her little head
And downcast eyes she hears the deacon's prayer.
Then out again in winsome sun and air
Larry Benares walks home with her—'tis said
He lingers on though now the bridge is done,
Fast in the net she all unconscious spun.

So goes it, youth to youth eternal calls,
Beauty to valor, innocence to strength—
And walking down the forest's shadowed length,
They pause a moment at the waterfall,
Hearing the murmur of its ceaseless strife
A pulse that beats the measured rhyme of life.

Sir: Mr. Cownie of Des Moines, as you suggest, is undoubtedly King of the Babbitts and as such entitled to shake hands with the King of England or any other country.

Another fact deserves notice. Being a glove manufacturer, he of course wears gloves on every occasion. Here was an opportunity to do a little advertising—not merely "national," but international. So as he grabbed the King's mitt he varied the time-honored formula by saying: "Excuse my 'Cownie' glove."

THIS VOLSTEAD BUSINESS.

From the Nation.

THIS Volstead business is going too far. It is time to call a halt when three Virginia gentlemen, professors in the University of Virginia, are arrested and indicted on the charge of driving an automobile when intoxicated, of transporting intoxicants, and of appearing on a highway under the influence of liquor. We submit that from the days of Patrick Henry, and long before that, it has been the privilege of Virginia gentlemen to have their little drop after every meal if they please, to carry their liquor with them either inside or on their persons, and to carry it steadily or unsteadily as they prefer. Now these gentlemen were chiefly guilty, it appears, of letting a flask lie upon the bottom of their motor car instead of having it in one of their pockets—an accident likely to happen to any gentleman, especially if his motor car, as in this case, proceeds of its own volition to turn upside down on the public highway. We are sure that there could have been no other connection between the flask and the upset than that the upset jarred the flask out of its proper resting place. We can understand, too, how after the upset the three gentlemen, being a bit shaken, walked so as to give suspicious police a chance to misunderstand. Shades of Col. Carter of Cartersville! Do these officious minions of the law really believe that one flask could upset the equilibrium of three Virginia gentlemen? The authorities should apologize at once, quash the indictments, rebuke the police, and persuade the professors to withdraw their resignations from the faculty founded by Thomas Jefferson. The professors, two being of the department of philosophy, doubtless recall that it was one drink which finished their master, Socrates.

COMMERCIAL AIRPLANE SERVICE.

From the Ohio State Journal.

THE imminence of the airplane as a factor in the commercial transportation field is suggested once more by the incorporation in Chicago of a company whose business at the start will be to carry express and freight matter between Chicago and New York. The names of many men distinguished for success in business or in airplane development appear in the list of incorporators. The company is capitalized at $10,000,000, and none of the stock will be offered to the public, since the men directly interested want it all for themselves. That looks like confidence in the success of the undertaking. The company's carriers will fly at night over a lighted airway connecting the two great cities. It will take a plane about seven and one-half hours to make the one-way trip, the saving of a full day as compared with the service of the railroads. The advantage of the new transportation method will be in the matter of time, which is of great value in business. The service between New York and Chicago is believed by the promoters to be only a starter. If the enterprise succeeds, as seems highly probable, it will be capable of vast expansion. Where will the railroads be 25 years from now?

Judge Pollock Appoi Ken

The assets of the three bankrupt construction companies, which had remained in the hands of a trustee since 1914, were sold at public auction Feb. 10, 1917, to Peter W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City, Kan., for $351,403. D. J. Haff, representing the English investors, made an unsuccessful bid of $350,000. These assets consisted of claims against the Orient, actual title to a considerable portion of the road, completed and uncompleted, being claimed. Interest on the gold notes being still in default, Judge Pollock in April, 1917, appointed Kemper receiver for the road. Kemper had come into the picture earlier, by buying about $300,000 of the gold notes, some of them at far below par, the entire lot costing him, however, more than $100,000. Histed was general solicitor for the road as well as being on the Deposit Committee.

One of Kemper's first actions as receiver was to obtain Judge Pollock's permission to issue $2,500,000 of receiver's certificates, which constituted a first claim on the property even having priority over the notes.

Kemper informed the Court the proceeds of the certificates were urgently needed. Chief among these urgent needs, he said, was that of buying the construction company assets from Goebel, to whom he paid $850,000 of the certificates, for the assets which Goebel had bought for $351,403. It represented a neat profit of about $500,000.

"Sure it was a good profit," Goebel said to the writer a few days ago. "But the sale was public; anybody could have bid. Naturally I got them for as little as possible, and sold them for as much as I could get. I was in the deal to make money." He said others were

As a matter of fact, the certificates later were redeemed in full with money which Kemper borrowed from the Government. This, however, is getting ahead of the story, and, as Kemper and Histed hereafter occupy the chief roles in the story, a brief portrait of each will not be inappropriate here.

Kemper is a typical Middle Western banker-politician-business man. A big-framed man, with a Western accent and an embracing voice and gesture, crafty and good-natured, he is a type of good executive, one who handles men ably, and plays his cards with boldness and discrimination. It is easy to fancy him sitting in a hotel room, with a palm-leaf fan and a pitcher of lemonade, running a political convention.

Histed is a little man with a winning smile and Napoleonic energy. He has finesse and an enormous capacity for legal points and detail. He would pull innumerable wires with unerring touch and a swift skill. Then he would smile his magnetic smile, and offer meticulous, soft-voiced explanations.

A winning team—Kemper and Histed. A formidable combination, even for Wall street, or Lombard street, to tackle.

In addition to paying Goebel, Kemper used $250,000 of the receiver's certificates to settle claims held by the Carnegie Steel Co. Other noteholders have since charged that their own notes represented claims of exactly the same sort.

"That's right," Kemper admitted. "But they made the mistake of taking the notes for their claims. I'd have been glad to pay Goebel off in notes, too, but he wouldn't have them."

Before much else could transpire under the receivership, the United States entered the war, and the Government took over the railroads. Director-General McAdoo was opposed to taking over the Orient. His solicitor, John Barton Payne, said "the road never should have been built, and having been built, should be incontinently abandoned."

Pressure was brought to change McAdoo's opinion. Some politics was used. Delegations went to Washington. There are many Democrats in Texas. It was pointed out that 35 towns are served exclusively by the Orient, and that they are nearer the Orient than to any other railroad. In Texas alone, it is claimed, a territory larger than Texas is dependent on the Orient. There is no doubt that it would have gone hard with these communities if the road had suspend-

Most of the noteholders, being scattered over the country, out of touch with each other and with the situation, complied with the invitation, turned in their notes and signed the agreement.

The English group followed this example, forming a committee of their own. Sir George A. Touche, Sir John Harmond-Banner, Donald C. Haldeman, Philip de Belle Tuckett and William S. Poole were members. Unlike the American investors, the English group was composed almost entirely of seasoned financiers, who acted as a compact unit; and apparently knew what they were about. The coming of the war in 1914, however, had knocked most of their plans galley west. They had more desperate concerns nearer home. The war, and the embargo on capital, had contributed largely to wrecking the 1914 reorganization, which they had sponsored.

The American Noteholders' Committee and the English Noteholders' Committee, the former holding about $3,000,000 of the notes and the latter holding about $2,000,000, never worked in harmony, and eventually came into open antagonism, which has reached a crisis in the present fight for possession of the road.

Judge Pollock Appoints Kemper to Be Receiver

The assets of the three bankrupt construction companies, which had remained in the hands of a trustee since 1914, were sold at public auction Feb. 10, 1917, to Peter W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City, Kan., for $351,403. D. J. Haff, representing the English investors, made an unsuccessful bid of $350,000. These assets consisted of claims against the Orient, actual title to a considerable portion of the road, completed and uncompleted, being claimed.

Interest on the gold notes being still in default, Judge Pollock in April, 1917, appointed Kemper receiver for the road. Kemper had come into the picture earlier, by buying about $300,000 of the gold notes, some of them at far below par, the entire lot costing him, however, more than $100,000. Histed was general solicitor for the road as well as being on the Deposit Committee.

One of Kemper's first actions as receiver was to obtain Judge Pollock's permission to issue $2,500,000 of receiver's certificates, which constituted a first claim on the property even having priority over the notes.

Kemper informed the Court the proceeds of the certificates were urgently needed. Chief among these urgent needs, he said, was that of buying the construction company assets from Goebel, to whom he paid $850,000 of the certificates, for the assets which Goebel had bought for $351,403. It represented a neat profit of about $500,000.

"Sure it was a good profit," Goebel said to the writer a few days ago. "But the sale was public; anybody could have bid. Naturally I got them for as little as possible, and sold them for as much as I could get. I was in the deal to make money." He said others were associated with him in the purchase and sale, but emphatically declined to name them. "It was a good bargain for the Orient at that," he said. "The assets were worth more than $1,000,000." In his petition to the Court, Kemper stated they could not be reproduced for upward of $3,000,000.

As the assets consisted of paper claims, and in view of the fact that the road desperately needed physical equipment and money with which to pay the interest it owed, the urgent need for immediate possession of the claims appears somewhat difficult to sustain now. Kemper, however, explains it.

"I thought a reorganization was coming," he said. "The road couldn't be reorganized with those claims outstanding. They claimed about 100 miles of the road outright. Goebel simply hamstrung us. He had us where he wanted us, and he took advantage of it. I had urged Haff to get authority from the Englishmen to bid as high as $500,000 for those assets, but they held him down to $350,000.

"When I went to buy the assets I argued with Goebel, as a banker and a public-spirited Kansas Cityan, to be satisfied with a reasonable profit, say $150,000. He was holding out for $1,000,000 then. Finally I got him down to $850,000, and he consented to take the certificates. Even then it was a larger profit than he had any conscientious right to make."

"Don't forget, though," interposed Histed, who was present at the interview, "that Goebel took a chance of losing everything if those certificates turned out worthless." The certificates, of course, were guaranteed by all the road's property and issued under the auspices of the Federal Court.

Saved by War-Time Operation by Government

As a matter of fact, the certificates later were redeemed in full with money which Kemper borrowed from the Government. This, however, is getting ahead of the story, and, as Kemper and Histed hereafter occupy the chief roles in the story, a brief portrait of each will not be inappropriate here.

Kemper is a typical Middle Western banker-politician-business man. A big-framed man, with a Western accent and an embracing voice and gesture, crafty and good-natured, he is a type of good executive, one who handles men ably, and plays his cards with boldness and discrimination. It is easy to fancy him sitting in a hot room with a palm-leaf fan and a pitcher of lemonade, running a political convention.

Histed is a little man with a winning smile and Napoleonic energy. He has finesse and an enormous capacity for legal points and detail. He would pull innumerable wires with unerring touch and a swift skill. Then he would smile his magnetic smile, and offer meticulous, soft-voiced explanations.

A winning team—Kemper and Histed. A formidable combination, even for Wall street, or Lombard street, to tackle.

In addition to paying Goebel, Kemper used $250,000 of the receiver's certificates to settle claims held by the Carnegie Steel Co. Other noteholders have since charged that their own notes represented claims of exactly the same sort.

"That's right," Kemper admitted. "But they made the mistake of taking the notes for their claims. They have been glad to pay Goebel off in notes, too, but he wouldn't have them."

Before much else could transpire under the receivership, the United States entered the war, and the government took over the railroads. Director-General McAdoo was opposed to taking over the Orient. His solicitor, John Barton Payne, said "the road never should have been built, and having been built, should be incontinently abandoned."

Pressure was brought to change McAdoo's opinion. Some politics was used. Delegations went to Washington. There are many Democrats in Texas. It was pointed out that 85 towns are served exclusively by the Orient, and that 27 are nearer the Orient than to any other railroad. In Texas alone, it is claimed, a territory larger than Illinois is dependent on the Orient. There is no doubt that it would have gone hard with these communities if the road had suspended, most of them having grown up along the line after it was built.

The Government took it over, and the only feature of the Orient which had always been strong, healthy and growing, namely, its annual deficit, became a temporary possession of the American taxpayer. The deficit in 1918 was $695,000; in 1919, $1,240,000, and in 1920, $1,400,000. The Government paid the deficit and $150,000 a year rental.

A survey at the end of Government operation showed the Government had paid $611,000 of company liabilities, $297,000 rental, $62,000 for surplus material, and $57,000 for miscellaneous items, a total of $1,027,000. Against this Kemper set up a counter claim of $2,196,000, of which $1,095,000 was for "undermaintenance" of the roadway, and $146,000 for "undermaintenance" of equipment. In short, he claimed an additional payment of $1,169,000 was due. The Government compromised and settled in March, 1921, for an additional lump sum of $250,000. But it was not through paying.

The Government guaranteed all the railroads against deficits for a period of six months following Government control. Under this guarantee, Kemper made a claim for $1,121,778 more. The Interstate Commerce Commission scaled it down to $1,025,778, and paid it. The last payment, amounting to $117,619, was made June 26, 1922.

"It would be unfair," Kemper said to the writer, "to suggest that the Orient got 1 cent from the Government that it wasn't entitled to. When the Government took the road, it had standard equipment, and was paying expenses. During Government control it was a busy railroad—hauling empties. It lost its commercial contacts, and it was not maintained. When it came back to us, it was a road without a clientele, and with a shattered plant. Moreover, wages had been raised, wages which we weren't able, nor shouldn't have been expected, to pay."

As the end of Government control approached, Histed, who had been in correspondence with the English group, began broaching the subject of financing a new reorganization. It is a curious fact that later caused comment in court, that Histed's letters, while ostensibly for the purpose of raising money, were of such a gloomy and pessimistic tone as to seem almost certainly calculated to discourage investment. The substance of them was that the outlook was none too good, but that if the English could see their way clear to putting in a large additional sum of money, the Orient might somehow be pulled out of the hole.

Kemper went to the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1920, and asked for a loan of $2,500,000 from the Government, with which to retire the receiver's certificates issued in 1917. The commission at first turned down the application, but when Histed told them that the road would be abandoned, and the communities along it allowed to perish, unless the money was forthcoming, the commission relented and approved the loan, and the Treasury Department advanced the money. Of course, $850,000 of this went to Goebel for the receiver's certificates which he had received for his bought-up claims, and another $250,000 retired the certificates given to settle the Carnegie Steel Co.'s claims.

Poole came over from London in 1921, and Kemper and Histed say that he assured Judge Pollock in a private interview that the English group would shortly finance and bring out a plan of reorganization that would take the road out of the receivership and out of the court. Histed returned to London with him to work out the plan, which, as completed, provided for the investment of $10,000,000 of new money in the road. But the plan fell through; the money was not raised.

The Kansas City Outer Belt, the road's eastern terminal, which had been constructed at a cost of $1,750,000, had been in a separate receivership since 1912. In 1922 Judge Pollock ordered it sold at public auction. It was purchased by Joseph Heim, a real estate man, traction magnate and capitalist, for $330,500, and added to the facilities of his Kaw Valley electric lines, a half interest being sold by him to the Kansas City Southern.

Heim appeared in an excellent way to duplicate, on the Outer Belt, the profits which Goebel had made on the contruction company assets deal, when, unfortunately for him, his own lines went into a receivership, and he sold his entire interest in the Outer Belt to the Kansas City Southern, at cost, plus interest on his investment.

The sale of the Outer Belt furnishes Kemper and Histed with another occasion to rail at the English. Both say they pleaded for months with Judge Pollock not to sell the terminal, but he told them that unless the Englishmen showed their good faith by putting up some real money to pay the belt's debts, he would sell it. They say that the Judge made the Outer Belt a test of the English group's earnestness in connection with the whole road, and that when they failed to come through with money to save it, Judge Pollock was satisfied they would never refinance the road.

Histed's doleful letters to the English continued, and in 1922 Judge Pollock himself sent a remarkable letter to Receiver Kemper, in which he stated that the Orient never had enjoyed the support of any large financial interests in the United States, that the American investors had long since charged off their investments, and that if the road was to be saved at all, it must be saved by and for the English. Histed promptly forwarded this letter to London.

Kemper says the Judge's purpose was to warn the English that they must expect to bear the burden, and that they must be prompt about it. "It appears possible, however, that the letter might have had the effect of frightening them out completely. An Englishman might reasonably conclude that if no experienced American investor would have anything to do with the Orient, an American property, the thing for an Englishman to do was to leave it severely alone.

The $2,500,000 Government loan had fallen due in December, 1921. There was no money to pay it, and Kemper induced the Interstate Commerce Commission to renew it for another two years. The first year's interest was paid, but none was paid afterward. As 1922 and 1923 passed, successive installments were defaulted.

Sold for $3,000,000 to Histed on Foreclosure

When a freight shipment is handled by two or more connecting roads, the payment which each road receives in called a "division." In 1921 Kemper applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for larger divisions on the freight handled jointly by the Orient and other roads. In 1922 the commission awarded division increases to the Orient which, it was estimated, would augment its revenues $500,000 a year. But the other roads appealed to the courts against the award, so that it was tied up. Pending a decision, however, the commission, which had plainly showed its intention of indulging the Orient, used its influence with the other roads to have them agree to a differential, whereby the Orient could offer lower rates in territory where it had competition, and could charge higher rates in territory where it was the only railroad. Judge Pollock went to Washington and used his good offices with the commission to have this done. At the same time the road was virtually exempted from taxation in Texas.

Nevertheless, when December, 1923, arrived, the Orient not only still owed the Government the $2,500,000 principal of the loan which had once been extended, but it also owed $313,000 of accrued interest, none of which, according to Kemper, it had the money to pay. Accordingly, Judge Pollock entered a decree of foreclosure, and ordered the road sold at auction.

Throughout all this period, Histed had continued to send gloomy and foreboding reports to the English group, letters ostensibly urging the investment of large additional sums in the property, but which, when read now, seem couched in such a deep note of discouragement that one wonders how Histed ever hoped in that manner to stimulate investment.

The deposit agreement signed by the noteholders provided: "In case of a sale, public or private, at any time, of the railroad property, the committee is hereby authorized and empowered to purchase the same for the purpose of this agreement (that is, to preserve the noteholders' interest), at such price as the committee may consider judicious, and to make any arrangements necessary to accomplish said purchase, including use of the notes."

The committee was further and specifically authorized to formulate and carry out a plan of reorganization.

The Orient was sold at auction, in Wichita, on March 27, 1924, and at that time, some of the noteholders now charge, Histed carried out a coup which betrayed the noteholders, and gave Histed, Kemper and their friends possession of the road. Histed and Kemper vigorously deny that the noteholders were betrayed, or that there was any scheme to get possession of the road. This is what happened:

The terms of the sale, fixed by Judge Pollock, provided that the successful bid must provide for taking care of the Government loan and accrued interest, which, at that time, amounted to $2,813,000, that the owner must agree to keep the road in operation, and that all bidders must post $50,000 to qualify.

Two bidders qualified, Histed and E. E. Mullaney. Mullaney bid the amount of the Government debt. P. S. Woods of Smithville, Mo., did not qualify, but offered a certified check for $10,000 as an earnest of good faith, and offered to make a bid conditional on his ability to get an extension of the Government debt. Ben McClain, the special master, did not let him bid. Histed bid $3,000,000, and the road was knocked down to him.

New Syndicate Formed When Government Extends Loan

Immediately afterward the law firm of Scarritt, Jones & North, of Kansas City, assuming that Histed had bid in the road as a member of the Noteholders' Committee and as a representative of the noteholders, wrote to Histed asking him what his intentions were. This firm represented the American Car and Foundry Co., holders of $135,000 of notes; the American Locomotive Co., with $100,000; the Union and Planters Bank and Trust Co. of Memphis, with $75,000; the Western Wheeled Scraper Co., with $15,000, and owned $10,000 worth on its own account.

Not satisfied with Histed's reply, which he considered evasive, W. C. Scarritt sent a second sharp letter, asking whether Histed had purchased the road in behalf of the noteholders, or as an independent bidder, hostile to the noteholders. Again the answer was vague.

Early this year, however, Histed announced a new and surprising reorganization scheme, in which he revealed himself as the independent owner of the road, as a result of his bid. He filed an application with Judge Pollock to confirm the sale and to approve the plan.

This plan provided for the organization of a new Orient company with stock of the par value of $7,500,000, of which he and Kemper were to receive $1,500,000 outright, as compensation for their work during the receivership. A syndicate which they had organized, and of which they were members, was to pay $1,250,000 for $2,000,000 worth, and the remaining $4,000,000 worth would be available for purchase by the noteholders, at the rate $110 worth of stock for $80.

But most interesting of all, Histed announced that he had been to Washington and had persuaded the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Treasury Department to agree to extend the Government loan for 15 years, and to wait indefinitely on the payment of the interest, which now had reached $463,000. Besides, they had agreed, in the event the sale was confirmed, to loan the new company another $1,000,000 of Government funds.

By this generous arrangement Histed was enabled to take credit on his $3,000,000 bid for the entire amount of the Government debt, $2,967,000, so that he would be required to pay only $37,000 in cash to get the road. Indeed, he already had posted $50,000 to qualify; hence, if the arrangement went through, he had $13,000 change coming.

Tuckett, representing the English group, had appealed to Judge Pollock to postpone the sale of the road. He pointed out that first the war, and then the chaos of the reconstruction period, had seriously crippled the English investors, and had prevented them from sending over new capital, or putting forward a reorganization plan. Those conditions now being greatly improved, he said, the English would shortly be in a position to come in, rehabilitate the road, and place its finances on a sound footing. Judge Pollock denied the request.

A hearing on Histed's application to confirm the sale was held before Judge Pollock in Kansas City, Kan., March 23 of this year. Objecting to confirmation of the sale appeared Elliot Jones of Scarrit, Jones & North, and Cyrus Crane, counsel for the English investors. Objections also were filed by the law firm of Aaron & Parker, representing Charles H. Jones. This was the law firm which, a few weeks earlier, had written to Histed the caustic comment on his plan mentioned earlier in this narrative. Crane represented holders of notes totaling approximately $2,000,000. Jones' firm represented holders of $335,000, and Charles H. Jones held $537,000, a grand total of about $2,870,000, or slightly more than half the notes outstanding.

The hearing was attended by quite a gathering of lawyers and railroad men, who followed the testimony and arguments with a lively professional interest. Histed, the first and principal witness, began with a glowing tribute to Judge Pollock.

"In the dark days that we have gone through," he said, "it was his wise counsel, finesse and vision that shaped the course and put courage into the men waging the battle."

Histed entertained the courtroom with a zestful account of how he had managed to induce the Government to extend the old loan, make a new one, and wait for the interest on the old one. This old interest presented peculiar difficulties, because the law expressly provides that the Treasury Department must collect interest when it is due, and that it must not lend money with which to pay interest owed it. Commissioner Meyer of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who handled the Orient's affairs, sent Histed to the Department of Justice for a ruling.

"A fine fellow by the name of Galloway, at the Department of Justice, worked a whole day on it," Histed testified. "He told me if there was any way in the world to get that interest extended, he would find it. But the law was plain, and I saw he was up against it. So I went back and saw Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey.

"'Now, look here,' I said. 'It's a sure thing the Government hasn't collected any of its interest so far. As long as the Government is satisfied to let the matter rest the way it is, we are.' In other words, I proposed to let this interest just run along. We are willing to trust the indulgence of the Treasury Department, and they are willing to trust us. We will pay that interest when we have the money.

"They have mildly suggested once or twice that we pay interest on that interest," smiled Histed, "but I think we will talk them out of that, too.

"Well," he went on, "you can imagine that it took considerable nerve to ask for another $1,000,000 loan right after we had defaulted on $467,000 interest on the old one, but I did it. I asked for it."

Lawyer Asserts Histed Betrayed Noteholders

It appears that when Commissioner Meyer recovered from the shock, he asked Histed how such a loan was possible. The legal difficulties seemed insuperable. Then, waxing indulgent and regretful, he said it was a pity Histed hadn't applied in 1920. Had he done so, it might have been changed since then.

"But," said Histed, "I remembered that Mr. Kemper had made such an application in 1920. I had almost forgotten about it. So I said: 'Why, we did; I have it right here in my papers.' Well, we fixed it up. Judge Pollock gave us all the necessary authority to revamp and revise it, Commissioner Meyer let us bring it up to date, and that old application, gentlemen," he concluded triumphantly, "is the vehicle on which we are going to ride into that $1,000,000 loan."

In his argument to the Court, E. T. Jones accused Histed of deliberately betraying the noteholders.

"The very claim which they had against this property was employed to bring about this sale and deprive them of their interest," he said. "Not only did the Deposit Committee, of which Histed was a member, have authority to bid in this property for the noteholders, but the agreement which they had signed deprived them of the right to use their notes for their own protection. When Histed went there and made his bid, the noteholders had every right to believe that he was acting as a member of the Noteholders' Committee. Yet this man went there in the garments of a member of the committee, bid the property in, and turned around and announced that he was an independent buyer.

"And now the people who built the road and equipped it are told that the only way they can retain their interest in the property is by buying stock from this new company at 72 cents on the dollar, while Histed, Kemper and their friends who never invested a dollar in the road, are permitted to buy stock at 62 cents on the dollar.

Turning his fire on the Court itself, Jones said Judge Pollock had no legal authority to make continued operation a condition of the sale, and, as a matter of fact, couldn't enforce such a condition. The very day after the sale was confirmed and the railroad passed out of the Court's hands, Histed could apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to abandon the road and sell it for junk, and the Court would be powerless, he said.

"The practical effect of this condition, he continued, "was to keep out any bidders who might have bought the road for its terminals, equipment and junk value, and confine the bidding to the family circle.

"The Deposit Committee never made any attempt to interest the American noteholders in a reorganization plan. All their overtures were made to the English investors, and it is perfectly plain from the correspondence that Histed intended to discourage them."

Crane's argument, in its general outlines, followed Jones'. Admitting that the protracted receivership had been exasperating to Judge Pollock, Crane nevertheless mildly suggested: "But this is a court of equity, and its first concern is to do justice, even if it does involve the annoyance of keeping this estate a little longer."

The objectors asked that the sale be set aside. Histed's plan rejected, and opportunity afforded the American and English noteholders to get together on a plan that would preserve their interests as well as the road's future.

All the influence of the Government, however, was thrown into the scales in favor of the Histed-Kemper plan. Alton Skinner, from the Treasury Department, took the stand and declared that the Government was favorable to the plan, and would help carry it out. While the Secretary of the Treasury wanted the English to get a fair deal, it felt that this was the time to adopt a constructive policy and abandon a waiting policy, he said.

He asked Judge Pollock to include in his decree the following stipulation: "Satisfactory arrangements have been made with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Interstate Commerce Commission for the extension of the payment of the principal of the indebtedness to the Treasury, pursuant to which the company to be organized by the bidder will assume and agree to pay that indebtedness." This "satisfactory arrangement," as heretofore described, consisted of an agreement to extend the principal for another 15 years, and to let the interest "just run along."

Judge Pollock's decision was prompt, emphatic and sweeping. He had allowed the property to remain in his court far too long already, he said. It was only his sympathy for the people along the line that had restrained him from abandoning it.

"If it hadn't been for the tireless energy of Mr. Kemper and Mr. Histed, and the hooks and crooks they have pulled this road through, there wouldn't be any property," he said.

He declared that certain American financial institutions had prevented the proper financing of the road, and added that "it has been the wish of other railroads in the same territory to have the Orient junked." He mentioned no names in connection with either accusation. Answering Jones' statement that the Court had no legal authority to make continued operation a condition of the sale, Judge Pollock said:

"I put certain things in the decree because we were compelled to do that to get the money for the road to live at all, and necessity is a higher law in this world than your little legal maxims.

"I am concerned with only two things in this case: one is that the Goverment must be paid, and the other is that the road must be operated. Personally, I don't think the road is worth the amount of the Government loan. It cost a great deal more, but a thing is worth what you can get for it."

To the objectors he said:

"After all these years of hard work you come in here on technicalities. You offer the Court not a thing in the world, not a suggestion. You are just here kicking and offering nothing, and that has been plain throughout the entire case. Now, of course, the Court is tired of it. This is a practical world. Most of us will soon be too old to run this railroad, and the Court is not going to hold it any longer.

"And so I am going to confirm the sale and approve the plan of reorganization. These noteholders, if they want to take what is offered to them in the plan—and I think it is quite fair—if they want to invest some more money with the chance of losing it—why I think it is as good a chance as they ever had.

"So that will be the order. We will see if we can put this property in the hands of somebody who will leave the Court alone for a while. It is a pity that the people on this side and the other side who put their money in this property will lose it. But perhaps the people living along the line would be more deserving of sympathy if the road was abandoned. At least, I would always see the faces of some of them."

Kemper and Histed Explain Road Otherwise Would Be Junked

The new company was organized immediately, with Kemper as president and Histed as vice president. The members of the new syndicate, in addition to Kemper and Histed themselves, are Herbert F. Hall, millionaire grain man, of Kansas City; E. E. Mullaney of Hill City, Kan., who made the only bid against Histed at the sale; W. S. McLucas, president of the Commerce Trust Co. of Kansas City, of which Kemper formerly was president; Ben F. McClain of Wichita, who was special master at the sale; George Thies Jr., Wichita; D. J. Haff, Kansas City, who formerly represented the English group there, and R. P. Brewer, a Tulsa banker. Of these men, Histed, Hall and McLucas had been members of the noteholders' deposit committee.

Here should be recorded a significant event. The appeal in the divisions case finally reached the Supreme Court, which, in May, 1924, decided against the Orient. But the opinion made it plain that if the case were reinstituted before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and certain defects in the record cured, the award would be upheld. It was reinstituted at once. It is important to note that this decision was made after Histed had bid in the Orient, but before the sale was confirmed.

Histed's reorganization plan provided that any money in the receiver's hands, or any money due the road; would go into the treasury of the new company. That this was no small item may be seen from the fact that, as Kemper told this writer, he turned over about $600,000. Moreover, when a favorable verdict in the decisions case was obtained, as it eventually was, it was made retroactive as of 1922, which will bring another $400,000 into the treasury. Thus, the men who put in their $1,250,000 already have got a considerable amount of it back. The plan, indeed, originally provided that the money in the receiver's hands would be deducted from the $1,250,000, but Kemper and Histed say that was waived and the entire amount put up.

Kemper and Histed have much to say in defense and explanation of their course, and of the new plan. Let us hear them.

"I entreated the American noteholders many times to come in and save their property," Kemper declared. "They wouldn't listen to me. I couldn't even get to see Ford. They had washed their hands of the Orient, and, as I believe, the wealthy ones had saved their losses by charging them off on their income taxes.

"A leading New York lawyer came to me in Washington with a proposition to junk the road. He said we could get about $12,000,000 for it, and save all our investment, and he would get a big commission. I told him I wouldn't listen to such a proposal, that I couldn't go back and face the people out here if I agreed to scrapping the road.

"It is ridiculous to say that Histed and I had any scheme to get the road. Why, I hardly knew him when we got into this thing together. In fact, I opposed his election to the Noteholders' Committee. Never in my life have I worked like I worked to keep this road running, and without a cent of pay. The one-fifth of the stock which Histed and I get in this new company is all the compensation we have received for all our years of hard work."

"Why didn't you receive compensation?" he was asked. "Do you know that your failure to take a salary as receiver is now advanced by some of the objectors as proof of their contention that you intended all along to get possession of the road?"

"Where was any salary coming from?" Histed interposed. "We could hardly meet the payroll. We felt that some day the road would be reorganized by the people who owned it, and that then we would be paid. That we didn't expect to get it ourselves is shown by the efforts which we made to get other people to finance it and take it over. Personally, I don't care what the objectors say. The record shows how patient we were, and how we tried for years to get them to come in and save their investment."

"Why did you stay with it all those years if you didn't have some definite objective in mind?"

"We didn't need the money, and the thing had got into our blood. We didn't want to quit. Besides, those people who depended on this road for their living were to be considered. There are bigger things than money in this world."

Says English Tried to Get Rock Island to Buy Line

As for his purchase of the road, Histed put it in an entirely new light. He said that, about a week before the sale, Tuckett, of the English group, appeared, and told Histed he intended to have the sale postponed. Histed replied that, in view of the temper of the Court, it would be difficult, and asked Tuckett what he would do if the sale went on.

"My word, I haven't the remotest idea! Do you suppose he will do that?" he says Tuckett exclaimed.

So Histed proposed that if the English were really in earnest this time, he, Histed, would bid the road in. He would give Tuckett an option, under which the English group could assume the bid. Under the terms of this option, Tuckett would post $25,000 cash. If Tuckett exercised the option on or before June 1, 1924, he would pay an additional $275,000, and by Aug. 1 would bring out a reorganization plan. If it was not ready by Aug. 1, an additional $100,000 would be put up, and the time for the appearance of the plan would be extended to Nov. 1, all this money would be applied on the bid. In case the option was not exercised, the $25,000 was forfeited. In case the English brought out a plan, Histed and Kemper would receive one-fifth of the stock in the new company free, as compensation for their work during the receivership, and for Histed's work and risk in making the bid or, in lieu of the stock they would get $500,000 cash.

Tuckett gladly acceded to the plan, Histed says, and the contract was drawn before the sale and signed immediately afterward.

"The fact is," said Histed, "that Tuckett at once went to New York and, with the option in his pocket, attempted to sell the road to the Rock Island. Officials of that company made a tour of inspection, and it was reported that the road would be bought, but it fell through."

Tuckett failed to exercise the option, and the English were out of it, with an additional loss of $25,000, through forfeit. Asked what became of that money, Histed hesitated and said: "Why, it's still up there," and then added that it would go into the treasury of the new company.

In his correspondence with Histed, Tuckett reported that the English Noteholders' Committee decided upon a reorganization plan which involved the raising of $5,000,000, which would have satisfied the bid, and left $2,000,000 for the purchase of equipment. In a short time $2,000,000 was raised. A stroke of ill-fortune occurred in the tragic death of Poole's only daughter, which, coming upon the death of his two sons in the war, prostrated him. As the enterprise was largely dependent upon his efforts and financial connections, Tuckett wrote that it was a fatal blow. By June 1, $3,000,000 was raised, but the option expired. As has been seen, this $3,000,000 was a good deal more cash than the Histed-Kemper syndicate put in.

Complaints of Noteho Over Deal

It appeared that if the English had been aware of the real nature of the decision, which enabled Kemper to reinstitute the case, and, early this year, to obtain a favorable decision which meant a lump sum of $400,000, and an increase of more than $250,000 in the annual revenues, there might have been a different story. Histed suggested that this second decision stimulated the English to object to confirmation of the sale, when the hearing came on a few days later.

"When they pulled out, they left me square up against it," Histed continued. "I had bid in the road for the English, and they had left me holding the bag. Kemper and I began to look around for help. We got a New York man interested, and took him over the road. We rode mule back over the mountains in Mexico, where the road was incomplete, and I'm sore yet from that ride. We thought we had him sold. Then that fell through, and we were where we started. That shows how late we made our plan to take over the road ourselves.

buying power of the food-consuming nations, they are injured also."

There is very little we can do about this. We can only watch as the United States formulates a fresh foreign policy and make up our minds whether it is the one we want or not.

Labor Becoming a Real Capitalist.

In industry trade associations are being formed. These are also history in the making, once they are formed they probably will always persist.

"The public is protected by the Sherman and Clayton acts," Dr. Butler said. "As a government grows more centralized it grows more wasteful and inefficient. But as in industry, becomes closely organized it also becomes more economical."

A fundamental and rapid change is taking place in the American labor movement, Dr. Butler thinks.

"Workers are beginning to buy shares of the stock of the companies by which they are employed. They are beginning to found and manage banks of their own. Few people realize the extent to which the union laborer is becoming in a very real sense a capitalist. It is an obvious and laudable tendency. If I were working on the New York Central Railroad I would want to own some of its stock and through that take part in the railroad's management.

"Union labor and the whole nation, I think, owe a great debt to the late Samuel Gompers, who encouraged the unions to collect power and money and who kept them away from the revolutionaries."

Trying to Recast Aims of Education

Here Dr. Butler, going back for a moment to what he had already said about law enforcement, disposed of the Red menace in the labor movement.

"We always have what Roosevelt called the 'lunatic and criminal fringe,' he said. "All that we can do is to punish those in it when we catch them and keep on punishing them. Agitation and laws do not help. There can be all varieties of laws to prevent murder, newspapers can tell of hangings and electrocutions in all their gruesome detail, and we shall go right on having murders and murderers."

The growing emancipation of women from tradition and laws is a permanent change in our national life.

"It is surprising to realize how easily and quietly it has happened," Dr. Butler said. "When women were campaigning for suffrage, it was predicted that the country would be thrown into disastrous confusion. Those predictions were wrong."

One of the women who has entered active politics is Miss Sarah Butler, Dr. Butler's daughter.

"In the enormously important field of education, Dr. Butler said he had nothing at the present moment is happening.

"Boys and girls are now more eager than ever for education," he said. "Universities and colleges are expanding at a tremendous rate. This year we were forced to turn 9000 away from Columbia because we hadn't room for them. There was once a time when educators knew, age boys and girls were admitted to their classrooms, but they wanted to teach them.

Complaints of Noteholders Over Deal "Made Him Sick"

It appeared that if the English had been aware of the real nature of the decision, which enabled Kemper to reinstitute the case, and, early this year, to obtain a favorable decision which meant a lump sum of $400,000, and an increase of more than $250,000 in the annual revenues, there might have been a different story. Histed suggested that this second decision stimulated the English to object to confirmation of the sale, when the hearing came on a few days later.

"When they pulled out, they left me square up against it," Histed continued. "I had bid in the road for the English, and they had left me holding the bag. Kemper and I began to look around for help. We got a New York man interested, and took him over the road. We rode mule back over the mountains in Mexico, where the road was incomplete, and I'm sore yet from that ride. We thought we had him sold. Then that fell through, and we were where we started. That shows how late we made our plan to take over the road ourselves.

"It wasn't until last November that we began to canvass our local friends. As a result of that canvass, we drew the present plan. We announced it in February, and not a soul complained; none of the noteholders came to see it. Scarritt didn't ask a question. It is true that he had made inquiries right after the sale, but I couldn't answer them then, because I didn't know what the English would do.

"They say I betrayed the noteholders. The fact is that I sent them a circular letter weeks before the sale, pointing out that this was the time to formulate a plan if they intended to save their property. I didn't get one answer. I told them to communicate with me if they had any suggestions, but I heard not a word."

"But didn't the agreement provide that the committee would draw up a plan and act for the noteholders?" he was asked.

"Certainly, but what good would it do to draw up a plan unless somebody was ready to finance it?" was the retort. "I could draw up plans until the cows came home and they would be waste paper, without money, and that had to come from the noteholders. They make me sick with their talk about betraying the noteholders. I only hope they appeal on any such grounds."

He was asked to reveal the secret of his wonderful success in getting financial indulgencies from the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Treasury Department.

"On the plain proposition that the Orient was a public necessity, and that it was the Government's business to keep it in operation if possible," he said, and with an asperity not at all characteristic, added: "What about the grants of public lands and other subsidies which the Government gave the big Western trunk lines years ago? Whole counties, almost whole states, were given away. If the Government forgave this whole debt, it wouldn't be doing any more for the Orient than it has done for other roads, and we're not asking them for that.

"Not only that, but I showed the commission that the only reasonable chance it had to recover the money it already had in the road was by lending us more, and giving us additional time to pay the old debt. It was a business proposition.

"I'm not so proud of this plan that I wouldn't take a better one," he declared, "but nobody offers another one. Why don't these objectors offer a better plan if they have one? I'd be glad to see it. They are just kicking."

"Of course," Kemper put in, "it's too bad they lost all the money they put into the road, but that's water over the dam. All that is past. What we have to do now is to get the Orient out of the hole, try to make it pay expenses, and pay the Government debt."

"Exactly," said Histed. "And our plan will do that. It is at least a step toward a permanent reorganization. If we get the Orient on its feet, then we will be in a position to interest real capital, and the road can be completed."

Scarritt to Appeal Decision On Behalf of Investors

"How about the new investors getting their stock at 62 cents on the dollar, while the people who built and equipped the road have to pay 72?" the writer inquired.

"That's the premium which must always be paid to get underwriters to furnish fresh capital in large amounts," Histed replied. "The noteholders are lucky to get in at all. I could have stood on my legal rights, and demanded the road for the price of the bid. Instead I tried to let them in cheap. They'll get more real value for their notes by coming in now than they would any other way. The notes lost their value years ago; they didn't lose it through this sale."

The noteholders were given until the first of this month to take advantage of the opportunity to purchase stock. Had any done so?

"I understand about $300,000 worth has been bought by American noteholders," said Kemper. He didn't know who the buyers were. This money also goes into the treasury of the new company. Stock that is not sold is placed in the treasury, and can be sold to the public. Had any of the English bought?

"No," said Histed, "but I believe they will."

"But hasn't the time expired?"

"Oh, that makes no difference," said Histed.

"No, indeed; we'll never turn good money away from the door, no matter how late it comes," said Kemper.

Scarritt says he will soon have his appeal perfected. Meantime, the new rail captains of the Middle West are going merrily, and hopefully ahead with their plans to make a great system of the railroad which they bought with $2,963,000 of the Government's money and $37,000 of their own—for Judge Pollock ordered the clerk of the court to return Histed his $13,000 change.

"We always have what Roosevelt called the 'lunatic and criminal fringe,' he said. "All that we can do is to punish those in it when we catch them and keep on punishing them. Agitation and fury do not help. There can be all varieties of laws to prevent murder, newspapers can tell of hangings and electrocutions in all their gruesome detail, and we shall go right on having murders and murderers."

The growing emancipation of women from tradition and laws is a permanent change in our national life.

"It is surprising to realize how quickly and quietly it has happened," Dr. Butler said. "When women were campaigning for suffrage, it was predicted that the country would be thrown into disastrous confusion. Those predictions were wrong."

One of the women who has entered active politics is Miss Sarah Butler, Dr. Butler's daughter.

In the enormously important field of education, Dr. Butler said that nothing at the present moment is happening.

"Boys and girls are now more thirsty than ever for education," he said. "Universities and colleges are expanding at a tremendous rate. This year we were forced to turn 6000 away from Columbia because we hadn't room for them. There was once a time when educators knew, once boys and girls were admitted to their classrooms, what they wanted to teach them. Educators now don't know, and they are trying to recast the aims of education."

So far Dr. Butler had found three things for those of us who care what is going on around us each day, to worry about, and three things to welcome. He had covered most of the departments of life which affect us. There remained religion and the arts and sciences.

"A great deal is happening now in religion," he said, "but it is too long a story to tell now. The advances of science are recorded in such technical and complex terms that the average man and woman cannot understand what has been discovered.

Sincerity Always Evokes Respect.

"It is not only in science that leaders, the trained and skilled men, are unwilling to talk directly to the general public. Mostly it is because they are afraid.

"I remember that after the Spanish War, after the Treaty of Paris had been placed before the Senate for ratification, old Senator Hale of Maine, the father of the present Senator, refused to vote for it. He did not think the United States should take possession of the Phillippines, and would not vote for the treaty. The Legislature of Maine met and ordered him to vote for it. Still he refused. Election day was six weeks away. Senator Hale was re-elected by the same Legislature whose instructions he had disobeyed and whose advice he had ignored.

"Senator Hale knew what these men who are afraid of the public have yet to learn—that sincerity of conviction and frankness of action are always respected and usually rewarded."

The gap between the stores of knowledge which have been accumulated and the people who want to use that knowledge is slowly being bridged, Dr. Butler said, by the spread of adult education, supervised reading and study courses in many branches of learning.

There is an undeniable race problem, Dr. Butler said, and its working out may bring enormously important results. He said that constant letters brought him news of the restiveness of the Orient.

This is a huge country; 120,000,000 of people are a lot to worry about. No one can worry about all that happens each day. Dr. Butler has picked out some of the things which are worth observing, thinking about, and finally, either supporting or opposing.

HEBREW UNIVERSITY PLEDGES

Subscriptions Obtained in United States Announced.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Pledges of $140,000 a year for a long term of years have been secured for the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, as well as a permanent endowment of $500,000, Dr. Judah L. Magnes, dean of the university, announced today prior to his departure on the Majestic after several months' visit to the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix M. Warburg of New York donated $500,000 to the endowment and Sol Rosenblum of Pittsburg gave $250,000 to the endowment fund. An American committee formed for the purpose of aiding the university's development has been organized with Warburg as chairman.

Tales of Rockefeller obtain the price of a new one. He may delay the game 10 or 15 minutes while he assists the caddies in searching for a ball that is lost, and if the lost one be recovered he obeys the Biblical precedent by rejoicing more greatly over the one that is found than over the dozen new ones in his caddy bag that were driven not astray.

"It is not the trivial value of the ball," he frequently declares, "but the principle of the thing."

As he was about to make some practice drives home a teeing ground on his private links the rich oil dealer stopped to examine a ball the caddy had tossed out to him.

"That's a 75-cent ball, isn't it?" he asked. "Pretty good ball for practice."

"Yes, sir, but it's got a crack in it," replied the caddy.

Rockefeller looked at it more closely. And not until he was satisfied that it was not a first-class golf ball would he use it for a mere practice drive.

It is related by a former neighbor of Rockefeller in East Cleveland that one day a caddy who had been working at Forest Hill was taken sick, and it was necessary to engage another for the afternoon. An attache of the place was told to go forth into the highways and engage the first likely looking boy that he saw to come round and tote sticks for John D. Rockefeller.

The boy engaged ran home breathlessly to tell his parents the great news. He was to caddy that afternoon for the Richest Man in the World. The boy's eyes shone in expectation. Perhaps at the end of the afternoon the Rich Man would hand him a gold coin, for a gold coin would be no more to him than a 5-cent piece to most people. But the lad was destined to meet disappointment. He got the union rate for caddying throughout the afternoon, but he had the misfortune to lose a ball, and was docked 10 cents for his carelessness.

It is said by those who witnessed the incident that the petroleum master seemed quite sincere in his belief that he was doing something for the lad's own good when he inflicted a penalty for his moment of carelessness.

Caretaker Gets Even.

Some years ago a wealthy coal dealer who owns a little suburban place at the edge of Cleveland engaged for resident gardener an Irishman who had formerly lived at Mr. Rockefeller's Forest Hill estate. When this gardener moved to his new location, with all his personal effects, his chattels included a small keg jammed full of golf sticks. The sight of so many golf sticks in the possession of a horny-handed Irish laborer excited the curiosity of the new employer. He wondered if his gardener also went in for lawn tennis and croquet.

"Where did you come by all these?" he inquired.

"Oh, I picked 'em up when I lived at Forest Hill," was the reply.

"Did Mr. Rockefeller know you took them?"

"I think he did not."

"Then why did you take them? Surely they're of no earthly use to you."

"Well, sir," replied the Irishman, "I took 'em for spite. At Forest Hill Mr. Rockefeller's chickens and my own chickens were often loose together. Whenever they wanted a chicken to kill for the Rockefeller's table they'd always seem to get one of mine, by mistake, sir. So every time they'd accidentally kill one of my chickens I'd just take a golf stick."

It is, nevertheless, an undeniable fact that the Rockefeller's were always more than ordinarily alert to keep household expenses down to the minimum. Anything bordering on waste is so abhorrent to the John D. Rockefeller mind as to amount almost to an obsession, and paring down his cost of living is one of his chiefest economical hobbies. Guests who have dined at Forest Hill have marveled at the paucity of things to eat.

There is a story, so reliably vouched for that it cannot be ignored, about a washerwoman who was engaged to come and rejuvenate the Rockefeller linen. She was to receive something like $1.60 for her day's toil and have her noonday meal. That evening she remained and ate with the other servants in the kitchen, making two meals she had eaten there that day. The story is that the master of the place heard about it and had her docked 25 cents for the extra meal.

It was not the cost of the food the woman ate but the unbusinesslike procedure of giving her more than their arrangement provided for, that worried him. Perhaps the next day the head of the household gave $1,000,000 to a college or hospital.

In this connection it may be remarked that many who know the Rockefellers intimately aver that the late Mrs. Rockefeller's influence was for years an important factor in bringing about many of her husband's vast donations. This may or may not be true, but close friends of the family think it is true.

Woman Pays Own Fare.

A prominent society woman in Cleveland tells of being on a street car one afternoon many years ago when John D. Rockefeller, whom she knew, chanced to take the seat alongside of her. The conductor came along for his fares and John D. handed him a quarter, out of which the conductor took out two fares and gave him back 15 cents change. Rockefeller looked at his change and motioned to the conductor.

"My change is 5 cents short," he said.

"Why, no, I took out two fares and gave you back 15 cents," declared the faretaker.

"But I did not tell you to take out two fares," observed Rockefeller. "Let this be a lesson to you, and never assume that a passenger is paying for two people unless he says so."

The conductor gave Rockefeller back another nickel and the woman, flushing uncomfortably, got her own fare out of her purse.

GROCER ROBBED OF $950 DRAWN TO CASH PAY-CHECKS

Herman Walbrink, 1342 Hebert Street, Had Just Returned From Bank With the Money.

$212 OBTAINED IN ANOTHER HOLDUP

Amount Taken From Decorating Establishment — Thieves' Auto Stalls, They Seize Passing Machine.

Herman Wahlbrink, a grocer at 1342 Hebert street, had just returned from the Northwestern Trust Co. with $950 in currency to be used in cashing pay checks for factory workers in his neighborhood, when at 11:50 a. m. yesterday two men entered the store.

"We want the payroll," they announced.

With revolvers they lined up Wahlbrink, his clerk, his butcher, his porter, a customer and the driver of a bread wagon making a delivery there. They seized the $950 and escaped, stopping only long enough to relieve the bread-wagon driver of his morning's receipts.

Robbers' Auto Stalls.; They Commandeer Another.

When the automobile in which they had planned to escape stalled, three robbers, who had taken $212.05 from the safe of William Frable, owner of a decorating establishment at 5743 Delmar boulevard, yesterday commandeered a passing motor car and disappeared.

The robbery occurred just before noon, when Frable and four of his salesmen were in conference in his shop.

"We want the payroll," demanded the leader of three men who entered the place and flourishing pistols ordered the five others to put up their hands.

"There isn't any. We've been paying by check for three weeks," said Frable, which was true.

"Well, we'll take a look at the safe, anyway," the robber returned and he opened the door. From the contents he scooped $212.05 into his pockets.

The three robbers ran to Goodfellow and Enright avenues, where they had parked a Nash car, which they had difficultuy in starting. At that moment Frank Nimicht of 1420 Goodfellow avenue drove by in his Chevrolet coupe. He was halted and ordered out of the car, in which the thieves drove away. The Nash was later discovered to have been stolen from the garage of M. A. Nelson at 6175 Westminster place.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 14, 1925. PAGES 1—20.

Two Out-of-Town Weddings of Week Of Interest Here

Miss Marjorie Wolff Becomes Bride in Chicago — George Curtis Eaton Married at Cambridge — Turner-Thomas Ceremony in August to Be in New York.

JUNE'S reputation as a bridal month is being upheld, for last week was filled with weddings and announcements of plans for others. Some of them, to be sure, were out-of-town affairs in which the principals are St. Louisans, but the interest was felt here, and they attracted a number of St. Louis guests.

Among them was that of Miss Marjorie Helen Wolff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Wolff of Chicago, and Halford H. Kittleman, also of Chicago, which took place Tuesday evening in the Fourth Presbyterian Church of that city. The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute, and with her family, made her home here until about five years ago. She completed her education at the Castle School, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., and made her debut in Chicago, after which she traveled abroad for some time. She has frequently visited in St. Louis and was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Katherine Scott and Theodore Mitchell Wall a few years ago.

The second St. Louis girl of prominent family to plan an August wedding in the East is Miss Mary Hunt Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Fitzhugh Turner of 4943 Lindell boulevard. She has chosen Aug. as the date of her marriage to Felix Thomas of New York. The ceremony will be performed in the Grace Episcopal Church of that city, in the presence of members of the two families. There will be no attendants. Mrs. Turner will depart July 13 for the East to join her daughter, who has lived there for the last year, and Mr. and Mrs. Montreville Cogswell of Williamsport, Pa., the latter a sister of the bride; Mrs. Alfred Thomas of Dayton, O., mother of the bridegroom, and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Mead, also of Dayton, will go to New York for the ceremony.

Mr. Thomas and his bride will sail Aug. 12 for a cruise to the West Indies, and will make their home in New York.

Thursday afternoon in Cambridge, Mass., Miss Mary Isabella Sauveur, daughter of Prof. Albert Sauveur of Harvard University, and Mrs. Sauveur, became the bride of George Curtis Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis G. Eaton of 80 Vandeventer place. The ceremony was performed in Appleton Chapel on the university grounds by the Rev. Edward C. Moore, D. D., a member of the faculty, and was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's gown was of white satin and old rose point lace, and her veil was fastened with orange blossoms. She carried white iris and lilies of the valley. Mrs. W. J. R. Taylor of Philadelphia was matron of honor, and Misses Anita Ward, Emily Close, Charlotte Kennedy and Grace Helena Bullock, all of Camridge, bridesmaids. Mr. Eaton was best man for his son and the groomsmen were Eastern men.

Mr. Eaton is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1923. Mrs. Eaton and her daughter, Miss Emily Partridge Eaton, accompanied Mr. Eaton to Cambridge for the ceremony.

For the Wolff-Kittleman wedding in Chicago the church was decorated in shaded palms and spring flowers, with an aisle for the bridal party of tall candelabra filled with tapers as an unusual note. The ceremony was

St. Louisans Go to Their Cottages at Eastern Resorts

Easthampton, Long Island, Cape Cod and Maine Also Popular Among Those Departing Early for Summer Homes.

THE heat wave which has hovered over St. Louis for the last two weeks, is slowly but surely driving society to its summer haunts. Each day the groups of travelers grow larger until the city bids fair to be deserted by most of the prominent families which make for the most social life before the summer is started.

Easthampton, on Long Island, New York, has sprung into popularity with St. Louisans. On Wednesday a private car leaving here took Mrs. I. D. Kelley of 35 Portland place, and her children, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Birch Oliver Mahaffey and their family, to that resort, where Dr. Kelley will join them later. Early in July Mrs. George R. Wendling and her family will join Mrs. Brown-O'Fallon at Easthampton, where they have taken a cottage together for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom of Portland place, also have a cottage there and will leave St. Louis June 27.

The Cape Cod resorts will have their quota of local society. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Hitchcock will spend the summer there, as will their daughters, Miss Anne and Mary, who have been in the East at college all winter and their son, Henry, a freshman at Yale. Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock are now in New Haven, where they are attending the thirty-fifth reunion of Mr. Hitchcock's class at Yale. Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. performed by the Rev. Archibald McClure of South Bend, Ind., after an organ recital by Eric De Lamarter of New York. The bride's attendants wore shaded chiffon and carried spring flowers centered to match their gowns. Mrs. George Tuttle Brokaw, matron of honor, was in blue; Misses Lucille Hanson of Grayling, Mich., Marjorie McKay of West Branch, Mich., and Misses Geraldine Dunn and Dorothy Burns of Chicago, bridesmaids, were in orchid, pink, yellow and green, respectively. Misses Ella and Margrethe Hanson, as junior bridesmaids, wore pink taffeta with cream lace.

The bride's gown was a Lanvin model of ivory satin, made bouffant style with flounces of point d'Alencon lace, and a chiffon-lined court train bordered with lace. Her veil was held by a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried white orchids, sweet peas and lilies of the valley. A reception followed at the Wolff home, where the music was played by a string quartet from the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Kittleman have gone to the Canadian Rockies on their wedding trip and will reside in Chicago.

Mr. Kittleman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Kittleman. His brother, Charles, attended him as best man, and Herbert S. Wolff, brother of the bride, was included in the list of groomsmen. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin. Among those who entertained for the bride prior to her marriage were Mr. and Mrs. Cary Terrell, Mr. and Mrs. James Leavell, Mrs. James Tully, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Kramer, Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rutledge, all former St. Louisans.

Tall cathedral candles and arches of roses against the low-spreading branches of a huge hemlock formed the background for a beautiful garden wedding yesterday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Crossen in Webster Park. Their daughter, Miss Virginia Crossen, became the bride of Charles McEwan Avery. Miss Ruth Crossen, the bride's sister, was her sole attendant. The bridegroom's brother, George Sanders Avery, served as best man. Dr. Russell Henry Stafford of Pilgrim Congregational Church read the service. The setting was canopied by tall elm trees and the aisle to the altar was marked by arches of roses.

To the strains of wedding music, 12 young women, dressed in white georgette and bearing smilax ropes, led the bridal party from a latticed doorway twined with huckleberry greens. Harold Knight Jr. carried the ring on a rose-filled pillow. Rose petals fluttered from the basket carried by Ruth Pfingsten. The maid of honor was gowned in cream Chantilly lace over pastel shades of peach and green. Her drooping hat of cream lace was fashioned over pastel green straw. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia rosebuds.

The bride's gown of heavy satin was simply trimmed in pearls and rose-point lace. The long court train, lined with white georgette, fell in cascades, caught with orange

Paris says shorter skirts this summer.

Reduce your ankles and legs with DR FOLTS soap

——Dr. Folts soap is the up-to-date way to reduce arms, legs, hips, double chin.

Why should you turn to diets, exercise or drugs—now that a positive and ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS EXTERNAL way to melt excess fat from any part of the body without affecting other parts, is offered to you? To quickly get ideal slender lines all you need to do is to wash every night from five to ten minutes the parts you wish to reduce, with a good lather of DR. FOLTS' SOAP (but be sure to get the original reducing soap—DR. FOLTS. Avoid imitations, "so-called just as good"). Dr. Folts' Soap, the original reducing soap, has for the last two years proven that it could really reduce fat people.

This soap, as soon as applied, is absorbed by the tissues, and suppresses excessive fat without any possible chance of harming the most delicate skin. It has been found ideal to get rid of double chins, because the skin is not left flabby or wrinkled after the reducing. Fat men and women are now using this wonderful soap with amazing results. Reductions of several inches in hips and bust are of common occurrence every day. Try it yourself. Go to any good drug or department store, get DR. FOLTS' SOAP (beware of imitations). If your druggist is out of it, he can get it for you from his wholesaler, or you can send a check or money order direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 128 W. 31st St., N. Y. C. DR. FOLTS' SOAP sells for 50c a cake, three for $1.25.

We have arranged for him to assist in our Foot Relief Department, all this week. He thoroughly understands the human foot. His advice will surely guide you to relief from your foot troubles.

Why Your Feet Hurt

Fallen arches, leaning ankles, callouses, rotation of the heel and other foot troubles are traced to the breaking down of the delicate bone structures of the foot. One or more of the bones in the 26-bone structure has given away under the weight of the body. Misplaced bones are pressing against sensitive nerves. Pain, enlargement or swelling are nature's warning that your feet need help.

Now End Your Foot Troubles

Restoration of the foot structure to natural position is the only means of relief. This is quickly and comfortably accomplished with smooth all-leather Wizard Arch Builders, adjustable at the heel, ball and arch. Wizard Arch Builders—invisible when worn—are featherlight. They may be worn in practically any style shoe that meets with your approval. The results in comfort and graceful poise are priceless.

Wizard Arch Builders

Free Stockinged Foot Examination

Sometime during this special demonstration, visit our Foot Relief Department. Consult the special representative from Wizard Headquarters. Learn the cause of your Foot Trouble. Without charge a skilled examination will be made of your stockinged feet. You merely slip off your shoes just as you do in buying a new pair. The cause of your trouble will be revealed and you will be given the benefit of a test fitting which will convince you beyond any question that you may have relief. There is no inconvenience—absolutely no obligation.

NEWS OF SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 13.—President and Mrs. Coolidge have returned from Minnesota with a distinguished party which included Secretary and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg who were their hosts while in St. Paul.

The Minnesota trip will be the last one the Coolidges will make before they go to Swampscott, Mass., for a few weeks of rest. Public business must accompany President wherever he goes, but Mrs. Coolidge has decided to take a real holiday from social cares and will only entertain and be entertained informally while on the North Shore. The Presidential yacht, the Mayflower, has been ordered to report off Swampscott.

Gen. John J. Pershing, who has been spending several weeks in Washington, will leave the last of the week for New York where he will sail shortly for Europe for a brief visit with his son Warren Pershing, who is in school in Switzerland, after which he will go to South America to resume his mission there.

Mrs. John B. Henderson and her granddaughter Miss Beatrice Henderson closed Boundary Castle on Monday and left for Bar Harbor, where they will open their villa. They left the tennis courts and swimming pools on their estate to be used by the diplomatic tennis club.

The new Ambassador to Mexico, Mr. James R. Sheffield, is a guest at the White House and will remain there until he leaves for his post in Mexico City, the beginning of this week.

Mrs. Robert Coontz and Miss Bertha Coontz have gone to the West coast to spend the summer with Rear Admiral Robert Coontz, in command of the Pacific Squadron. On their return East they will visit their old home in Missouri before coming to Washington.

John Joyce Broderick, commercial counsellor of the British Embassy, will shortly receive the decoration of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, bestowed upon him

The latest Cabinet romance is that of Mr. Herbert C. Hoover Jr. and Miss Margaret Watson of San Francisco. Both are graduates of this year's class in Leland Stanford University and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover have gone West to attend the wedding.

Miss Bessie McKeldin entertained at a luncheon for a group of the debutantes and sub-debutantes at her home on Massachusetts avenue this week.

Among next year's debutantes will be Miss Lilie Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Roosevelt, cousin of the late President Roosevelt. Miss Roosevelt has lived in Washington most of her life and has taken part in all the sports of the younger set. She is an enthusiastic horsewoman and carried off many ribbons at recent horse shows.

Another debutante will be Miss Sussete Dewey, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Charles Dewey. Miss Dewey has recently been presented at the Court of St. James and will travel in Europe until the late fall with her mother.

BRITISH INQUIRE INTO SLAVE TRADE RUMORS

Earl Buxton Declares Human Traffic Still Exists in Far East and Africa.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 13.—Rather a tone of uneasiness on the question of slave raiding in several parts of the world, including a suggestion that parts of the British Empire might be affected, was displayed in the House of Lords recently when several peers made demands for facts concerning the slave trade activity.

Earl Buxton started the ball rolling by asking the Government whether the report upon slavery which the Foreign Secretary undertook to call for in 1923 had as yet been received, and also whether the League of Nations had asked to be supplied with any available information on the subject of slavery. In Northern Africa and the Far East, he said, slave raiding and trading still existed, and it was known, he alleged, that raids had been made in Kenya and the Sudan.

Replying for the Government, Viscount Cecil explained that the Government was eager to the utmost of its power to help in the suppression of slavery in general and slave raids in particular. The League of Nations had undertaken inquiries into this subject, he said, and one great advantage of the league was that it worked with the utmost publicity. That fact alone, it seemed to him, ought to put an end to any suspicion that the British Government desired to hide in any way anything that its officials were doing in that direction.

CAMP FOR GIRL SCOUTS TO BE HELD AT TEN BROOK, MO.

60 Acres Will Be Turned Over to St. Louis and St. Louis County Members for Their Use.

A camp for all Girl Scouts registered in the St. Louis and St. Louis County council will be held July 18 to Aug. 29 at Ten Brook, Mo., Miss Eleanor Piper, local director, announced yesterday. The site is the Christ Church Cathedral camp, which has been turned over by the cathedral to the Girl Scouts for the summer. It is 60 acres of woodland, 20 miles south on the Lemay Ferry road, and has permanent dormitories and cottages, which the scouts will use.

A general camp for all Girl Scouts will be conducted July 18 to Aug. 8, and again from Aug. 22 to 29, for those girls who attend summer school. Aug. 8 to 22 a pioneers' camp for second class scouts, 14 years or over, will be held. At the pioneer camp the girls will live in tents and do all of the camp work. Trained nurses will be in attendance. Applications for camp are to be made at Girl Scout headquarters, 2221 Locust street, by tomorrow.

GOOD HEALTH BRINGS GREATER EARNING POWER

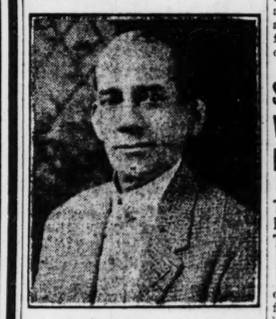
With Undermined Health, With an Impoverished System, You Are Not Prepared for the Best That Is in Life.

A Healthy Appearance Is a Valuable Asset.

Your advancing years should not mean the approach of a period of ill health, dependency, with no earning power to face the problems of life. Good health cannot be camouflaged—the face and eyes will tell. That sparkle and clearness of vision which denote robust health will not be there if you are constipated. If you are suffering from an impoverished system—if you feel all run down with no energy and vitality, you need something to build you up and make you feel like your former self. Authorities say that 75 per cent of all diseases originate in bowel obstruction, or constipation, and the crowded hospitals everywhere are but sad examples of the results of neglect. Keep your system free from impurities. The poisons that breed in clogged intestines soon cause such ailments as headaches, biliousness, nervousness, dyspepsia, torpid liver, and usually lead to chronic constipation if not checked in time. In the clogging up of the intestines lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including some of the gravest diseases of life. HERB JUICE, nature's own remedy, corrects these disorders by restoring the digestive organs to a normal condition—it keeps the intestines working in the natural way, aiding in the perfect assimilation of food. HERB JUICE helps the stomach to digest its food; when this is done the poisons are driven from the body and the system is restored to a healthy condition, radiating good health. This great nature medicine is proclaimed the most effective tonic-laxative and system regulator ever offered to the people. Keep healthy by using HERB JUICE.

EX-OPERATOR OF SODA BOTTLING PLANT MAKES STATEMENT

Feels It His Duty to Tell the Public of the Marvelous Results He Has Obtained From Herb Juice.



MR. LOUIS G. JONES

"I scarcely know how to tell what was wrong with me, as my ailments were so numerous, but I do know how to tell what has given me the greatest relief from stomach, liver and kidney trouble that I have known in years," said Mr. Louis G. Jones, who is known and respected by thousands of people in St. Louis and vicinity, having been in the Soda bottling business here for a number of years, and who now resides at 2017 Congress Street, St. Louis, Mo., when he called to see the Herb Juice man last week.

"For the last five years," continued Mr. Jones, "I have suffered agonies with my stomach. It seems that nothing I ate agreed with me. No sooner did my food reach the stomach than it would sour and cause me a very tight, miserable feeling from gas. In addition to this stomach trouble, I have had chronic constipation for many years, and my kidneys were also in very bad condition. I have had to get up as high as six and seven times in a single night. It is useless for me to say that I tried dozens, yes hundreds, of remedies for my ailments, but without any results.

"I noticed in the St. Louis papers so many testimonials of people right here at home who had been so greatly relieved by Herb Juice that I made up my mind to give it a trial. And I can truthfully say that before I had finished my first bottle I was amazed at the improvement in my condition. I am now on my third bottle, and never know what it is to be disturbed during the night by my kidneys. These pains around my heart caused by gas have entirely disappeared. My bowels are in excellent condition. I don't feel that I had ever been constipated, and I am positive that Herb Juice is responsible for my improved condition. I will only be too glad to answer anyone's questions if they are in doubt as to the merits of this statement, and I will always praise Herb Juice for the wonderful relief I have received from it."

SAINT LOUIS CARPENTER WANTS OTHERS TO PROFIT BY HIS EXPERIENCE

Thinks Everyone Should Know About the Medicine That Restored His Health.

"Several weeks ago, on the strength of testimonials I saw in the papers, from so many St. Louis people, I bought my first bottle of Herb Juice. I am now able, for the first time in years, to eat and enjoy my meals without suffering hours afterward. And it is a pleasure for me to recommend Herb Juice to everyone." This was part of the statement made to the Herb Juice man a few days ago by Mr. John Dunham, well-known and respected carpenter, residing at 811 North 15th street, Saint Louis, Mo.

"Before I used Herb Juice," continued Mr. Dunham, "I suffered most all the time with stomach trouble, no matter what I ate it was the same. A short time after meals I would have that distressed, bloated feeling, caused from gas on my stomach. I was always constipated, and had to be up and down all night owing to the condition of my kidneys. It seemed that my condition grew worse and worse, and in the last few months I lost ten pounds in weight, and was growing so weak that I was hardly able to perform my daily duties. I had only used Herb Juice a few days when I realized it was the most satisfactory medicine that I had ever taken. I began to feel better from the very start. I continued to use it regularly, and today I am enjoying better health than I have for years. Never have any more trouble with my stomach. My bowels are very regular and I have been relieved of kidney trouble. I know Herb Juice will do all that is claimed for it, and I feel safe in recommending it to everyone."

Hundreds are now calling daily to see the Herb Juice Man, who has established headquarters at Judge & Dolph Drug Co., 514 Washington Av., giving statements for publication, and praising Herb Juice, that their friends may be induced to try the great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers in Saint Louis.

Reducing Your Weight

By Dr. Lewis Baker, M. D.

Science recognizes truly the extreme embarrassment, the constant annoyance and the real danger of becoming too fleshy. Particularly is the condition most pitiable during hot weather. If, therefore, this condition can be overcome, as it unquestionalby can in a vast number of cases, I am truly glad to point the way.

It appears to be an established fact, that obesity is often due to a partial failure of the thyroid gland to secrete and disperse through the blood an iodine gland substance which nature intended as a regulator of the fat absorption from the food consumed. Science, through myriads of experiments, discovered that the simple administration of the dessicated thyroid gland substance supplies to a degree nature's need for the control of fatty accumulation.

For many years I have recommended Arbolone Tablets as a reliable, non-secret home remedy, as it contains one grain of thyroid gland, with other approved ingredients, that have a tendency to aid in reducing the superfluous fatty tissues and to regulate the perverted craving for wrong foods. Taken as per directions, I have never known them to be harmful; on the contrary, many have gratefully written the facts of their success. Leading pharmacies dispense Arbolone Tablets.

Registered Nurse Reduced With Arbolone

"I have benefited after using for about three months when all other prescriptions did me no good at all. Arbolone, certainly has done for me and another member of my family what nothing else could do, though I had tried for years, etc." (Signed) N. Mc St. Clair, R. N., New York City.

Reduced 15 Pounds First Month

CLEVELAND, OHIO. Mrs. L. Vance, 10811 Detroit Av., Suite 4, writes: "I have been taking Arbolene so far for one month and lost 15 pounds. I feel better and know I look much better, too. Thanking you, etc."

Lost 15 Pounds in Two Weeks

NEW YORK CITY. John D. Strecher, 331 E. 125th St., writes: "I used Arbolone Tablets two weeks and lost 15 pounds. Weighed 170 before and now 155. I am 55 years old, a baker and work every day. It is a great relief for me, so thank you."

Used Arbolone Successfully

RENOVA, PA. Mrs. H. A. Peters, 1122 Erie Av., writes: "I took the Arbolone Tablets and must say they have done me a lot of good. I weighed 180 pounds. After taking a few days I did not have that stuffy feeling, so I kept on, and now I weigh 160 pounds. Thanks to you for the good they have done. I am telling my over-stout friends because I know they have never done me any harm. Thanking you again, etc."

Arbolone Tablets are sold and recommended in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores and by good druggists everywhere.

Everybody Worked But Father

"Father's stomach trouble seemed to be getting worse all the time and finally he had to quit work altogether. Two brothers and myself gave up school and went to work to support the family. Father had lost sixty pounds in weight and was yellow as saffron and no medicine helped him. Telling a friend about it six months ago she advised taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I got a bottle and it helped father at once. He was able to go back to work a month later, has regained his weight and strength and eats like a wood chopper." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Store and Druggists Everywhere.

Try them, at our risk. Get three bottles of Dr. Gross' Tablets from your druggist, take as directed, and if you don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days and feel like a new person your money will be refunded.

Best Tonic He Has Ever Taken
"Beyond any doubt your Tablets are all that you claim for them and I will gladly recommend them to people who need something to build them up. Several friends are now taking them on my advice. I tried many other medicines without effect and had all but lost confidence until I tried your Tablets. They have made me feel ten years younger." T. Terrell, Illinois

Skinny Man Increases 15 Pounds
"For the past ten years I have been trying to annex a little flesh. I tried a lot of remedies without any gain. Last October I started to use Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Then weighed 112 pounds. Since then I have gained 15 pounds and never felt or looked so well as I do now." Mr. Harry Paige, Chicago

Gains 10 Pounds, 3 Ounces
"On September 10, I weighed 130 pounds, which was the day I started taking your tablets. After ten weeks of using your tablets I weigh 140 pounds, 3 ounces. The only fault with your tablets is that they make my clothes too small." Mr. H. E. Stevenson, Illinois

Mother Says They're Fine For Kiddies
"My little girl (age nine years) looked so thin and pale I was worried constantly about her health. Your Tablets seem to be all she needed, and she picked up so rapidly I am now giving the Tablets to my other three children. Several of my neighbors' children are taking them also. They like to take them and they are doing them a world of good. Their appetites are enormous." Mrs. E. Thorn, Illinois

Gains 11½ Pounds
"I tried your tablets and almost at once my appetite, which had been very poor, improved noticeably. I have been taking the tablets ever since and have gained seven and one-half pounds and am feeling fine." Mr. Eugene V. Fagan, Chicago

Built Him Up—Now Wants Brother to Take Tablets
"I like the treatment and gained twelve pounds. Now I want some tablets for my brother. He needs them and I know they will do him good." Mr. L. W. Britton, Illinois served on the lawn. Mrs. H. T. Force is chairman for the day.

The Harmony Literary Club held its last meeting Friday with Mrs. Paul Parker as hostess for the 1 o'clock luncheon. Mrs. W. C. Markham, presiding, opened the meeting with roll call, responded to by current topics. Reports of three reciprocities were given; Mrs. A. F. Davis sketched that of Lenox Hall, Mrs. W. C. Installation of officers for 1926 took place. After the annual report and the closing of the books, the main feature of the program was looking backward over the year's study and present and past. Mrs. C. F. Sternberg read a paper on modern inventions, written by herself in 1908, now in the possession of the Public Library.

A report of the conference held in Washington in May was given by Mrs. Howard Bailey, Mrs. Mary Butler Duccorum and Mrs. Louise Sumner. Guests were Mrs. J. H. McCabe, Mrs. W. B. Rose, Mrs. Louise Ketler and Mrs. Albert Wiedrow. Delegates were elected to represent the chapter at the State Council this fall, as follows: Mrs. A. W. The monthly meeting of the St. Louis Circle, I. F. C. A., will be held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Fusz, 6925 Delmar boulevard, Wednesday, June 17, at 2 p. m. "Carina," by Isabel C. Clarke, will be discussed.

The Shortridge Galleries at 4418 Washington boulevard have sent out invitations to an exhibition and demonstration of silver and paintings for the breakfast and dining rooms from 2 until 5:30 o'clock, June 16 to 23, inclusive. Mrs. Paul Shortridge is State chairman of art for the Missouri Federated Women's Clubs. There will be a special exhibit of three tables set for dinner, luncheon and breakfast in silver, china and glassware to match and of the same period. The idea was suggested to Mrs. Shortridge at a talk before the Parent-Teacher Council on the the home.

The last meeting of the season for the St. Louis Alumnae Club of the Mu Phi Epsilon sorority was held last week at "Rolling Acres," the country home of Miss Edith Harsh. Luncheon was served under the trees by Miss Harsh, assisted by Mabel Bibb and Lola Valpine. The following officers were elected: President, Orah Ashley Lampke; vice president, Pearl Noxon Johnson; secretary, Marietta Schumacker; treasurer, Pauline Jones Dean; historian, Charlotte Burton Stockton, and chaplain, Mae Smith.

Sylvan Delphian Chapter held its regular meeting at Sherman Community Center, with Mrs. Martha Reese presiding. Mrs. Fred Roth led the meeting with the subject, "Early Egypt." Talks were given by the following members: Mrs. Martha Reese, Mrs. H. A. Woerman, Mrs. Edwin S. Pitzman, Mrs. Delores Hardesty, Mrs. Scott Miller, Miss Clara Horst, Miss Sherley Hall. The next regular meeting and a picnic will be held July 8 at Mrs. H. A. Woerman's country home on Becker road.

The annual outing party of the Book Club was held at the Midland Valley Country Club June 4. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock at a table decorated with pond lillies and ferns. During lunch three short addresses were given by Mrs. W. B. Knight, chairmen of the Entertainment Committee; Mrs. O. J. Krummenacher, the retiring president, and Miss N. A. Holman, the president for next season. After lunch Mrs. W. B. Knight and Mrs. J. H. Roth led the club through several memory, knowledge, literary and guessing contests. The prize winners were Mrs. H. G. Holden, Miss Hale and Mrs. J. C. Browne.

The Good Fellowship Club will hold its regular Friday evening meeting at the Westminster Hall, June 19. There will be a picnic for the members and guests Sunday, June 21.

The St. Louis Outing Club will have a basket picnic to Meramec Highlands today, and June 20 there will be a meeting in the recital hall of the Odeon Building.

The St. Louis Lonely Club will meet Friday night at 8 o'clock in Trimp's Hall, 4458 Delmar boulevard.

The Monday Charity Club held the last meeting of the year at the Gatesworth Hotel June 2. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. H. Wright; vice-presidents, Mrs. Fred W. Natural Crepe Rubber Soles for

Everybody's Sports and Everyday Wear

What the leading Golfers say:

Bobby Cruickshank, Shackamaxon
"I use them all the time. They afford real comfort."

John Farrell, Quaker Ridge
"give even ground grip and they conform to the shape of the feet."

In any sport, where quick sure-footedness aids your game, natural crepe rubber soles will make you a better performer. It is particularly so of golf, tennis, walking, yachting, bowling, hand-ball, a dozen others. And this is not guess-work! Champions at these sports have tested crepe rubber soles—in championship contests. Without a single exception of which we know, they have found them .... —aids to speed, savers of energy and "punch."

The Tennis Association endorses Natural Crepe Rubber Soles

"BY an overwhelming vote the delegates banned the use of spiked shoes in tennis tournaments, except in cases where the tournament committee may permit them to be worn. There was a great deal of discussion on the proposition in which it was brought out that a new crepe sole shoe has been found so satisfactory for use that there no longer is any necessity for the wearing of spikes." N. Y. Times, Feb. 3, 1924.

For Everyday Wear

You will now be able to find your regular shoes at your regular shoe store equipped with Natural Crepe Rubber.

Your favorite style clad with crepe will look just the same as it always did—the sole no thicker—but it will wear three times as long and pave the streets with velvet for every step you take.

SALESMANAGERS' BUREAU ELECTS NEW DIRECTORS

Program for Coming Year's Work Includes Conference in New York City.

Nine new directors of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce were elected at the annual meeting yesterday. They are E. W. Hughes, Lionel Kalish, W. C. Fischer, H. H. Zucker, C. P. Melton, H. E. Walker, W. E. Engle, Carlyle Thomas, C. A. Anderson. Martin J. Wolf was elected to fill a two-year unexpired term.

Otto L. Swanzey, the present chairman, in his report for the year, mentioned some of the accomplishments of the bureau from June, 1924, to the present time. Among these were the good-will tour of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce through 49 cities and towns in Missouri, which was sponsored by the Sales Managers' Bureau; detailed plans which have been worked out for a two-days' sales conference to be held by the American Management Association of New York City and the Sales Maangers' Bureau, jointly, this fall; the work of the educational division, which conducted several successful courses in public speaking; held a series of problems luncheons, which were addressed by men of national reputations, on various phases of sales problems; entertained delegations of out-of-town visitors while they were in St. Louis.

Swanzey pointed out that a program of development of far-reaching importance to the expansion of St. Louis business is planned by the bureau for the coming year. He urged members of the organization to give their time and efforts in making the bureau's activities as successful during the coming year as is planned.

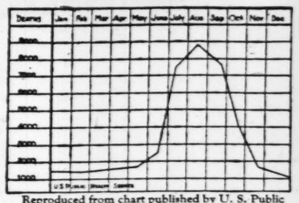
WATCH BABY'S HEALTH CLOSELY IN SUMMER

U. S. Public Health Reports Show Terrific Increase in Infant Mortality From Intestinal Disease During Hot Weather



Reproduced from chart published by U. S. Public Health Service to show appalling increase in the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases during hot weather period.

"Summer is the purgatory of motherhood," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Surgeon C. C. Pierce of the United States Public Health Service, in a Supplement to the Public Health Reports.

From 12 to 20 out of every 100 babies born in the United States die during the first year, and the majority of these deaths occur during warm weather.

The principal contributing causes are given as improper feeding and intestinal disorders. Many valuable suggestions are made for proper feeding, sanitation and general care of children in summer.

The mother should nurse the child for the first year if possible; if not, modified milk is the best substitute. Keep baby cool during hot weather, especially by proper clothing and frequent bathing in tepid water. Give plenty of boiled water. Keep flies away from baby and all utensils used in preparing its food. Never consider any disturbance of baby's bowels as unimportant, or "only summer complaint."

At the first sign of bowel disorder the disturbance should be immediately remedied. In thousands of homes Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is relied on to correct and regulate the bowels. This mild, pleasant laxative, free from injurious drugs, can be given to even the tiniest babies with perfect safety. It can be bought at any drug store.

SOLICITATIONS ON THE DOWNTOWN STREETS BARRED

Police Board Prohibits the Sale of Flowers, Buttons, Badges, Etc., by Young Women.

CHARITIES BUREAU OF C. OF C. OBJECTED

"Girls Often Employed to Make Collections Without Adequate Protection by Chaperonage."

Young women hereafter will not be permitted to solicit contributions on the downtown streets through the sale of flowers, buttons, badges, etc., in the name of a charitable organization.

This decision was reached yesterday by the Police Board, after consideration of the following letter from the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce:

"The Charities Bureau, years ago, made quite a study of this question and reached the conclusion that this method of securing money for charitable and other organizations is objectionable, for the following reasons:

"It offers an excellent opportunity for an imposter to 'fleece' the public. This has happened many times during campaigns in the past, when this method was used.

"Girls and immature women were often employed to make the collections without adequate protection by chaperonage.

"Many of the girls were conspicuously and inappropriately dressed, resulting in the deterioration of their character.

"Statements from some of the young ladies revealed the fact that familiarities were not uncommon. In her anxiety to get more money than the girl next to her, remarks that ordinarily would be considered insulting were overlooked.

"Undue insistence in trying to get passersby to contribute caused many protests from members who were 'sick and tired' of being hounded every other day or so on the public streets.

"Previous Boards of Police Commissioners have concurred in our opinion and passed a rule prohibiting all solicitations on the downtown streets. To this rule previous Chiefs of Police have lent their most cordial approval. The Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce hopes that similar action be taken by the present board."

The Charities Bureau received a reply from Chief of Police Gerk, declaring that henceforth such solicitations will be prohibited on the downtown streets.

COAL LAND DEAL WOULD BE FRAUD, ENGLISH ASSERTS

Federal Judge Refuses to Confirm Sale of 60 Acres by the Southern Gem Corporation.

Judge English, in the East St. Louis Federal Court yesterday, refused to confirm the sale of 60 acres of coal land owned by the Southern Gem Coal Corporation to the Pyramid Coal Co. of Marion, Ill., to which the property had been sold by the receivers, subject to approval of the court, for $5500. He ordered a new sale.

In refusing confirmation of the sale, Judge English said, "In my judgment this proposed price, with teh proof of the inadequacy of the sales price, is sufficient to justify me in feeling that to permit the sale to be approved and a transfer of the property made would be a fraud upon the creditors and would shock the conscience of the Court."

Confirmation of the sale was objected to by John D. Waterman, a banker of Rockford, Ill., who had no notice that the sale was to be made and who later offered $7500 for the property.

C. B. Thomas, former Referee in Bankruptcy under Judge English, formerly was one of two receivers of the Southern Gem and resigned prior to the investigation here in March by a Congerssional committee of the conduct of Judge English.

When Judge English appointed Thomas as one of the receivers he referred to him in open court as "my standing receiver," according to testimony adduced in the congressional hearing. There was also evidence showing that Judge English had approved the sale by Thomas and the other receiver, W. S. Wilson of Pinckneyville, of about 40,000 tons of coal to Finis P. Ernst of East St. Louis at 50 cents a ton, which subsequently was sold to the Aluminum Ore Co., of East St. Louis for 85 cents a ton.

Catholic Orphans' Picnic.

We have purchased from one of the leading American rug mills a number of the highest grade Axminster Rugs made. These rugs are slightly imperfect.

The imperfections are only perceptible to the eye of an expert and in no way affect the beauty or wearing qualities of the rugs.

The ground colors are Natural, Taupe, Blue, and Gray with band borders in darker shades. As an example of the decided savings we are able to offer you, consider the 9x12 size which regularly sells for $62.50 and which we are now offering at only $42.50.

MOTORISTS are discovering w... known—that some of the f... Missouri may be found in the... lar Bluff. St. Louisans particula... week-ends on the beautiful stream... between Poplar Bluff and Alton.

One can leave St. Louis at noo... can be 40 miles or more beyond P... night on the bank of one of the... mountain streams, spending the... day fishing and loafing under the... trees, and return to St. Louis by... Sunday night. The roads are all-... weather to Poplar Bluff and vir... tually so from Poplar Bluff on.

Choice of Fishing Streams.

Leaving St. Louis by the Lemay Ferry road, one swings south with the concrete to Festus, then follows No. 21 through Hematite and Victoria to De Soto, then No. 9 through Flat River and Farmington to Fredericktown, then No. 33 via Greenville to Poplar Bluff. From Poplar Bluff, the route follows No. 42 through Doniphan to Alton. One also can swing northwest from Poplar Bluff over No. 16 to Van Buren and Fremont.

Highway No. 42 gives one choice of three beautiful mountain streams, all abounding in fish that may be caught only with hook and line, for seining is prohibited by law. These streams are Black River, Current River and Eleven Point River. They come rushing down, tumbling over shoals and rapids, now and again widening into deep pools, but always swift and transparent, their bottoms to be seen at almost any depth.

Two Picturesque Springs.

Seven miles northeast of Alton, is Greer Spring, which flows 300,000,000 gallons of water daily. High cliffs stand up on either side of the spring, and at times water boils up to a height of two or three feet. This spring is the source of most of the flow of Eleven Point River. There also is a cave nearby from which about 9,000,000 gallons of water pour every 24 hours.

From Alton, one may drive north on No. 19, connecting with No. 46 which runs eastward through Carter and Shannon counties to Poplar Bluff. Near Van Buren, which is in Carter County, the State has bought several thousand acres of land for a State park. In the park is Big Spring, which flows some 282,000,000 gallons of water a day, making a sizable stream which hurries down to join the Current River, 200 yards away. This spring, said to be the third largest in the world in volume of flow, measures about 100 yards across. The water comes out of a basin in a semi-circular ridge, shaded by a tangle of trees and vines so thick as to prevent the sunlight from drying the moisture on the rocky path that leads to it. The water is so blue as to appear artificially

ALLURING REGION LIES WEST OF POPLAR BLUFF

Good Roads Make Black River, Current River and Eleven Point River Country Easily Accessible From St. Louis.

MOTORISTS are discovering what many fishermen always have known—that some of the finest scenery and fishing in all Missouri may be found in the region immediately west of Poplar Bluff. St. Louisans particularly are beginning to spend their week-ends on the beautiful streams that wind through the country between Poplar Bluff and Alton.

One can leave St. Louis at noon Saturday and by steady driving can be 40 miles or more beyond Poplar Bluff by dark, camp for the night on the bank of one of the mountain streams, spending the day fishing and loafing under the trees, and return to St. Louis by Sunday night. The roads are all-weather to Poplar Bluff and virtually so from Poplar Bluff on.

Current River, a fisherman's paradise on Route No 42.

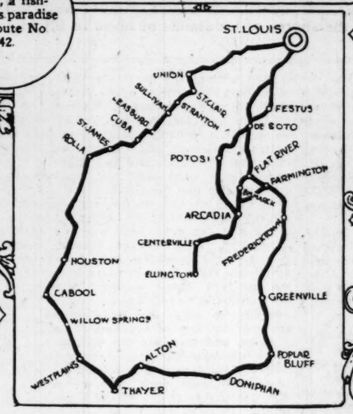
Spring, 7 miles north of Alton, Mo., that flows 9,000,000 gallons of water every day from a cave.



Gravel road in Shannon County, between Winona and Van Buren.

Choice of Fishing Streams.

Leaving St. Louis by the Lemay Ferry road, one swings south with the concrete to Festus, then follows No. 21 through Hematite and Victoria to De Soto, then No. 9 through Flat River and Farmington to Fredericktown, then No. 23 via Greenville to Poplar Bluff. From Poplar Bluff, the route follows No. 42 through Doniphan to Alton. One also can swing northwest from Poplar Bluff over No. 16 to Van Buren and Fremont.

Highway No. 42 gives one choice of three beautiful mountain streams, all abounding in fish that may be caught only with hook and line, for seining is prohibited by law. These streams are Black River, Current River and Eleven Point River. They come rushing down, tumbling over shoals and rapids, now and again widening into deep pools, but always swift and transparent, their bottoms to be seen at almost any depth.

Two Picturesque Springs.

Seven miles northeast of Alton, is Greer Spring, which flows 300,000,000 gallons of water daily. High cliffs stand up on either side of the spring, and at times water boils up to a height of two or three feet. This spring is the source of most of the flow of Eleven Point River. There also is a cave nearby from which about 9,000,000 gallons of water pour every 24 hours.

From Alton, one may drive north on No. 19, connecting with No. 46 which runs eastward through Carter and Shannon counties to Poplar Bluff. Near Van Buren, which is in Carter County, the State has bought several thousand acres of land for a State park. In the park is Big Spring, which flows some 363,000,000 gallons of water a day, making a sizable stream which hurries down to join the Current River, 300 yards away. This spring, said to be the third largest in the world in volume of flow, measures about 100 yards across. The water comes out of a basin in a semi-circular ridge, shaded by a tangle of trees and vines so thick as to prevent the sunlight from drying the moisture on the rocky path that leads to it. The water is so blue as to appear artificially colored, and is cold enough to chill the air in the vicinity.

From Poplar Bluff the motorist may return over the same route to St. Louis, or can run 75 miles east on concrete and gravel roads to the Bird's Point, ferry over the Mississippi River to Cairo, and return to St. Louis over the concrete of Illinois highways No. 2 and No. 15 via Carbondale, Ashley Junction, Mascoutah and Belleville.

Tourist camps have been provided by virtually every city and town in Southern Missouri, and west of Poplar Bluff there are any number of places for camping amid lovely scenery.

Into Reynolds County.

If one has more time he can go to Ironton and Arcadia, either over No. 9 to Flat River, No. 32 to Bismarck and then a county road, or over No. 9 to Flat River and then a county road via Doe Run. From Ironton he can follow No. 21 to Centerville, Ellington and Van Buren. He also can go to Ironton by following No. 21 from De Soto through Potosi and Belleview.

The Reynolds County region traversed by No. 21 is rarely lovely, and has its own share of beautiful mountain streams—among them Black River and its three forks. The old mill spring near Centerville and the Amzdon Spring, half a mile west of the Sinking Creek bridge on No. 21, are worth seeing. So, too, is the 6100-acre park in the southwest corner of Reynolds County, about a mile and a quarter southwest of Ellington. This tract is heavily wooded, with well watered hollows and picturesque views from its high ridges.

Fine Vacation Trip.

The Poplar Bluff-Alton trip may be extended into a splendid vacation tour by following No. 19 southwest from Alton to Thayer, which is on the Arkansas line, and to Mammoth Springs, a short distance away. From Thayer one can go northwest over No. 7 through West Plains and Willow Springs to Cabool, then northeast on N. 7 through Houston and Licking to Rolla and return home over No. 14 via Union and Gray's Summit. All the roads on this semicircle from Poplar Bluff to Rolla are graveled or graded and are being carefully maintained by the State highway forces headed by Division Engineer J. H. Long. A special effort is being made to hurry construction and to keep the roads in travelable condition for the benefit of tourists.

There are many miles of gravel roads in this region. Many more miles of dirt roads have been made all-weather by graveling the spots that have made trouble in wet weather. Narrow, rocky, virtually impassable country roads have been transformed into well-marked, smooth-riding roads wide enough for two lines of traffic. All routes under State maintenance may be easily followed day or night, so well have they been signed.

Resorts are being developed rapidly.

This road district is the largest of the 10 into which Missouri is divided, having an area of 8151 square miles and including Carter, Dent, Douglas, Howell, Oregon, Ozark, Reynolds, Shannon, Texas and Wright counties. It is hoped by Engineer Long and his men that a 365-day system of the 818 miles of State designated highway in this district will be a fact within three years. Meanwhile every effort is being made to keep the dirt roads in such condition that they may be traveled at any time.

Make this test

It may be worth $150 to you.
If not, it will cost you nothing.

If your car looks dull, and commonplace. If a cheapening film coats it over, and suggests repainting. Before you do a thing about it—make this test.

Clean with Common Sense, three places on your car. One on the fender; another on the hood; and a third on the body.

This test will require only a few minutes; but, here is what it will do.

First: If your car's original finish is intact, its sparkle and lustre, as when new, will at once smile through. And prove that repainting—an expense of $150, is not necessary.

Second: It will acquaint you with what car dealers have long known and practiced—a quick way to add $150.00 to your car's appearance value. And, will demonstrate how easily your car may be kept looking new, year after year.

The cost of this test is the price of Common Sense—$1.00. If it is not a complete success, your money back.

Make the test. Obtain Common Sense from your nearest Accessory dealer or Druggist.

Or send $1.00 for a supply; or six 2-cent stamps for a testing sample, by return mail. Address COMMON SENSE MFG. CO., 4167 Olive, St. Louis, Mo.

Keeps DUCO and other lacquer finishes in high lustre.

Note this record!

Common Sense, as demanded by out-of-doors conditions, leaves a bone dry, glass hard surface. That sheds dust; and resists atmospheric action.

Ten years of use has tested it. Thousands of car owners and car dealers have proved, that, if a car is cleaned and polished with Common Sense a few times each season, it will look as new, year after year, as the day it left the factory.

HOW ONE COUPLE SOLVED CAMPING OUTFIT PROBLEM

Equipment They Devised Proved Value on Nine-Week Trip That Covered More Than 7000 Miles.

HERE is the camping outfit that was used by one couple on a 7000-mile tour of the West that included most of the high mountain passes and long grades. The trip occupied nine weeks, and 430 gallons of gasoline and 90 quarts of oil were used, the cost of "gas" and oil being about $160. The distance driven weekly averaged around 800 miles, or about 115 miles a day, although as stops were made along the road the daily average was considerably higher.

Space-Saving Packing.

The outfit for two was chosen with economy of space and expense in view. As much as possible, clothing, bedding and cooking utensils were taken from the home supplies.

The plan was to sleep in the five-passenger touring car, but a small waterproof khaki tent, without poles, was purchased for rainy weather.

A steamer trunk went in the back seat. The cushion was removed and later placed on top of the trunk. This cushion was never disturbed unless the trunk was to be opened. On top of the cushion went a small mattress (used at home on a sleeping porch bed) and two pillows, tightly rolled and the whole covered with waterproof khaki to keep out the dust and damp.

On the floor in front of the back seat was placed a motor car trunk. On this went the small tent, tightly rolled into a square package. By the side of the tent was placed a small handbag, holding toilet articles, a flashlight, kodak, maps and road dates, compass, drinking cup and goggles. Beside the bag a dustproof, patent leather hat box was set on end, holding a woman and a man's hat, the pocket in the lid being for soft collars, hose and handkerchiefs.

In the space between the trunks, fitting snugly, were two wicker suitcases, placed on end. One held emergency clothing, wraps and two pairs of rubbers. The other held staple foods and supplies.

No Room Wasted.

In the space between the steamer trunk and the right side of the back seat was tucked the folding gasoline stove, a camp grate to use when a wood fire was desired and a small bundle of old newspapers, useful in a dozen ways around camp. In the left-side space were stowed small cans of condensed milk, canned vegetables, fruit, and tins of fish, always in No. 1-sized cans, if possible, to eliminate left-overs. In one of the pockets on the rear doors was discarded hosiery for car rags. The other held clean pieces of old tablecloth, sheets and towels, to be used for dish and face towels, and to be thrown away when soiled.

In the space on both sides of the suitcases were crammed two dustproof duffle bags—one for soiled clothing and one for the bedding.

In front of the duffle bag on the left and between the motor car trunk and the rear door was the galvanized water bucket holding two 1-pound crockery jars, with aluminum screw tops, to carry butter and lard; three ½-pound jars for possible left-overs after a meal, and two tin cups. The skillet was set over the top of the bucket as a cover, and in it sat the vacuum jug. Between the water bucket and the front seat was a nest of three aluminum pans, one for a dish pan and two for cooking vegetables. In these an aluminum percolator was placed. The right-hand space held the wash pan, soap, and two folding camp stools. Between the motor car trunk and the front seat was a camp ax, a shovel, a tow rope, and two coat hangers.

Over all was spread a dustproof khaki cover giving a neat appearance to the inside of the car.

The running boards were clear except for a luggage rack, on the right one, holding three reserve gallon cans of water, oil and gas, respectively.

Could Carry More Passengers.

If more than two persons desired to tour, the motor trunk could be strapped on the back of the spare tires, and the steamer trunk and baggage placed on the running boards, leaving the rear seat and floor space clear.

Two two-gallon desert water bags strapped in front of either side of the windshield with the vacuum jug and reserve gallon water guaranteed seven gallons of water. This is desirable when it is a considerable distance between water and gas stations as in the Mojave Desert. Also, having plenty of water means that one can camp when and as he desires.

The car tools, chains, and a unionall suit for tire work were carried in the space under the front seat.

Quick and Easy Meals.

When camp was made it required only a few minutes to spread a newspaper on the clear running board, open the "food" suitcase and serve lunch. In this suitcase were two knives, two forks, salt, sugar, coffee, crackers, cookies, paper plates, oil paper a package of rubber bands and a can opener. The tourist camps usually have stores were supplies, fresh vegetables, fruit and meat may be purchased, if larger meals than luncheon are desired. The camps, as a rule, have hot and cold showers, and sometimes tubs. There usually is gas or electricity for cooking and laundry, and community houses. The price averages 50 cents or less a car, some camps charging $1 the car.

Making Up the Bed.

At bedtime the "bedding" duffle-bag is brought out. The handbag and hatbox are set on the floor around the brakes. The front seat cushion is put on top of the motor car trunk flush with the back seat cushion on top of the steamer trunk, giving the springs under all of the body except the feet. For them the tent and the two suitcases are placed one over the other on the front seat, flush with the front seat cushion. The mattress is unrolled and adjusted. In the duffle-bag are two sheets, if the weather is warm, two pillow cases, four light-weight blankets, a quilt, four strips of dark challie to tuck in around the side curtains when parked under or near a street or camp arc light, and a leather shopping bag used as a Pullman hammock to hold clothing.

The two coat hangers are taken from the space between the motor car trunk and front seat and hung up in the top of the car over the brakes. One hanger holds the man's coat; from the other the shopping bag is suspended. The khaki cover which, during the day, is a coverall for the luggage, is pinned (with large safety pins) around the top of the car on the left side and outside the car, and left thus for the night. The front and rear doors are opened out for side panels, the two camp stools are set in front to hold the curtain out, and there is a dressing room.

The clothing that would not go in the shopping bag is folded and put on the top of the hatbox. Any bedding not required is left in the duffle-bag and put on top of the handbag. The camp stools are folded up and put back into space between motor car trunk and door, the doors are closed and all safe in the car for the night.

In the morning the doors again are opened against the khaki curtain, the camp stools placed, the handbag, washpan, soap and water bag placed on the running board. The dressing room, after a few minutes' work, is again ready for occupancy.

In rainy weather the tent is pitched.

AUTO DEALERS WILL HELP POLICE TO TEST HEADLIGHTS

The St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association has arranged with the Nelson Motor Car Maintenance Co., 3337 Lawton avenue, for free testing of automobile lights for the police department and all dealer members. A standard test board has been installed in the Nelson garage. Dave G. Nelson, head of the company, will test lights for all persons sent to him by the police. A dealer may send to him new and used cars and customers' machines.

The dealers' association, says Secretary-Manager Robert E. Lee, is doing this as one means toward reducing the number of arrests for illegal lights.

Use of the test board was demonstrated Tuesday night by H. H Phelps, salesmanager and illuminating engineer of the Minneapolis Lamp Co.

Who Has Older Car Than This 1908 Model Still in Use?

Owner of a 1908 International Drives It to St. Louis and Back to His Home Near Kimmswick, Mo.

A 1908 International is entered by Jacob Klineschmidt, who lives near Kimmswick, Mo., for honors as an old automobile that still is in running condition and is being used. Other owners of really old cars are invited to send pictures and stories of their cars to the Automobile Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Klineschmidt uses the 1908 International continually, and only the other day drove it from his home to St. Louis and back.

"I have been driving the car for more than a year and it always takes me where I want to go and brings me back," he writes. "I bought it in 1924 from John Erb of Oakville, St. Louis County, and he bought it from the International Harvester Co. in 1908. I got an idea that I might like to own it, so I walked over to Mr. Erb's home and was surprised to see how new the car looked. I had Mr. Erb give me a few lessons in cranking it and shifting, and liked it so well, considering its age, that I bought it.

"I certainly have had a lot of fun with it since, and everywhere it goes it surely attracts attention.

"It has buggy wheels, cranks on the side, and has a gasoline tank in front, under the hood. It has an air-cooled motor with two cylinders, each 5½ inches in diameter, the engine lying lengthwise on the chassis with one cylinder in front and one in back. There are folding doors in the bottom of the body, so that one can get at the engine. It has two shifts, forward and reverse, friction clutch and chain drive. It has six dry cells for starting, starts on half a crank, then switches onto magneto and runs finely. It will go as fast as 25 to 30 miles an hour. The car is a bit noisy because the engine fires loudly, but it has power to spare.

"One night my brother, a friend and myself polished up the big brass headlights, filled them with carbide, lit them, and started for a show in South St. Louis. Away we went, with the motor pop-pop-popping! All along the road people came running to watch us go by, and when we drew up in front of the theater, the crowd was so thick and wanted to ask so many questions we never got into the show. It is that way today whenever I go anywhere in the old car."

Jacob Klineschmidt and his 1908 International automobile which he still drives.

CAR BLOWN SIX BLOCKS STILL RUNS.

A STORM-TORN Oakland touring car that recalls the tornado that laid in ruins hundreds of homes in Southern Illinois is being displayed by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., 2801 Locust street. It is perhaps the only one salvaged from the ruins that had such a remarkable experience and is still running. It was blown six and one-half blocks by the great wind, being rolled over and over side ways, and ended by knocking over a telephone pole which fell in such a way as to pin the car down on its side. Yet, according to the affidavits displayed with the car, it was turned upright the evening of the storm and, after the tank was filled with gasoline, the starter turned the motor over, it started immediately, and was put into service at once helping with the relief work, and has been running since, without repairs.

The car is being driven about the city and parked at the curb for inspection.

TO SELL AUBURN CARS.

The Gamache Motor Car Co., 5617 Gravois road, of which J. L. Gamache Sr. is head, has been appointed associate dealer in Southwest St. Louis for Auburn six and eight-in-line cars. The appointment was made by the Mound City Auto Co., Auburn distributer. Gamache was with the Mound City company for a number of years. Then he was in business for himself, and a year ago bought his present building. He also has a 60-foot lot adjoining. The Gamache company is now exhibiting Auburn six and eight cylinder models.

BERRY CO. BUYS BUILDING.

The Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributor, has bought from the Packard Motor Car Co. of Detroit the 4-story building it occupies at Locust and Twenty-second street and the one-story used car building adjoining which was erected a few months ago. The firm's buildings now front 129 feet on Locust boulevard and are 155 feet deep, giving 66,000 square feet of floor space for Packard sales and service. When George M. Berry came to St. Louis two years ago to take over the Packard branch and organize his own distributing company, he made the condition that he be given an option to buy the building.

NEW ZONE MANAGER HERE.

W. J. Burns, formerly assistant zone manager in Kansas City, has assumed his duties as zone manager for the Chevrolet Motor Car Co. in the St. Louis zone. H. J. Klingler, whom he succeeded, has gone to Detroit, where he will be in the Chevrolet central office. Klingler was the guest of honor recently at a farewell dinner at Hotel Statler given by the Chevrolet Dealers' Association. A radio set was presented to him. Ninety-six sales managers, assistant managers, factory representatives and sales promotion men came to St. Louis last Saturday enroute to the Chevrolet convention at Detroit. They were taken in special busses to the Chevrolet and Fisher body plant at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, which they inspected. They had lunch at the plant cafeteria, attended the ball game, and left that evening on a special train for Detroit. E. W. Fisher, regional manager, was in charge of the party, and G. L. Thorpe, office manager, arranged the program.

GARDNER 8 WINS IN CLASS.

The stock Gardner eight-in-line brougham which was winner in its class in the annual 360-mile Yosemite-Camp Curry economy run May 22 and 23, averaged 17.78 miles per gallon of gasoline and used only ¼ pint of oil. It was the only car to use no extra water from start to finish. As five passengers were carried, the total weight of the Gardner entrant was 4650 pounds. The car won fifth place in sweepstakes.

NEW PLANT READY IN JULY.

Victor Motors, manufacturer of trucks and busses, whose St. Louis branch is at Twenty-eighth and Locust street, announces that its new and large plant across the river will be ready for operation about July 1. The plant is nearly 600 feet long. The assembly line starting near the receiving quarters, continues for 300 feet, after which the trucks are driven off the line onto a 10-acre tract, owned by the company and placed on the test track. Trucks are then driven into the body shop, then enter the paint shop which is being equipped with all up-to-date appliances including equipment for spraying lacquer pyrolin finishes.

USED CARS VALUABLE HERE.

Used automobiles are not a drug on this market, according to Philip H. Brockman, head of the De Luxe Automobile Co., local Oldsmobile dealer, who says he will accept any good used car as first payment on a new Oldsmobile six. The remainder of the purchase price can be paid monthly, the offer eliminating the first down payment. The demand this spring for good used cars is given as the principal reason. In the past week Brockman reports he has been unable to supply the demands of an average of nine used cars a day. No restrictions are placed on the offer, it is announced. The full appraisal value of any used car accepted will be taken as a down payment on any new Oldsmobile. Arrangements can be made for handling the other payments.

Chandler Performance

—a ten-mile ride will astonish you!

YOU have heard a great deal about Chandler performance.

You know that a Chandler broke all speed and stamina records when it sped 1000 miles in 689 minutes; that not even specially designed cars have been able to reduce Chandler's record-breaking dash to the top of Mount Washington.

You have heard that you can't clash gears in a Chandler—

—that the smoothness and getaway of the Pikes Peak Motor is no less pronounced than its power—

—that in comparative quality of coach work, the Chandler-Fisher bodies rank with those of any car built.

We invite you to verify all this. We urge you to accept our offer to provide you with a demonstrator anv afternoon or evening.

You have definite ideas of motor car values and one ride will make you a Chandler enthusiast.

HYDRAULIC MOTOR, DRIVEN BY AN OIL PUMP, PERFECTED

Continental Motors Buys Rights to Single Sleeve Valve Engine—End of Present Types Predicted.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., June 13.—The year 1925 promises to go down in history as the one in which the present type of motor for automobiles was started toward the discard.

A Toledo firm has been organized to bring out a passenger car with electric motors attached to the rear axle; these motors receiving their power from an enlarged generator which in turn is energized by a small motor of the present type. Experiments are now being concluded on the car. Those back of it assert they have been successful and that production of the car is a matter only of months. This drive has been described in this automobile section.

Has New Rotary Motor.

A Detroit automobile plant has been experimenting with a rotary type of automobile motor which is said to have proved itself superior to the present types.

The Gray Motor Corporation has been reorganized in Detroit as the Gray Motors, Inc., to construct a street car type of motor bus equipped similar to the car being perfected at Toledo. Instead of two electric motors, however, the bus will be equipped with one larger than those on the Toledo car.

Several other concerns are experimenting with direct electric drive motors, each of which is built to eliminate much of the transmission equipment on the present-day automobile.

It remains for the Bovee Transmission Corporation in Chicago to perfect, seemingly, what engineering have given thought to, a hydraulic form of motor.

Hydraulic Auto Motor.

The Bovee car is driven through the medium of oil forced through tubes by a simple rotary-gear oil pump connected with a gasoline motor crankshaft, the tubes running to propeller motors in the rear-wheel hubs. One hand lever on the steering column controls the power. The gasoline motor is midget-like in size, as is the gasoline tank, capacity of which is but a few gallons.

Due to the device and the numerous changes its use entails, car construction, the inventors assert, will be radically simplified. Many parts now essential will be discarded. The device is said to do away with clutch, gear-shift, transmission, fly-wheel gear, universal joints, drive shaft, differential gears, live rear axle, electric starting motor, electric battery and mechanical starter.

The driving medium, oil, whose flow is controlled by the hand lever, serves also as the car's braking power and, due to the construction involved, leaf springs, shock absorbers and snubbers also are not required. The power is applied as in a steam car, is operated in simplest fashion, and is said to make the car "fool proof" even in the hands of a child.

Single Sleeve Valve Motor.

The latest motor development is the perfecting of a single sleeve-valve motor in Scotland, manufacturing rights for which have been purchased by Continental Motors of Detroit. The only sleeve-valve motors now being made are of the dual type.

The new motor, to be known as the Argyle, after the home city of its inventors, stands midway between the poppet valve and the dual sleeve-valve types, and has less than half the moving parts of others. It is said to be highly economical of gasoline and oil and, because of its fewer moving parts, delivers more power to the driving members of the car.

Continental Motors expects to announce this motor to the car manufacturing circle in a few weeks and is preparing to manufacture it for foreign trade. It is possible some American cars will be equipped with this motor before next winter's annual shows.

Trend Toward Higher Speed.

The efforts to devise an automobile engine that will operate more economically, and even more quietly, than present types are being pressed. In addition to the promising experiments with air-cooled and vapor-cooled engines, recently described in this automobile section, engineers are devoting an increasing amount of attention to double and single sleeve-valve types.

A prominent engineer declares that the tendency is steadily toward still higher speed engines. Nearly every automobile plant and designer in Europe, he says, is working toward this end.

"The public," he says, "is really dissatisfied with present engines, despite the improvements made in recent years. They are demanding greater efficiency and economy from their automobiles, and the manufacturers have about reached the limit of perfection with the present type of internal combustion engine. There really has not been much improvement in motor design since Dr. N. A. Otto patented the first practical gasoline engine in 1876.

In this connection, it is worth pointing out that back in 1905 a St. Louis factory produced an automobile engine that embodied virtually every feature of the motors of today. The only improvements over that old Dorris engine are matters of detail; basically it was a 2925 4-cylinder engine.

"There have been refinements of course, but the basic principle has remained the same. What is now demanded is a motor that runs more quietly and with less cost. Engineers all over the world are seeking a principle which will solve this problem.

"During a recent trip through Europe I found the engineers in virtually every automobile factory I visited experimenting with various types of engines—air cooled, double sleeve, single sleeve, etc. The tendency seems to be to produce an engine with fewer movable parts, more easily lubricated and developing a greater number of revolutions per minute. At present 3200 R. P. M. is about the limit. A motor which can turn up 6000 R. P. M. can be operated much more economically and give better service and performance than the slower type."

BRITON DRIVES CAR 2000 MILES IN 24 HOURS AND 35 MINUTES ON SPEEDWAY

A BRITISH A. C. car, with sports type six-cylinder engine in regular chassis fitted with a racing body, recently covered 2000 miles on the Montlhery track in France in 24 hours, 35 minutes and 38 2-5 seconds. The only stops were for wheel changing, oil, gasoline and changing a spark plug. The average speed was timed at 81.3 miles an hour for the 2000 miles. One driver, Thomas Gillett, was at the wheel the entire distance. The car covered 500 miles in 5 hours, 51 minutes and 41 seconds; 1000 miles in 12 hours, 13 minutes and 25 seconds, and 1500 miles in 18 hours, 27 minutes and 9 seconds. In the 24 hours it ran 3127 kilometers.

A British Lanchester car, with racing body, last fall ran 1148 miles and 843 yards in 12 hours, averaging 95.7 miles an hour. It was timed for the 1000 miles in 10 hours, 29 minutes and 43 seconds, or 629 minutes, averaging 95.27 miles an hour.

ST. LOUIS AUTO CAMP OPENING ON JUNE 20

Space for 500 Cars Will Be Available—Main Building Nearly Completed.

Plans now are to hold the formal opening of the new motor tourist camp on the St. Charles road, St. Louis, on June 20. The Rev. P. G. Van Zandt, who is acting as manager for the company which has been organized by St. Louisians to finance the camp, says the progress on getting the camp ready warrants belief that the opening can be held as scheduled.

The main building, which will house baths and toilets, is rapidly nearing completion. It is 36 x 44 feet, with a 15 x 20 foot porch for shelter in violent rain storms. Sewers have been finished, and the plumbing is to be installed within a few days. The building that is to house offices and concessions has not been authorized, but the Rev. Mr. Van Zandt said he expected a contract for it would be let soon.

The camp, which is on the St. Charles Road, will be on the concrete "air line" highway from St. Louis to Kansas City, when the latter is completed, probably by the end of this year. It is just east of the Wabash Railroad tracks and a block west of the Normandy High School.

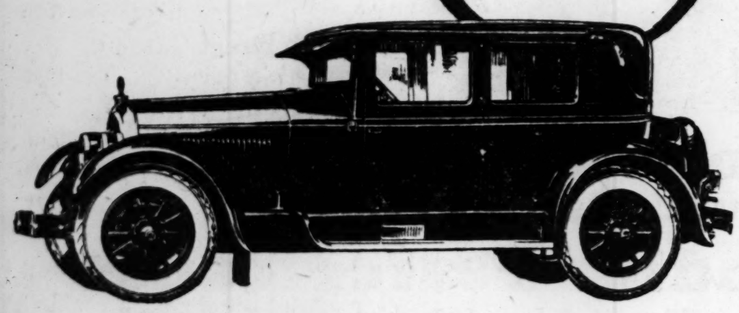
KISSEL

CUSTOM BUILT 8



Everybody Has High Praise For This New Kissel Eight

Among Eight-Cylinder cars it stands out instantly—the aristocrat unmistakable. In every graceful line, in every effortless mechanical operation is that indefinable easy dignity which stamps the thoroughbred.

For this Kissel Eight is custom-built. In the Kissel factories at Hartford, Wisconsin, workmen imbued with the tradition of American handicraft build up each car into an harmonious unit—an individuality in which is apparent the genius of its designer.

The inevitable result of high designing ability and meticulous workmanship is quality—enduring strength and flawless taste which no amount of money alone can create.

Discriminating men and women, who realize that a price mark is not a hall mark, appreciate the custom-built Kissel Eight. It meets the standards of excellence they exact in their homes, their furnishings, their scheme of living. They enjoy its roomy luxury and dignified elegance.

They enjoy, too, the unseen mechanical excellences which make the Kissel so carefree and joyous a car—the frame with a "kick-up" in front which cradles the whole car close to the road—the smooth sureness of balloon tires and hydraulic four-wheel brakes—the steadiness that comes of special spring hangers adjusted against side-sway—the rattle-freedom which hand fitted graphited bushings of bronze give—the wonderful new system of chassis lubrication that silences body noises.

Most of all, they enjoy the swelling rush of power from the really great motor—the ability to travel sixty, seventy miles an hour, for hour after hour without sign of wavering or weakening, without danger of causing harm to the engine or mechanism.

If I Were Going to Buy a Car Myself

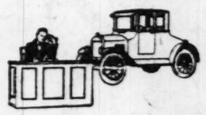
by Edward S. Jordan

If I were tired of walking—

Or riding in a street car or on a motorcycle.

And I had about $500—

I'd just telephone the nearest Ford dealer.



If I had about $1000—

Wonderful situation!

I'd make up my mind about one of two cars.

And telephone one of those dealers.

Any one of these cars would give me transportation.

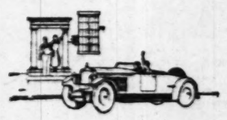
Any one of them would run satisfactorily.

They would take me where I wanted to go.

If I had about $2000 I wouldn't have to telephone more than three dealers.

Then I would have an automobile that would run and give me satisfactory service for probably two years.

BUT—if I had money enough to maintain a home and send a couple of girls to college and take a trip to Niagara Falls once a year—



If I had enough money so that my wife could maintain more than two hats and somebody to wash the dishes, I would try to be somebody different.

I wouldn't spend all my money for an automobile, nor would I buy a big, bulky car that would cost hundreds of dollars to maintain, with hundreds of dollars depreciation at the end of the first year.

I'll tell you why I would buy The Great Line Eight.

It's a good looking car.

Sit down at the wheel and you feel like somebody.

Step into the back seat and you are comfortable.

Touch the throttle and you know there is power in the motor.

Drive it all day and you are exhilarated instead of tired out.

It gets away quickly in the traffic.

It takes the hills on high—commands the respect of everybody on the street.

IT attracts attention in any gathering.

Frankly—I would buy a Great Line Eight and KEEP MY CAR.

I would not trade it in next year or the year after that.

Nor the year after that.

I know it's a Line Eight. That's the principal reason why it will maintain its valuation.

The Line Eight type of motor with most manufacturers is a future development.

With Jordan it's here.

I would buy The Great Jordan Line Eight in preference to any six cylinder car because it is smoother—it is ahead of the times—it means less depreciation later on.

I would buy it in preference to any other type of eight cylinder car because the Line Eight is less expensive to maintain and more economical to run.

And when it comes to the second hand market two or three or four years from now it will be a standard type of the better class of cars.

I know that I could buy this car for less than three thousand dollars.

One thousand dollars below anything in its class.

That's a thousand dollars saved in the beginning.

It will maintain its appearance—stand up and run for many thousands of miles.

The service cost is extremely low.

It's the most satisfactory car we have ever built.

Thousands of owners throughout the Unites States have convinced me that it is a real automobile.

I don't want to buy an automobile that is driven by ten million other people.

I don't want to buy a car that was built just to sell.

I want an automobile that was built to use. Not for just one year or two years, but for as long as I want to drive it.

Honestly, I would buy a Great Line Eight.

THIRD ADVANCE IN TIRE PRICES EXPECTED IN JULY

American Motorists Likely to Pay More Than $100,000,000 More for Tires This Year.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, June 13.—A third advance in tire prices is looked for some time in July. Advance of crude rubber to 75 cents a pound is the reason. Two other advances have been made since May 1. Tire makers profess to see no alternative to advancing prices. Nearly all of them have exhausted the stocks of rubber they purchased at 20c to 45c a pound. They now are in the open market for material and must pay current prices. In addition, a shortage of rubber is daily growing more serious. Meanwhile tire demand is setting new monthly records.

Costly to American Public.

American motorists seem doomed to pay from $100,000,000 to $300,000,000 additional for tires this year. The second advance in tire prices became effective June 1.

John Smith and His Car

READING THE INSTRUCTION BOOK.

With this installment, the story of John Smith and His Car is concluded.

I SHOULD like to have had a photograph of Smith the way I found him the other Saturday afternoon. He had taken the car to a quiet street where he was not likely to be disturbed, but it was evident that his isolation had become one cause of his anxiety. Even the engine refused to be congenial.

I grasped the situation while Smith was trying to explain it in words. He had decided that the engine was firing a little too late and, as a consequence, had taken upon himself the task of changing the position of the timer cam on the distributing shaft so that the primary circuit of the ignition would be made and broken sooner, thus sending the induced sparks to the plugs a little in advance of their former timing. The position of this timer cam is easily changed at first removing the rotor of the distributor and then by loosening the screw which holds the cam in position. But it's far from an easy matter to set the cam in the right position. A mere quarter turn will change the timing that the engine will be trying to run backwards. Smith had discovered all this.

"The engine will hardly run at all now," he complained. "It either knocks and backfires or appears too dead to run."

What Smith meant was that in one position of the cam the spark came too soon (too advanced) and thus made the pistons knock. And in another position the spark arrived too late (too retarded), thus firing the mixture in the cylinders when the pistons were traveling down. It seemed to me, however, that even though he didn't know what he was doing, he ought to have been able to set the cam in just the right position, if he kept experimenting long enough. His failure to do so convinced me that there was something else wrong.

And, true enough, looking at the breaker points I found that they were much too far apart at all times. The engine couldn't possibly have run correctly even if the timer had been properly set.

"I readjusted those points," Smith explained. "I once read in the instruction book that there must be a clearance between these contact points. But it didn't seem to me that there was enough here, so I changed them."

"Ah," I exclaimed, "your instruction book? Where is it? And why are you not using it? What do you think an instruction book is for?"

For a time he couldn't remember where he had last seen it, but after

But it's far from an easy matter to set the cam in the right position. A mere quarter turn will change the timing that the engine will be trying to run backwards. Smith had discovered all this.

And in another position the spark arrived too late (too retarded), thus driving the mixture in the cylinders when the pistons were traveling down. It seemed to me, however, that even though he didn't know what he was doing, he ought to have been able to set the cam in about the right position, if he kept experimenting long enough. His failure to do so convinced me that there was something else wrong.

And, true enough, looking at the breaker points I found that they were much too far apart at all times. The engine couldn't possibly have run correctly even if the timer had been properly set.

"I readjusted those points," Smith explained. "I once read in the instruction book that there must be a clearance between these contact points. But it didn't seem to me that there was enough here, so I enlarged them."

"Ah," I exclaimed, "your instruction book! Where is it? And why are you not using it? What do you think an instruction book is for?"

For a time he couldn't remember where he had last seen it, but after a long search he finally discovered it under the rear seat. It was none the better for its year of neglect, but we managed to read what was written for our benefit on page 61. It advised that the gap between the contact points should be equal to the thickness of the gauge on the distributer wrench (.018 inch) when the block on the contact arm was on top of one of the lobes of the timer cam. Smith had measured the gap with the tool designed to gauge the gap of a spark plug!

"Now that you have adjusted the points properly," I said, when he had accomplished that much of the work, "you will doubtless see the importance of your instruction book. It tells you to first set the spark lever in retarded position, remove the rotor and loosen the screw in the timer cam. You've done all that. Then it adds: 'Replace rotor and turn until its contact point comes under the position which number one terminal on the distributer head occupies when the head is put into position. Set this lobe of the timer cam so that when the blacklash of the timer gears is rocked forward the contacts will be open, and when the blacklash is rocked backwards the contacts will just close. Then tighten the screw and replace rotor and distributer head.' You see how simple it is when you have the guide handy. Perhaps you will have to do it several times in order to get it just right, but you won't go wrong with the printed instructions to go by."

And when we had properly adjusted it and tried out the car and discovered that it still lacked pep I stepped out and called Smith's attention to the service brake. "Here's where your trouble lies; the brake bands are dragging. And, by the way, on page 89 of your instruction book, under 'When the Car Lacks Power,' you will find that one of the first suggestions is to examine the brakes."

"Let's see that book," Smith demanded. "That can't be the same one I glanced through last year."

But it was the same book, only seen with different eyes.

THE END.

DORRIS BUS ALREADY HAS RUN MORE THAN 90,000 MILES

Two Dorris busses, both of the type which Dorris Motors, Inc., is planning to produce on a large scale, are operating on the St. Louis-Nashville, Ill., line established by the Community Bus Co. One has done more than 90,000 miles and, except for brake adjustments and the usual attention to valves, is running as smoothly and sweetly as when it was brand new. The other Dorris bus has run a little more than 31,000 miles with the same freedom from trouble. Each of these busses carries 22 passengers without crowding. A smaller Garford bus has just been added to the line.

The Dorris busses have bodies made by the Anheuser-Busch plant and are unusually roomy, solid and luxurious. In fact, these busses are a species of pullman of the pavements, although they operate with the quick acceleration and easy, sustained speed of a touring car. The engines are the same 6-cylinder, distillator equipped motors used in Dorris passenger cars, but have double ignition from two batteries. Rear axles with shafts of chrome nickel steel, 3 inches in diameter—almost as massive as on a railroad pullman coach—transmit the strains of starting and stopping.

George P. Dorris, chief engineer of the Dorris Motors, Inc., and a newspaper man traveled from St. Louis to Mascoutah on one of these busses Monday evening, and found them as comfortable and as easily handled as a passenger car. Indeed, there is surprisingly little difference between the way they ride and handle and that of a private car.

The ride from St. Louis over the Free Bridge and out through Belleville, Mascoutah, New Memphis, Oakville and Addieville to Nashville makes an interesting afternoon's trip, and is made by the busses about as quickly as by private car.

BUS OPERATORS PERFECT MISSOURI ASSOCIATION

Organization of the Motorbus Operators' Association of Missouri, which was started recently, was perfected Monday at a meeting in the office of the Kardell Motor Car Co., 3145 Locust boulevard. Owners of 48 busses were represented, as follows: Creve Coeur Drayage and Bus Co., 12 busses; Washington Bus Co., Washington, Mo., 2; Moore Motor Coach Line, Ste. Genevieve, 8; Bellefontaine Bus Line, 3; Farmington-St. Louis Bus Co., 4; Reo Transit Co., Ferguson, 2; Pacific-St. Louis Bus Co., 2; Old Trails Bus Co., 1; County Motor Bus Co., 14 busses, and the Midwest Auto Travel Co., which operates cars to the Pacific Coast. Directors were elected as follows: C. V. Steinmetz of the Farmington-St. Louis Bus Co., Fred Bauer of the Pacific-St. Louis Bus Co., J. L. Moore of the Moore Motor Coach Co. and J. R. Dulaney of the Old Trails company. At a previous meeting officers had been chosen as follows: President, J. L. Calvin of the Washington Bus Co.; vice president, Fred Lowe of the Creve Coeur company, and secretary-treasurer, John Barrett of the County Bus Co.

NEW BALLOON TIRE TREAD

A pneumatic tire is designed and constructed to deliver satisfactory mileage when operated at a certain flattening at the point of road contact, says S. P. Thatcher, manager of the Technical Service Department of the U. S. Rubber Co.

Until development of balloon tires, the application of these engineering principles involved only design and construction of a tire carcass which would flatten under load to a certain extent and then withstand the flexing and bending in service for a satisfactory mileage. Until then the tread, the breaker strip, the top cushion and sidewalks did not present any difficult problem to the tire engineer and the chemist.

But with the development of the balloon tire, which was designed to operate at lower inflation pressures and with a greater flattening at the point of road contact, it soon became evident that the design of the tread was as important as that of the carcass of the tire.

Treads designed along the lines of the high pressure tire wore rapidly on the shoulders and slowly in the center and other portions.

The engineers of the United States Rubber Company attacked the problem from the standpoint of preserving the original idea of the balloon tire, which was to give added comfort and riding qualities through the use of low inflation pressures.

They set about designing a tread which would wear normally and slowly and would promote ease of steering and give the car the necessary lateral stability.

The result was a tread contour which, as compared with the original round tread, is wider and much flatter.

This new tread has been rightly named the "U. S. Low-Pressure Tread" because it has been specifically designed to permit the low inflations necessary to ideal balloon cushioning without sacrificing mileage.

The profile of this tread, when the tire is inflated, but not under load, is nearly flat; but when under load and working, it is perfectly flat so that the entire width of the tread is in contact with the road.

Do you know about the speed, the bull-dog endurance, the wonderful performance of cars of the Hupmobile type?

The Indianapolis 500-mile race of this year has just been won by a car with eight cylinders in line—and no other kind of a car even finished, in the fastest 500-mile race ever run.

In 1924, the winner had eight cylinders in line.

In 1923, the winner had eight cylinders in line.

So in sales the Hupmobile Eight quickly leaped to the top of all the cars of its type, regardless of price.

Today Hupmobile means eight-in-line; and eight-in-line means Hupmobile.

Drive this Hupmobile Eight yourself, and learn the thrill of finding greater smoothness, finer, more alert performance, far easier steering and handling than you've ever known before.

DUCO DU PONT

There is only ONE Duco —DU PONT Duco

DUCO is a specific product created and manufactured only by du Pont. It is applied to automobiles by 23 manufacturers and by authorized DUCO Refinishers. DUCO is not a paint nor a varnish. It is a finish of velvety smoothness and astonishing durability.

Naturally, a product with such remarkable qualities and immediate acceptance by the public is widely imitated. But the fundamental behind DUCO never can be imitated—for the accumulated experience of du Pont chemical engineers stands alone.

. . . and only one way to have it applied correctly

DUCO DU PONT AUTHORIZED AUTO RE-FINISHING STATION

That is by taking your car to an Authorized Duco Refinishing Station—qualified by special training to apply DUCO, using the complete du Pont Duco System from the bare metal up. Look for the sign. Then, and only then can you be sure that you have — DUCO!

1 The longest wearing finish known
2 A finish that gas, oil, mud, tar, battery acids, etc., cannot harm
3 A finish that is easier to keep clean
4 A finish in the shade and lustre of your choice
5 A finish that increases the re-sale value of your car

—and finally a finish that requires only a very short time for the complete job.

THE roadster body design adopted by the Auburn Automobile Co. for its six and eight cylinder chassis is a six-passenger model, with room for three persons in front and three in the rear. The rear seat has a door, which eliminates the necessity of climbing to get into the rear seat. Finish is of pyroxylin lacquer with attractive striping. The finish is hand-rubbed to a luster, not varnished, making a longer wearing surface. Interior is finished in special hand-buffed brown Spanish leather. Fitting and equipment include heat indicator, gasoline gauge, ammeter, oil gauge and speedometer all in one panel under glass on the instrument board. Emergency brake is operated by a pull type control under the instrument board, removing this lever from the front compartment. Lighting switches are located on the steering wheel, and ignition switch on the 8-88 is also on the steering wheel. Rear vision mirror and automatic windshield wiper are standard equipment.

CLEVELAND SPORT SEDAN.

A NEW Cleveland six sport sedan has body by Fisher, patterned on Victoria type lines. A feature is its long, low-hung appearance. The radiator is finished in nickel with motometer and bar cap, while the body is in Foch blue Duco with a bead in contrasting color. Above the belt it is finished in black, as are fenders and running gear. It has aluminum top bows and smart oval windows in aluminum trunk rack and bars. The interior is in gray mohair. The car is unusually roomy. Seats are wide and high-backed. The rear seat has an arm rest on each side. Windows operate by regulators. A silk curtain is provided for the rear window. A dome light is operated by a push button. The instrument board is finished in circassian walnut. The windshield is VV type ventilating, clear vision and waterproof windshield. A duct is built into the cowl which, when the shield is raised slightly, allows air to circulate as desired throughout the driver's compartment.

GARDNER 8 SPORT SEDAN.

PRODUCTION of the new Gardner eight-in-line sport sedan is in full swing at the Gardner factory in St. Louis. With long, low-swung body mounted on the standard Gardner 8 chassis and finished in two-tone Duco, it has an air of distinctiveness which is enhanced by use of coach irons and black leather for the upper rear portion of the body. Interior upholstery and trimmings are of mohair in colors to harmonize with the body finish. There is an unusual amount of leg room in front and rear compartments, and four wide doors make possible an undivided front seat, which is unusually wide and set at a restful angle.

NOVEL EFFECT ON COUPE.

THE new Reo coupe owes its attractive appearance at least partly to the noncollapsible landau type top and to the pleasing two-tone color arrangement. Its seat is straight and the model is rated as a two-passenger car, although it can carry three without crowding. The windshield is in one piece. Upholstery on door panels, top and sides of the body is in a brown worsted cloth, selected for wearing qualities and appearance. At the bottoms of the doors and under the cowl, where upholstery is most exposed to wear, leather fabric, closely matching the cloth, is used. Both cushion and seat back are removable, and luggage too large to be stowed under the rear deck cover can be passed through the opening provided in this way.

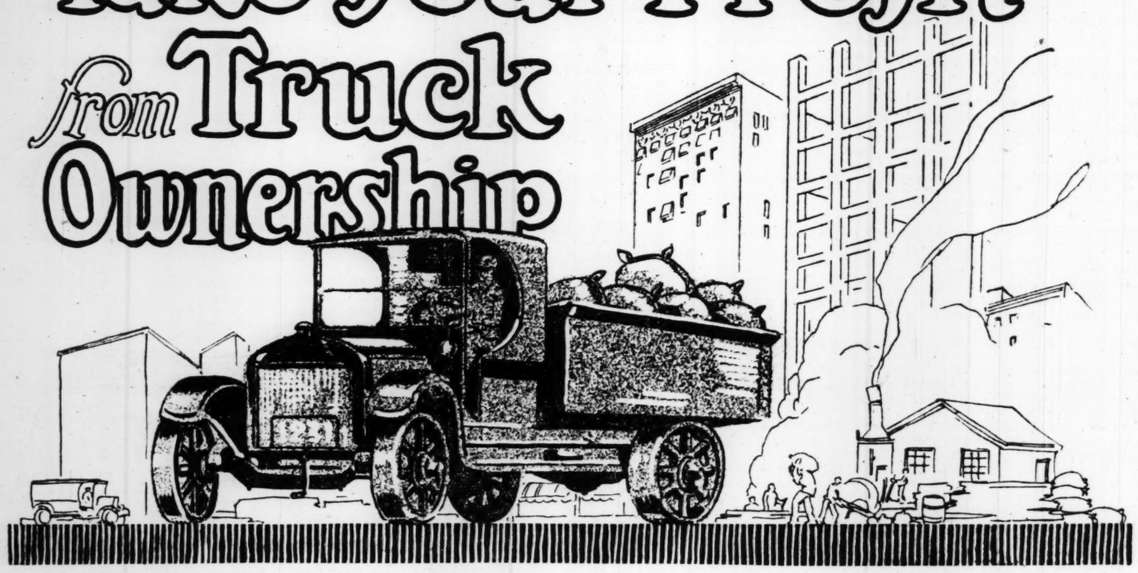
Take Your Profit from Truck Ownership



The business man who has hauling problems which can be satisfactorily solved by owning a truck, or a fleet of trucks, is overlooking a source of profit too well proven to admit of any argument.

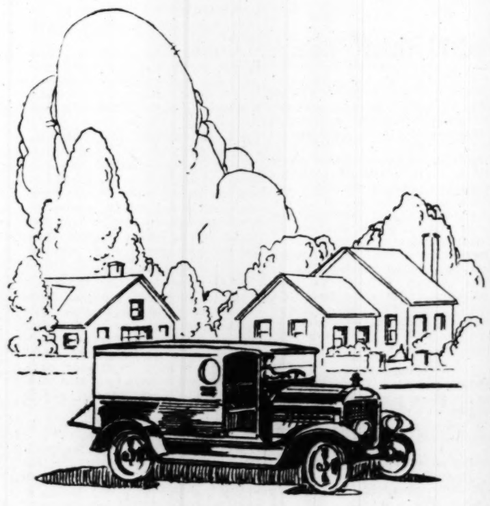
Practical men — those with actual experience in delivery with horse-drawn vehicles, those who know the ins and outs of connections with service companies which sell delivery service — have analyzed the advantages and disadvantages of light or heavy duty trucks for large or small businesses.

So many tests have been conducted, there are experiences which will parallel the peculiar requirements of any business—large or small. The results of these analyses can be obtained by consultation with any of the truck dealers who advertise in the Post-Dispatch.

Truck manufacturers have such accurate knowledge of hauling problems, they can and do give profitable advice—honest advice. That their advice is honest is indicated by the fact that they have, when investigation disclosed unfavorable conditions, advised against the purchase of trucks.

If you even think you can make profitable use of a truck, or a fleet, consult some reliable dealer, and be guided by his advice. If a new equipment is not advisable, select one or more of the good used bargains advertised in the classified "Automobiles" columns of today's Post-Dispatch.

The list you consult will be largest because the Post-Dispatch regularly carries far more used car advertisements than all other St. Louis newspapers added together.



Progress

Two recent developments have focused public attention on Graham Brothers Trucks as never before.

One was the sweeping price reductions of May 15th, ranging from $80 to $160.

The other was Graham Brothers ascendancy to leadership by building more 1½ ton trucks than any other manufacturer in the world, during the first quarter of 1925, and by achieving second position in the 1 ton and 1½ ton fields combined.

Progress such as this deserves public attention—and eliminates all doubt as to the logical truck to buy!

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

AMATEURS WILL TRY PHOTO TRANSMISSION

Experiments With "Eye Service" May Include Sending of Hookup Diagrams and Checks.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—There seems no limit to the practical purposes to which the new radio "eye service," as it is called by its inventor, Dr. C. Francis Jenkins of this city, can be put. Its possibilities range from the transmission of written messages and sketches between amateurs, to the rapid exchange of checks between bank cashiers, the transmission of detailed plans and specifications, and even the distribution of illustrated page copy to local publishers by press syndicates.

So far, only the amateurs are making any practical use of the Jenkins' apparatus, although commercial interests are investigating its value in several quarters.

At the request of Dr. Jenkins, the Department of Commerce has advised licensed amateurs that they may transmit and receive pictures, drawings, sketches and maps or combinations of sketches and messages by radio. The apparatus offered to amateurs by Mr. Jenkins, in a sort of co-operative arrangement so that they may aid in developing this new radio art, may be used in conjunction with amateur radio transmitting apparatus under existing licenses and on the amateur wave lengths only, the Department points out. It is understood that the 80-meter wave length is a serviceable one. Fortunately, it is so low that it will not interfere with broadcast reception in any way.

Secretary K. B. Warner of the American Radio Relay League is co-operating with Dr. Jenkins in his efforts to aid amateurs, as he foresees a great future in this application of radio. Amateurs who are always carrying on communications with brother operators in distant sections of the country, he says, may now exchange "hookups" by this method. With the new machines they can exchange diagrams in six or seven minutes instead of waiting about a week for the mails to carry them.

If one amateur happens to owe another a dollar or two, he could write out and transmit a check with facsimile signature payable to the addressee. Whether a bank would accept this with proper identification is not yet known, but it seems probable. This is believed to have great commercial and banking possibilities, once suitable mediums and means of identification are perfected. Even though a dozen stations picked up the radio check it would only be valid in the hands of the payee.

The amateurs are working out the details of practical transmission of radio pictures and manuscripts for Dr. Jenkins, who is offering them prizes for original ideas and applications of this "eye" service.

He foresees other uses of his picture transmitter than just for the pictorial press. Pages of features, editorials and cartoons might be transmitted to a string of papers from a central distributing source. If this is accomplished with success and combined with a photolithographic process, a great amount of type setting, cut making and many present publication methods might be eliminated. Similarly, he believes, whole pages or even papers, could be transmitted throughout the country by radio for this method of publication simultaneously in several cities, headlines, text, illustrations, cartoons and all.

Another application would be transmitting sets of engineering plans and specifications, or corrections to such plans, by radio for bids, or to engineers located some distance apart.

Other possibilities are radio letters in one's own handwriting, legal decisions and official papers, including executive pardons, which might save many lives, when days would be required for the transmission of the original documents. It is foreseen even, that wills properly witnessed, might be sent by this radio process so as to meet legal requirements, but courts would have to pass on the facsimile documents as received.

Soldering Lore.

A requisite to neat soldering is to first have the iron thoroughly cleaned, making sure that the connections to be soldered are also clean. Rub them slightly with a file or sandpaper to brighten the surfaces. The next step is tinning the iron. When the iron is hot, plunge into flux and apply solder to the tip, and afterwards rub with a damp cloth. When ready to solder, apply the flux very sparingly. Poor connections are caused by the use of excessive quantities. When using solder having a flux core, it is unnecessary to apply any flux in advance of soldering.

Keep Battery Active.

A storage battery should never be allowed to sit idle in a discharged or semi-discharged condition. If is best to have a small battery charger on hand and wired up so that the battery can be put on charge each night immediately after it has been used. If the battery is kept fully charged from day to day its life will be much greater than if it is used until it is practically discharged.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. How can I get a good ground connection to my radio set? My room is on the second floor and I now havea wire dropped from my window to an eight-foot pipe in the earth. There is no water pipe or anything else in my room that could be used as a ground? R. K. U.

A. If a water pipe is not handy and the pipe ground does not work well try suspendinga duplicate of your antenna several feet above the ground, under the antenna if possible. Use the same number of wires as are in the antenna and make this counterpoise about the same length as the antenna. It may be a little shorter or a little longer, according to the space available. However, if at all possible, a water pipe would be most satisfactory, even if you have to run the ground lead through a room or two to get to it.

Q. I have a variometer and two variable condensers, and I would like to know what kind of a hookup I could use with these particular parts. D. R.

A. A good circuit for a regenerative receiver was shown in these columns in the edition of May 31, a copy of which may be obtained from the business office.

Q. The writer has two wires strung on the same spreader four feet apart and one of the wires is used by a neighbor for an antenna. Each is connected to a regenerative receiver and interferes with the other considerably. How may such interference be eliminated? C. S. E.

A. There are two possible ways in which the interference may be eliminated. One is by running the aerials at right angles to each other and the other is by employing non-regenerative receivers.

Q. Is it possible to transform 110 volts d. c. to any desired voltage? G. K. H

A. Providing a voltage less than 110 volts is required it is possible to reduce the d. c. by means of resistances. To obtain voltages higher than 110 volts from the d. c. supply is a rather complicated and expensive process. The method used to increase a direct current voltage to a higher voltage is to convert the direct current into alternating current by means of a converter and then step up the alternating current through a transformer to the required voltage. This high voltage alternating current must then be rectified back to direct current by a vacuum tube or chemical rectifier.

Q. Why is it that signals do not stop at the same moment that the filament current to the tubes is cut off? The signals always continue to come through for a short time after the filaments are turned off. D. M.

A. The heat caused by the flow of the current through the filament wires increases the molecular activity of the material in the filament wires and causes the small negative charges called electrons to be thrown off. The action of these electrons and their control by the grid currents are responsible for the detection or amplification of the tube. It is the heat that causes the electrons to be radiated and not the current. The current only serves to heat the wires. When the current is turned off of the filament electrons continue to fly off the wires until they have cooled. During this period signals can still be heard though only for a very short time. The higher the temperature of the filament the longer this period will be. Some alternating current tubes that have been designed do not permit the current to pass through the filament at all. The filament itself is made of a small piece of metal and is heated by a coil of wire or heating element. This heating element does not touch the filament.

Q. I have a three-tube regenerative receiver. As an antenna I use a Ducon socket and I am unable to hear any stations satisfactory with the exception of KSD. What could I do to improve my reception? H. A. K.

A. Aerial sockets made to operate receiving sets direct from the lighting circuits do not always work. The action of such an arrangement is dependent upon the characteristics of the light wires. When a set will not work from the light-socket aerial about the only satisfactory way to improve the operation of the set is to use an outside aerial and ground a receiver that will work from a loop. However, your trouble may be in the set rather than in the Ducon socket. Take it to a radio dealer or repair man and have him check the wiring.

Q. How may I obtain a license to operate an amateur station? A. B.

A. To operate an amateur station you must first pass an examination for an amateur operator's license. This license permits you to manipulate an amateur station only. To put up a station of your own you must take out an amateur station license. For further particulars write to the Supervisor of Radio, Federal Building, Chicago, Ill.

AVERAGE OF POWER ON THE INCREASE

Some Small Broadcasters Are Dropping Out, but Large Ones Are Extending Their Scope.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Changes in the number of broadcasting stations on the air at monthly intervals are not unlike the fluctuations of a popular stock on the Brokers' tickers or boards. Having started at three in September, 1921, to carry out the parallel, this broadcasting "stock" stood at 570 on June 1; only 21 points below the peak reached in May, 1925. An analysis of these figures indicates that broadcasting today, judged solely from the active stations on the air, is well above par, which is put at 500 stations.

When the Department of Commerce record of the number of stations was started in September, 1921, there were but three stations in operation. Opening at three, the monthly totals rose gradually until February, 1922, when 60 was recorded. The next month this figure more than doubled, being 137. The succeeding months showed increases of about 74 each month, and in August a total of 508 was reached. Since that date the number of broadcasters has never been below par.

The increase continued until the high was reached in May, 1923; 591 stations were then active. The "stock" experienced a falling off to 562 in September, but another rise to 570 was manifest in October, followed by a short slump down to 527 at the end of 1923.

During the year 1924 the figure 589 was the high and 519 low for the year. Since September there has been a gradual and healthy increase of a few points a month and today the total stands at 570, with indications of a continued bullish trend. January showed a gain of nine stations, February an increase of 15, March a loss of three, April a gain of seven and May an increase of four. That is, 13 stations went off the air in May, but 17 new ones opened.

Despite these statistics, some experts of the Department of Commerce believe the total of stations on the air will soon decrease; and that our "stock" figures will fall below par. One official predicts that by June 1, 1926, there will not be more than 400 stations on the air; lack of results will discourage many small and some large broadcasters, he thinks.

Of the stations broadcasting, 150 are high-powered units, operating at 500 or more watts each. The smaller and less important stations seem to be the ones that are falling by the wayside. Of the powerful broadcasters, 99 are classed as B's and 61 as A's. The average power of stations is increasing; small stations seeking licenses today are virtually curiosities. Most of the 136 proposed stations on the waiting list for wave lengths will seek power between 200 and 500 watts, it is reported.

It is expected that the total broadcasters will remain slightly above "par," or 500, for at least another year, although it is felt that the ranks of the broadcasters will be greatly thinned out in the next two years, the result of a sort of "survival of the fittest" theory, based upon popularity, public sentiment and service.

USEFUL TIP ON FILAMENT CONTROL

If You Change Tube Be Sure to Consider Rheostat Resistance.

Filament rheostats are used in receiving sets to reduce and control the amount of current through the filament of the tube. Too much current often makes the receiver distort and reduces the volume. Too little current for the tube will mean that it will not be operated at its most efficient point and the receiver will not have the volume it should.

With different style tubes and batteries, different values of resistances must be used in the rheostat. For the WD-11, WD-12, UV-200, C-300, UV-201, C-301 type of tubes the resistance should be between six and seven ohms and capable of carrying at least an ampere of current without overheating. If the UV-201-A or C-301-A type of tube is to be used, then the resistance of the rheostat should be from 20 to 30 ohms, usually 25 ohms.

If a receiver has been wired with rheostats for one type of tube, say the C-300, and you wish to use the C-301-A type of tube, then additional resistance must be added in some way to the rheostat or the rheostat must be replaced with one having a higher value of resistance. If this is not done, too much current will be passed through the filament, no regulation will be provided and the filament of the tube will likely be damaged by burning too brightly.

The same holds true of the UV-199 or C-299 type of tube if it is to be used in a receiver that uses low resistance rheostats.

You will not need to discard the lower resistance rheostats and replace them with others of higher value when you change tubes in your sets. There are a number of makes of resistance cartridges available that may be used to bring up the total value of the rheostat to a point where it will control the 301-A and 299 types of tubes.

All that is necessary is to disconnect one of the wires to the rheostat, fasten on the resistance, and attach the wire to the other end of the resistance. If the value of the rheostat is six ohms, then the use of an external resistance of 20 ohms will bring the total resistance of the rheostat up to the correct value for a C-301-A tube.

Most of these resistance units are fixed, some are in the form of strips and others cartridges. The only drawback to the use of this type is that the limited variation in resistance permissible by the rheostat is often not sufficient to take care of the tube needs.

One type of resistance to be used in this connection is made somewhat like a rheostat, with a small arm that can be moved over and the wires to secure any desired value. With this type you can find the correct value needed for any change of tubes you are making, simply by moving the contact arm around with your fingers. If you wish to return to the old style of tube that requires more current, then simply slide the arm around until all of the resistance is again cut out and only the resistance of the rheostat is in the circuit.

RADIO THE WORLD OVER

A survey of the world's broadcasting stations by the Department of Commerce shows that 41 countries are transmitting news and entertainment via the radiotelephone for the public. The total stations in operation is shown as 926, but many more are proposed.

The United States leads with 564 stations; Canada is second with 83; soviet Russia has 43; and Cuba is next with 38 stations. The United Kingdom and Mexico vie for fifth place with 20 each. France and Germany are also tied, having 18 apiece. Australia is listed with 16 and Argentina as having 13. From this figure downward the numbers decrease rapidly, six smaller nations bringing up the rear, each with a single broadcaster.

Naturally North America has the largest number of the continents, with the tremendous lead given it by the United States and Canadian stations—a total of 709. Europe comes next with 103, and Asia is third, its stations numbering 55.

It is difficult to tabulate or classify foreign stations, since no direct reports are sent in and new stations are opening every week. Recently soviet Russia announced plans for the erection of nine new broadcasters, which would bring the total in Russia to 52 stations.

Soldering Flux.

Only pure resin flux should be used for all soldered joints. Tests show that where acid pastes and compounds are used they either spatter, fume or run over surrounding delicate parts. This causes leakage and reduces resistance in a manner comparable to a grid leak. Therefore, these fluxes should never be used on radio work.

Worth Knowing.

Radio frequency and regeneration seldom work together for the simple reason that the set becomes unstable and extremely hard to handle. Adding only one stage of radio frequency to an ordinary regenerative set is a pure waste of time, as the regeneration action is fully as good as one stage of radio.

AMATEURS TO HEAR MACMILLAN TESTS

Planes to Be Used in Expedition Will Transmit Signals on Long and Short Waves.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Test transmission from the three amphibian planes to be used in connection with the MacMillan expedition to the Arctic will be continued after the planes arrive in Boston and until the expedition sails. The tests will be on both the 38.5 and the 425 meter wave lengths.

Amateurs throughout the entire country have been asked to listen in on these tests as well as the tests to be conducted while the planes are in flight from Philadelphia to Boston. Regular radio listeners who are acquainted with code have been advised that they may be able to pick up the 425-meter signals near where they find WSB, Atlanta. The 38.5-meter signals, however, will not be audible to the ordinary receiver.

Although no voice messages will be transmitted on the flight from Philadelphia to Boston, it is expected that some tests with voice on the lower wave length may be attempted during the days that the transmitters are waiting in Boston for the expedition to sail.

It is hoped particularly that amateurs in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast will attempt to tune in the low wave length signals. The short waves have a tendency to jump great distances, though they are inaudible at intermediate points, and are liable to be heard in the United States during the summer months while the MacMillan party is up in the far North. The 425-meter set is a regular navy transmitter and is not expected to be heard at great distances.

Among the most interested of the listeners in of the short wave signals will be officials of the naval research laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., where a special watch will be set to study the tests and to demonstrate to what extent the signals may be expected to be heard later in the summer.

The Best "Ground."

High resistance is introduced into the circuit by heating system if a ground wire is connected to the radiator. This will have considerable effect on the receiving set. The cold water pipe is best for ground connections.

FLAG DAY PROGRAM A KSD FEATURE

Music and Addresses at Radio Dealers' Dinner Will Be Another of Week's Attractions.

A Flag day celebration to be broadcast by KSD will be given under the auspices of the District Council Masonic Service Association of the Thirty-third and Fifty-seventh Districts of Missouri. This is the feature scheduled for Monday evening's program at this station. The celebration will be in two parts. The first is KSD studio will consist of two addresses, one on "The Flag," presented by R. C. Sutton, president of the council and the other on "Patriotism," delivered by Orestes Mitchell, grand master of Masons of Missouri. In this program there will be violin solos and songs by Clay Beckers and Theodore Grasse.

The second part of the program will be given by the band of the St. Louis Chapter, Order of De Molay, Clarence Zieger, leader.

Wednesday evening KSD will broadcast a program of music and addresses given at the annual dinner of the Radio Dealers' Association of St. Louis at the City Club. This will begin at 6 o'clock, and will take the place of the Lyric Skydome music, which usually is broadcast on Wednesday evening.

Other features of the week are a miscellaneous program by John Herget, accordionist, C. H. Bartlett, banjoist, and W. J. Cantillon, guitarist, to be sent out on Friday evening, the dinner music at Hotel Statler on Tuesday evening, and the stage specialties, orchestral and organ music at the Grand Central Theater, followed by the dance music at the City Club, on Saturday night.

The Best "Ground."

To find the best ground, connect several leads from different grounded objects to a set switch taps, connect the switch lever to the ground terminal of the set. By moving the lever while the set is in operation the ground best suited for the set will be found.

If Tube Fails to Light.

If the vacuum tube does not light it may be caused by many other defects besides a burnt-out tube. The "A" battery switch or connections may be open, dirty contacts of the rheostat, socket or tube tips, or the tube may not be seated properly in the socket.

RADIO COMPASSES IN USE ON LINERS

Captain of Leviathan Reports the Device Was Found of Great Benefit in Fog.

Practically all the big liners of the Shipping Board are now equipped with radio compasses used as aides in navigation particularly in ascertaining the location of vessels with respect to shore stations, harbor light houses at entrances and other ships at sea.

Of the 20 ships so equipped, four are on South American routes, six on transatlantic lanes and ten in the Pacific. The first vessel to be equipped with a radio, or direction-finding compass, two years ago, was the President McKinley.

Recently Capt. Hartley of the S. S. Leviathan reported that in a bad fog his radio compass was found of great benefit, enabling him to make port when due.

Capt. January of the President Pierce, out of San Francisco, says that he has found his new radio compass "of great utility and a safety factor of no mean importance." During a voyage from Manila in typhoon weather, he was able to pick Waglan Light on the China Coast in hazy weather, with very low visibility by means of the compass, arriving at port on schedule. Leaving Hong Kong for Shanghai, he encountered typhoon gales, accompanied by heavy rains and no visibility. He was not able to pick up any lights after leaving Breaker Point, and had lost his deep-sea sounding leads. Later on he was able to run in and pick up Haigha Light by means of radio bearings taken from the S. S. President Hayes, which was in sight of land and could give him his position. This saved him waiting for clearer weather and at least one tide, probably half a day's running time. The time saved on this voyage, on which he encountered more bad weather than in over a year, was approximated 24 hours, a direct result of radio compass service. It is believed that on the one voyage the compass more than paid for itself.

Wave Length Measurements.

Wave lengths of radio communication are measured in meters, meaning a certain number of meters from trough to trough of the waves sent out from the transmitter. One meter equals 39.37 inches.

WIRELES TELEPHONE IN COMMERCIAL USE

Successful Secret Communication Has the Ancient Grecian Capital as Its Base.

One of the first applications of the wireless telephone to everyday commercial use is being made by the American Express Co. for communication between its offices at Athens and Piraeus, in Greece. Piraeus, the seaport and business district of Athens, with which it used to be connected by the famous "Long Walls," is about seven miles distant from the parent city, and the American Express uses the wireless telephone to supplement the regular telephone system for quick communication, especially on exchange quotations, between the two offices.

The sets were offered for sale by a local Athens concern, but were without takers until the American banking and travel firm bought them. Now they would not be without them, and a girl operator at either end is kept busy practically all day long transmitting or writing down the messages. In order to make communication possible in both directions, of course a transmitting as well as a receiving set is required at each end. The receiving sets used are of the 4-tube type, but are permanently tuned to receive only the opposite transmitting sets.

One of the 400 Americans who recently returned from the express company's winter cruise to the Mediterranean, when asked the most wonderful thing he had seen on his trip, said without hesitation it was the wireless telephone in ordinary commercial use.

Concerning the Condenser.

A condenser in a receiving set is designed to have a large capacity in a small space. It consists essentially of metal plates which are insulated from each other by a dielectric or insulating material. It is used in a radio-frequency circuit to tune an inductance coil to a certain wave length, and is known in this connection as a variable condenser. It is used also to stop the flow of direct current and pass alternating current, and in this connection its capacity is fixed, and it is known as a by-pass condenser.

To Simplify Assembly.

Before removing wires to make repairs, mark both sides with a number. This will avoid the possibility of a mistake and make assembly easier.

RADIO'S BIGGEST VOICE.

The largest loud speaker in the world will have its public debut at the forthcoming Second Annual Radio Show, to be conducted by the Radio Merchants' Association of Washington, D. C., from Oct. 5 to 11, inclusive.

The giant speaker is the latest development of the Radio Corporation of America's laboratories, and is designed to supersede the public address system of amplification now in general use in auditoriums through the country.

Instead of a number of horns scattered through the building, as in the present method, but one horn will be used in the new RCA system. This horn, the largest ever built, has a carrying range of from five feet to five miles with perfect clarity.

A Suggestion.

If the socket of a vacuum tube does not fit snugly around the base, wrap several thicknesses of paper strip cut to a width that is equal to the height of the base.

Treatment of Baseboard Woods.

Untreated, porous soft woods used for baseboards will absorb moisture like a sponge. Dry soft wood can be dipped, or rather soaked, in boiling hot paraffin, which will fill the pores and exclude moisture.

PAINLEVE FORGOT THE NAME

Senate in Uproar When He Points Out Briand.

(Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.)

PARIS, June 13.—Like so many famous professors of science, Prime Minister Painleve, who is known to the world primarily as one of its greatest modern mathematicians, is excessively absent-minded.

During a recent debate on Morocco in the Chamber of Deputies—a debate of crucial importance to his ministry—M. Painleve discovered as he was making an address that he had forgotten the name of his Foreign Minister (M. Briand). "I am ready to meet the wishes of the Chamber," he said, "and the question of Morocco, which is so important, can be discussed today, tomorrow or Wednesday. Tomorrow, however, may be unsuitable because my friend, M. ...." Here M. Painleve forgot the name, hesitated and stammered and pointed to M. Briand. "I mean," he went on, "M. ... M., the ex-Premier ....." and then again he came to a halt, blushing. "M. ...." he tried once again and the Chamber, interrupting with roars of laughter, shouted M. Briand's name. It was only then that M. Painleave was able to continue. "Yes," he went on. "Thank you, that is. M. B.... B.... will be detained in the Senate tomorrow, and so perhaps it will be better for us to postpone the debate till Wednesday."

Roll Barrel 2500 Miles on Bet.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 13.—Two members of the Turnverein "Gut Heil" of Krefeld, are rolling a barrel nine feet high and six feet in diameter, along the German frontier to win a wager. According to the conditions of the bet, they are obliged to roll the 769-pound cask around the entire German border (2500 miles) within a year. This requires them to cover at least 6.9 miles daily. Thus far, they have averaged 12.4 miles since they started in January. Both are confident they will return to Krefeld by Christmas to pocket the 1500 marks at stake. While en route, the xpenses of the two "rollers" are being defrayed by the Turnverein to the extent of the equivalent of $6 weekly for each.

Just What Is Food?

The functions of food are to yield energy, build tissue and regulate body processes. Proteins serve both to build tissues and yield energy. Phosphates help build tissues and keep the blood neutral. That's why proteins and phosphates are so valuable for spring fatigue. Plenty of both in Old Monticello Tonic.

IN A THEATER BOX---A TRAITOR AND THE GIRL WHO HAD SWORN TO KILL HIM

Mencia Carniciu Shoots Todor Panitza During Performance of 'Peer Gynt' in Vienna Playhouse

She Had Lured Him and His Wife and Bodyguard to the Performance Under Guise of Friendship—Waited Until Tension of the Audience Was at Highest Pitch, Then Opened Fire on Her Quarry as He Was Absorbed in Climax on the Stage—Motive was Patriotic Revenge for His Murder of Macedonian Political Leaders Years Ago.

VIENNA, May 15.

MADAME or Mademoiselle they knew not which! She was entirely mysterious, this woman in black. That she should have come unescorted to the Burgtheater, one of the most fashionable in Vienna, for an evening performance was strange. She was young, her gray fur-trimmed opera cloak of expensive fashion, her figure strikingly svelt. In the foyer she was stared at by men of the boulevards. Some bolder than the rest tried to see her face as she passed. But the large brimmed black hat she wore completely shadowed her features. One guessed readily enough, however, that she was handsome. Out of the frame of black hat, black hair and black shadows her eyes glowed brilliantly. Spanish, you say? But the women of the Balkans, too, are dark. No, she was not placed, either by nationality or class. Except, that no one would believe she was of the demi-monde.

An usher showed her to a box. She sat well in the blackness of the draperies. From her place of semiconcealment she seemed to be studying her surroundings with minute attention to detail before the curtain went up. One might have supposed that there was a purpose in her visit to the play beyond mere entertainment. She was speculated about by the cynical. A rendezvous? A jealous wife? A sweetheart? Or possibly some stage struck daughter of a noble house? She was a study, this girl.

Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" had the stage. The play seemed to strike her fancy. She followed it with noticeable intensity. Now and then she nodded to herself and swept the theater with calculative eyes. Play and audience seemed all a part of her plan. When the play rose to high suspense and the audience quieted to closest attention she was pleased. During the fifth act when Peer and the Cook are struggling for possession of the overturned boat she seemed to be marking the time of the climax.

She Comes Again

The smart playgoers around her got a little nervous to see her taking it so seriously. They felt that she was making the audience part of the drama; that she herself was the only spectator. Her detachment puzzled them. What was her plan? Did she have a purpose in so closely watching audience and play? Would there be a scene? Had she come to the theater to bring off a climax all her own? But nothing happened. The play ended. The audience moved out. As mysteriously as she had appeared, she vanished. Perhaps several who had seen her wondered, and discussed the enigma over their suppers afterwards.

The next night, May 9, she came again.

At this, her second performance of Peer Gynt she did not come alone. There were five others, three men and two women. Four of her guests—she was evidently the hostess—were married couples. A short, swarthy, bearded man and his wife; a pleasant, fat Bulgarian and his wife. The third man appeared to be a student and was youngish, with wild black hair and fierce eyes. Certain of the audience identified the bearded man as Todor Dimitroff, the other married man as Boris Mihalovic, and the student as one Bagatinoff. But nobody recognized the hostess. She intrigued this audience as much as she had the audience on the night before.

It soon developed that she had engaged two boxes. The Dimitroffs, Bagatinoff and she seated themselves in one box. It was the same that she alone had occupied the night previous. The Mihalovics took seats in a box behind.

The Theater Party

Those in the audience who took note of the party doubtless thought it strange that the hostess should seat herself behind the three who shared her box. Instead of seating her escort beside her, she placed him with Dimitroff and Madame Dimitroff in the front row of chairs. Her act could have been explained, however, on the ground that she wished to converse with her other two guests, in the box at the rear.

The three in front of the mysterious hostess were ill at ease for some reason. Husband and wife stirred in their chairs and searched the audience furtively. Bagatinoff, the student, likewise seemed on guard, as if against enemies. Their hostess appeared not to notice this, however, but chatted pleasantly with them and with her other guests.

When the curtain went up all six became engrossed in the play. Or was the mysterious woman only feigning interest? She had seen it the night before. Did the others know that? Probably they did not.

Climax—Make Believe and Real

"Peer Gynt" is an eerie piece. It ranges from pastoral Norway to Africa, from brooks to raging oceans, from village roistering to struggles in fairyland. It is a poem and a phantasm, a melody and a nightmare. The action rises tempestuously toward the fifth act, when in the second scene there is a fury of storm and waves on the stage.

Peer and the Cook fight for life in the water. They shout—lightning flashes, waves roar, there is a screaming rumble, then silence as the boat emerges and the——

In the theater that night a woman rose to her feet. She stood in the center of a box. It was the mysterious woman in black. She drew a pistol from her handbag. Pointing it at one of her guests in front of her who was engrossed in the scene on the stage, she fired one shot.

Dimitroff crumpled in his chair. His wife screamed and sprang up to shield her husband. Again her hostess fired. Madame sank down with a bullet through her head. Bagatinoff, the student, tried to grapple with the assassin. He fell with a bullet in his side.

The theater was in uproar. Startled stage hands bawled orders but could not decide to lower the curtain. On the stage the actors struggling in the imitation sea rose from the waves and staggered out of their parts.

Men seized the assassin before she could fire again. The crowd threatened to riot. Police reserves rushed in from the street, pushing down aisles jammed with terrified playgoers. For a space there was utmost confusion.

"What is your name?" a policeman asked the slayer.

"Mencia Carniciu," she answered readily.

Examination of those who had fallen before her fire revealed that Dimitroff was dead, his wife mortally wounded, and Bagatinoff seriously hurt.

"Yes, I killed him," she burst out, "and I'm glad I did!"

The dead man, his dying wife and the injured student were removed from the theater. Police who searched their clothes found that all were armed. The girl, Mencia, was placed under arrest as were Mihalovic and his wife. Madame Mihalovic was identified as the sister of Madame Dimitroff.

But who was Dimitroff. Why did Mencia Carniciu kill him? What was behind this shooting affair in the theater box?

While the police were trying to obtain the story from Mencia at a station some squares away, the play at the Burgtheater was resumed. Herr Kessler, who had the part of "Peer Gynt" made a speech to the audience in which he urged them to be calm and allow the drama to go on. The crowd soon subsided and the remaining scenes of the play were given.

Meanwhile developments were crowding swiftly upon each other at the police station. It was discovered that Dimitroff was not Dimitroff at all, but Todor Panitza, a notorious Macedonian political rogue and assassin. It developed, too, that Mencia Carniciu was not a jealous wife or sweetheart, but a Macedonian patriot who killed in prosecution of a vendetta. The Mihalovics were innocent tools of Mencia in her plot.

The girl spoke German so poorly that her interrogators were hours in learning the complete story. It was a tale of political intrigue in Balkans, of assassination and revenge, of a girl's resolve to put Todor Panitza where he could no longer scheme and slay.

Years ago a Macedonian revolutionary committee was formed with one Boris Sarafoff at its head, with the purpose of freeing Macedonia from Bulgar control and setting up an autonomous state. Todor Panitza was at first a prominent member of the committee but he quarreled with Sarafoff and other leaders. Pretending to be reconciled with them he accepted an invitation to dine at Sarafoff's house. He provoked a quarrel during the evening and shot Sarafoff and another leader to death, escaping afterwards to the mountains. Patriotic Macedonians of the revolutionary group swore vengeance.

She Swears Vengeance

Mencia Carniciu was a young girl then. She came of a wealthy Macedonian family which had suffered much at the hands of Bulgar tyrants. She was brought up with radical views in a group much similar in philosophy and practices to the old Russian nihilists. The proper method of defeating enemies, Mencia was taught, was to remove them by assassination. The arch enemy of Mencia's party was Panitza. He was held to be a traitor and a scoundrel.

Panitza, however, managed for 10 years to keep out of the way of those sworn to assassinate him. He became a bandit chief at one time in his career. During the war period he trafficked with the young Turks and with a reactionary party in Bulgaria which was pledged to keep Macedonia in subjection. All reports show him to have been a blackguard of the worst type. Fifty murders were laid to his hands.

After the war both Panitza and his enemies found Macedonia too hot for them. The League of Nations guaranteed the status quo of Macedonia and the radical elements there could no longer hope for a coup de'etat. So all varieties of Macedonia agitators drifted to Vienna where they made up one of the several foreign colonies in the Austrian capital. To Vienna came Panitza, posing as a Bulgarian merchant under the name of Dimitroff. And to Vienna also came Mencia Carniciu, now a young woman of 26. She still remembered her oath of vengeance against Panitza.

The Plot

Although Panitza kept his real identity closely guarded a disgruntled member of his party betrayed him. Mencia learned that the merchant Dimitroff was Panitza, the man she had vowed to kill. The traitor pointed him out to her in a Vienna restaurant one evening. And Mencia marked him for her prey.

She bought a Mauser automatic pistol in Sofia a year ago. Then she set about her plans for the assassination. She knew that Panitza and his wife were always heavily armed and that they never went out unless a bodyguard was along. The student, Bagatinoff, was one of these bodyguards. Mencia felt that she must lure Panitza to some place where he would relax vigilance. She feared to attempt the assassination on the street, considering the odds against success too great.

"By chance," she told the police, "I struck up an acquaintance with Madame Magdalen Mihalovic, who I learned was Panitza's sister-in-law. I told her that I was an invalid suffering from tuberculosis and had come to Vienna for treatment. We became quite friendly and I began to devise a scheme to strike at Panitza through her.

"It occurred to me that the best place for an assassination was in a theater box. It must be somewhere and on some occasion when Panitza would be off his guard. What was better than to inveigle him to a theater box, and while he was interested in the play, shoot him to death? So I angled for introduction to the Dimitroffs, as they called themselves, and was accepted as a friend because Madame Mihalovic vouched for me.

"There was great difficulty in getting the Dimitroffs to accept an invitation to the theater. They seemed always to be expecting an attempt to assassinate them. I learned that they never went out unless heavily armed and protected by a guard. Several times I invited them to plays, but each time they put me off with excuses.

Lured to the Theater

"Finally they said they would be my guests at a performance of "Peer Gynt" in the Municipal Theater. I engaged two boxes. The night before my theater party I went alone to the theater and sat through the performance. I wanted to determine when it would be best to start shooting. I decided that tension of the audience was greatest during the second scene of the fifth act. Then, I calculated, Panitza and his wife and bodyguard would be most engrossed in the play and would relax their vigilance.

"At the last moment I thought they would back out. Panitza clearly suspected something, but could not put his finger on it. He was vaguely troubled and ill at ease on the trip to the theater. The student, Bagatinoff, went along ostensibly as my escort, but I knew that Panitza was taking him as a bodyguard. The Mihalovics suspected nothing, luckily, and between us we managed to keep the spirits of the party at the proper pitch.

"There were but four chairs in the first box. That left two of the party out. I maneuvered so that the Mihalovics would take the second box, leaving me with Panitza, his wife, and Bagatinoff in the first one. I sat behind the Panitzas so as to talk to Madame Mihalovic who sat behind me in the second box. That kept the party together. It also gave me the position I needed.

"I carried the pistol in my handbag. For a time it looked as if Bagatinoff and Panitza were too vigilant for me to make a move.

SEVEN WOMEN ON A JURY SOB, BUT VOTE TO CONVICT GIRL SLAYER

Their Men Colleagues Were in Favor of Acquitting Mildred Sage—The Women Had Their Way

New Jersey Girl Who Killed Man After Four Years of Misery Must Serve From Five to 10 Years in Prison at Hard Labor, Her Sisters Decree—Plight of the Slayer Aroused Much Sympathy During Trial and Both Men and Women Jurors Were Moved to Tears—But the Women Said "She Has Sinned and Must Be Punished."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PATERSON, N. J., June 13.

MILDRED SAGE looked at the jury which was to try her for murder as defendants usually do, with a mixture of trust and distrust. Five men and seven women there were. Mildred Sage was not sure about the women. She had lived too much in a world of men, too little in the world of these stout, complacent housewives and mothers. She knew from bitter experience how the men would regard her. They would feel sorry, when the time came, and pity her. They'd still have a sneaking sense of chivalry, even though the evidence made her out pretty bad.

But the women? How would they think of her? Well-dressed, respectable, matronly they sat in the jury box. A trifle pleased and proud of their new place in law. Well cared for, sheltered, respectable. So respectable. Mildred Sage shuddered, inwardly. She was not sure about these women on the jury at all. Since the day when she made the unfortunate step which carried her without the pale, she had had several occasions to test good women's opinion of her. On the streets she was treated like a traitor to her sex, by all feminine passersby who guessed her story. How would she be treated in the courtroom?

Attorney John A. Mathews, her counsel, reassured her. He had not been afraid of women on the jury. In fact, he had challenged so few that the jury was selected in 23 minutes.

"Don't you worry," he said, manlike, "I know women. These are all intelligent jurors. Most of them are married and four have daughters of their own. I'll play up the daughter angle strongly. I'll ask them to put their daughters in your place." He did not possess much first hand knoweldge of the behavior of women on juries, but he had his own theory. He believed that the women would behave just like women spectators behind the rail. They'd shrink from sordid testimony and burst into tears at the pathos of this girl's plight. He had but to play on their emotions, he decided. He looked at the jury confidently, believing his case good and the jurors in a receptive mood. He did not fear these women on the jury.

The trial began.

It was not a nice story. It couldn't have been with Sam Cantelmo in it. Most of the witnesses, though they were not permitted to say so, seemed of the opinion that Sam ought to have been shot long before Mildred Sage did it. Sam was a cadet. He procured girls and put them on the street to work for him. From their shame he made money, which he spent in dubious enterprises. Testimony was that he had been a brute and a bully, a cheat and a liar.

Cantelmo Was Feared

Mildred's brother, George, testified that he knew Sam was mistreating his sister, but was afraid of him. Mrs. Georgiana Johnson, Mildred's cousin, said on the stand that she had tried to help Mildred escape from Sam, but gave it up through fear. Pete Velano, a pugilist, gave oath that, he, too, was in terror of Sam. Mrs. Ruth Cantelmo, widow of the deceased, from whom she had been separated several years, wanted to testify for the defense that Sam had been a bad man of whom everyone was afraid, but the State objected on a technicality.

Anyway, the picture of Sam was very distinct. One almost saw him swaggering down the street, a yellow-skinned, black-eyed villain, wearing a loud suit and a flower in his buttonhole. Sleek, powerful, treacherous. One almost heard his staccato threats and saw his lowering brows. "I beat you, I keel you," were Sam's favorite expressions, when angered. And he was often angered, flying into hot, Latin rages.

Then Mildred Sage entered the story. Looking at her the men and women on the jury saw a most ordinary little person, with a great shock of black bobbed hair and horn-rimmed spectacles on her nose. She was not of the aristocracy of vice. Here was no gilded lady of the evening. The fabled "easier way" had not been a luxurious path for her. She was of the great army of lost and forgotten girls, a commonplace atom.

Mildred Tells Her Story

She took the witness stand, timidly. She had no gallant bravado. Reporters noticed that she shrank a bit when her eyes met the gaze of the seven women on the jury. She had no jewels to flaunt, no sables.

"I was in a business college in Little Falls, N. J., when I met Sam," she began.

He had made love to her, saying he was a single man. He had money. She did not know then where he got it. She knows now. Perhaps he made her an offer of marriage; she neglected to say. It was enough for her to tell the court that she had gone away with Sam. Pretty soon she was living with him. That was three years ago. When he tired of her, after a few months, he said one day, "Get out and go to work." She became a street walker, taking her earnings back to Sam. He boasted of her success in the profession. He called her his "Little Gold Mine."

Soon he took to beating her. Last January she was at the Paterson General Hospital recovering from the effects of one of these beatings. Her family tried to intervene. But Sam drove them away with threats. Other men now and then remonstrated with Sam, but he cowed them. She was afraid to break away.

Finally she made one last attempt to leave the life she led with him. Borrowing $800 from her mother she went into partnership with Sam in the Maple Terrace Tearoom in Little Falls. She believed that would free her from the other profession. She hoped it would in time free her from Sam. But she could not get rid of her cadet. He insisted on living with her in rooms behind the restaurant.

She had learned by this time of his marriage. While he no longer demanded that she be a street walker he was resolved to continue their relationship. She seems to have mustered enough courage to defy him, if not actually to leave him. They quarreled bitterly time and again. Usually he would finish by beating her.

The night of the murder—Mildred Sage fainted on the stand when she was asked to tell about it—they had fallen out again. He was a trifle uglier than usual and her brother, George, who was there, determined to interfere.

Mildred "Babe" Sage and Mrs. Cantelmo, who stood by her.

The jury on the way to court.

She Fired Through Fear

"We were in my room," she related. "Sam was abusing me. George told him to stop. Sam pulled a knife and George rushed him. I saw a revolver in the bureau drawer. I was afraid Sam would kill us both. I grabbed up the gun and shot at Sam until there were no more shots left."

Even then, she was in terror of Sam. To make sure that he was dead she ran downstairs, got his revolver and returning, emptied it at the body.

"This guy is plenty full of lead," they remarked at the morgue.

Well, that was her defense. That was the excuse she offered to this jury of five men and seven women. She said she had shot to protect herself and brother. She did not say what perhaps was nearer the truth, that she had shot to free herself of Sam. Her lawyer had told her that was not a proper defense against a murder charge.

Attorney Mathews addressed the jury. He had arranged a plea which he thought would appeal to both the men and the women jurors.

"This was not murder," he exclaimed, while the jury wept. "This was the visitation of Divine Providence. Our little Magdalene was used by God to send to eternity a sinner whose wages must be death."

Then he turned his oratory on the women jurors.

"Let your motherly instincts guide you," he pleaded. "Protect the girls of this land. Send this unfortunate sinner back to her mother with the kindness of Jesus who said, 'Go and sin no more.' This girl never had a chance. She was a school girl of 18 when Sam Cantelmo came into her life. She is but 22 now. Her best days are all before her, the ugly past is dead.

"Remember, women of the jury, this man robbed her of what to woman is more precious than life itself. She took his life in return. I am not speaking of the justice of the exchange, I only know that she has suffered these four years. I think she has paid enough."

Exit the Jury, Tearful

Mercy was his plea. And even the Assistant Prosecutor who had charge of the State's case recommended mercy.

"I do not ask you for a verdict of murder in the first degree," he told the jury. "You should find her guilty either of manslaughter or second degree murder.

"We do not wish to persecute this girl. We wish to have her put in an institution where she may be cured bodily and mentally."

The jury filed out to deliberate. The five men were drying their eyes and the seven women were still weeping as they vanished behind the door of the jury room. In her chair, little Mildred Sage looked confident. Perhaps, after all, her lawyer was right. Perhaps her sisters would judge her as leniently as her brothers.

In the jury room—

The five men jurors were in favor of acquittal. They felt sorry for Mildred Sage. Having heard the testimony, they were willing to say that Sam Cantelmo got just about what he deserved. "This girl has suffered enough already," they said to each other. It was their opinion that Mildred Sage had been no match for Sam Cantelmo; that her downfall was due entirely to him. They looked upon her as the victim of circumstances.

Mildred in a dejected mood.

They realized, too, having had men's opportunities to investigate such things, what a fate awaited Mildred Sage in the penitentiary. They could not see what end would be gained in sending this young girl to hard labor in prison. Certainly, she would come out no better than when she went in, if as good. Prison life hardens women, it is ruinous to any attempt to re-establish themselves in society. The men jurors argued that Mildred Sage had wanted to go straight; that she had really slain her master to free herself from his control; that the past four years had been lesson enough to her.

They Sympathized, but—

"We'd better send this poor little kid home to her mother," they said, sentimentally. "If a girl of mine had gone through what she suffered I'd want to kill the man who made her do it."

But the women jurors were different.

They dried their eyes and told the men not to be silly, softheads. Of course, it was too bad, they admitted, that the girl should have gotten herself into such a mess. But there she was, wasn't she? She had killed a man. There was no getting around that. The men mustn't allow a smooth-talking lawyer to obscure the essential point. And they mustn't feel so sorry for this girl.

She was a bad girl, said the women jurors. It hadn't been all the man's fault, either. In the last analysis it was up to Mildred Sage. She chose that life. Of course, the women jurors did feel sorry for her. They cried a little even as they argued. But that was no excuse for killing a man. What if every woman who decided to live with a man without marriage killed him the first time she got mad at him? what would the law come to?

Besides, the women jurors felt that Mildred Sage should be made an example to other wayward girls. Men, they argued, were too willing to acquit girls of all blame; but women knew different. Women knew that usually it was as much the girl's fault as the man's. And girls who went wrong should be punished as a lesson to others. Though, of course, the women jurors did feel sorry for poor little Mildred.

Before the deadly determination of the female of the species the five men jurors wavered and capitulated. There was some argument as to the severity of the sentence. The men insisted that it be as light as possible. To this the women agreed, though they preferred a good stiff punishment, say 25 years. After much debate it was decided to return a verdict of manslaughter, recommending a sentence of from five to 10 years.

Verdict of Guilty

The jury filed back to the courtroom. Having deliberated 2 hours and 50 minutes, Mrs. Charles Kuyle, the forewoman was to read the verdict.

"Have you reached a verdict?" asked the Judge.

Mrs. Kuyle tried to speak, but could not. She was so overcome with sorrow for the girl she had convicted. With a gesture of exhaustion she handed the verdict sheet to Juror No. 2, Mrs. Rose A. Hopper, a matron. Mrs. Hopper read the verdict.

"We find the defendant guilty of manslaughter."

Judge Black said:

"Stand up, Mildred. You've had a fair trial. I sentence you to a term of from five to 10 years in State Prison at hard labor."

So Mildred Sage learned that women can weep, but they never forgive. So Mildred Sage learned that the suspicion respectable women have for disreputable women is universal. Men may falter and show mercy; but women, never.

While they were leading the girl away she fainted. Mrs. Hopper, who had been one of the stoutest in the demand that Mildred Sage be punished, fainted, too.

But as the play progressed they gradually lost themselves in it. When the fifth act came they were wholly absorbed.

"I waited until Panitza was watching the action of the second scene. Then I drew my pistol and killed him. His wife got in the way and I kept on firing. I thought maybe I had missed Panitza with the first shot. I did not mean to shoot Madame Panitza nor Bagatinoff. But I kept shooting to make sure Panitza was dead and they got in the way of the bullets.

"Sorry? No, I am not sorry. Panitza was a bad man, an enemy of my country."

Now the people of Vienna are wondering what will become of Mencia. Her trial has not been set.

Grandma Gerber Goes Back to the Circus, Preferring a Trapeze to a Rockingchair

AT THE AGE OF 66, ONCE MORE SHE APPEARS AS ROSA MARETTA, WHICH WAS HER SHOW NAME FOR 50 YEARS

She Retired 7 Years Ago to a House on a Quiet Street in Leavenworth, Kan., but Doing Nothing Was Too Hard Work for Her—She Got Out Her Spangled Tights and Rouge Box and Went Off to Join a Show—She Says She Is as Good at Flying High as She Ever Was, Despite Gray Hair and Not a Few Wrinkles.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 13.

REMEMBER 'way back when the biggest show on earth came to town and pitched its tents on the McPherson lot between the railroad and the river? Remember the big top with its flapping pennants, and the elephants, and clowns, and freaks, and bareback riders, and lemonade, and striped stick candy? Boy!

And remember Rosa Maretta, queen of the air, flashing in silk and spangles, defying death on the flying trapeze?

Well, get ready to go again. Rosa Maretta has come back. For more than half a century she has not only defied death but laughed at Father Time. Sixty-six years old and a grandma, she is good as ever on the flying trapeze and as scintilating as ever in silk and spangles.

Seven years ago, after 50 years with the circus and on the stage, Rosa Maretta retired and booked herself for a serene engagement as Grandma Rosie M. Gerber in a cottage at 312 Pawnee street, Leavenworth.

Life in a cottage on a shady street was for Rosa Maretta an irksome exchange for the life that she had known, the lights, the blare of music, the plaudits of people. As Grandma Gerber she was not as happy as she had been as queen of the air. She tried to be contented, tried for seven years, but it's no use. Life in a cottage is not for her. So it's back to the big top and the flying trapeze for Rosa Maretta.

She Started Early

It was the coming of Hutchings' Great World's Fair to East St. Louis 58 years ago that led to the circus career of Rosa Maretta. She had been born eight years before that on a farm near California, Mo. Her parents had moved to East St. Louis and her mother was keeping boarders. To Mrs. Maretta's boarding house went some of the Hutchings performers. East St. Louis seems not to have been a good show town in those days, for the performers were not able to pay Mrs. Maretta all that they owed her. But that was all right. It had something to do with giving the world a new queen of the air.

ROSA MARETTA.

She still performs on the trapeze, claiming to be "as good as ever."

Her famous chair-balancing stunt on a trapeze, which she performs near the roof of the "big top."

Rosa Maretta as she looked in 1910 when she was still a popular aerialist.

One of the acrobats had taken a fancy to Mrs. Maretta's little girls, Rosie, 8 years old, and Millie, 10, and at the end of the season he came back. Circus folk in those days did not adapt their acts for the theaters. A long winter was ahead. The acrobat wanted a place to stay. If Mrs. Maretta would give him his bed and board he would train her little girls for the circus. Mrs. Maretta had some misgivings. Was he sure that he could make real circus actors out of them? Oh, yes, without a doubt. She said all right then but she still had her doubts.

For two years, off and on, the training proceeded and then Rosie, at the acrobat's suggestion, changed her name to Rosa and she and Millie, as the Maretta sisters, trapeze and tight rope performers, made their bow.

At first they "played parks," with their trapeze act and occasionally Rosa walked a tight rope, stretched across a street, as a free attraction to give the public an inkling of the wonders to be found at the park shows.

Two years of that sort of thing and then, at 12 years of age, Rosa Maretta became a regular circus actor, she and her sister going to California with the W. W. Cole shows. Their names and pictures went on the billboards.

It was not long until the Maretta Sisters were top-liners in the circus world. They could take their pick of the contracts that were offered them. They went from Cole to John Robinson and they were star performers in most of the big shows of the period.

Twenty years ago Millie, who had married Ance Van Zandt and had a show of her own, died, but Rosa carried on. She adopted and trained a child who began doing a tumbling act at 8 years of age and became widely known as Little Edna, later under the name of Edna Vanderbilt, became the working partner of Rosa Maretta and continuing with her until her marriage at the age of 25, when she retired.

By rights Rosa Maretta should have quit long before that, for it is a saying around the dressing tents that the dead line for acrobats is 40 years, after which, so say the wise ones, the best of them lose their steadiness and suppleness and have to quit.

Defied the Dead Line

It was a dictum which had not before been disputed, but there came a time when dissenters had something to say. "But look at Rosa Maretta," they challenged. Rosa Maretta, the wise ones said, was simply the exception that proved the rule. Rosa Maretta was a wonder woman, that was what she was, but that didn't mean anything for anybody else. "At 40 you quit," that was the verdict, and at 40 or thereabouts the other acrobats quit, but Rosa Maretta kept on.

On her next birthday she would be 60 and she was still good and going strong. Still one of the queens of the air. Still able to put her act over good. Still good looking in silk and spangles and makeup, with strength and steadiness and suppleness in her body, with no need of anybody guessing within 25 years of her age, unless she chose to tell.

For fourteen years she had been with Sells & Gray Brothers for the summer tours, playing the theaters winters. Then she went with Gentry Brothers, but she didn't like the way they threw her stuff around, dragging her "riggin'" in the dust and all that, and one day, when she was cross, she told the boss she was going to quit if they didn't stop throwing her stuff around. The boss was cross, too, that day, and he told her to go on and quit if she wanted to. She asked him how two weeks' notice would do. "Make it now, if you want to," he said. "Now it is," she shapped back, "I'm through."

She had been thinking, anyway, that it was time for her to quit. She had outstayed the allotted 40 years by nearly 20 years. Perhaps she long enough had flaunted the traditions of the profession. There was a cottage on a shady street out here in Leavenworth which her mother had left to her. So goodby to the big top forever.

Call of the Circus

The hardest thing a circus performer has to do is nothing when circus days are over. That Rosa Maretta had put it off 20 years longer than most circus performers did not help matters. Made it harder, if anything. If she had been old in spirit or broken or disillusioned, it might have been different. She was nothing like that. She was still young, for all her 59 years, strong and fit as always, and life had not lost its zest. She sadly missed the lights and the music and the applause. And the smell of the sawdust. And her friends, for the friendships of circus folk are strong.

She might have stuck it out, living quietly here with her son, Edward, who for seventeen years traveled with her as a circus worker, although he had never been a performer, but last summer there was a local talent entertainment at Abdallah Temple and somebody went to see Widow Gerber and asked her to be Rosa Maretta again, just for a night.

No summons could have been more welcome. Out of the trunks came the silk and spangles. Out of the woodshed came the old trapeze. Posts were erected by her son among the vines and fruit trees of the back yard. A few days' training and she was as fit as ever. The night came and she was Rosa Maretta again and the lights and music and plaudits of the people were as wine to her.

Up at Omaha Frank Taylor was hearing the call of the circus. There is circus in the Taylor blood. Many years ago Frank Taylor's father was the owner of the F. J. Taylor Consolidated Shows. As boys Frank and his brother Bert and Fred Stone, the comedian, rode horses in the parade and played at being circus actors. The F. J. Taylor Consolidated Circus went out of existence 30 years ago but young Frank Taylor never got over his love of the circus.

Now, with wealth won as a grain merchant, he would have his fling. At his farm near Omaha during the past winter he assembled a two-ring circus, to go on the road in the early summer and revive the glories of the Taylor circus of the long ago.

Frank Bennett and his wife were to go with the show, Bennett as manager of the sideshow and announcer in the big tent. The Bennetts remembered Rosa Maretta. They got in touch with her and urged her to come back. No great urging was needed. She had known that ever since her night at Abdallah Temple. The big top was calling her. She yearned for the sawdust. If Taylor wanted her, all right.

The Bennetts told Taylor about her and he sent for her and when the show opened in Omaha Rosa Maretta was there. Hers was the feature act of the show.

Remember how they do when the feature act is on. It has the center of the arena. There are no acts in the rings. The clowns quit their capers. Voices are hushed. There's a blast from the band and the queen of the air is there, making her bow, swinging aloft, balancing, leaping, a flash of silk and spangles against the background of canvas. A prolonged blare from the band for her culminating feat, and then the applause that is sweet to the performer's heart.

Wanted for Vaudeville

Just to show that she was as much at home on the back of a horse as on the trapeze and the swinging ladders, she doubled as an equestrienne artist, riding a "manage" horse.

After the opening week in Omaha the show started on its tour of Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri, but there was doubt whether it would be able to keep her. The vaudeville managers were after her. According to their astute reckonings a queen of the air who could come back at the age of 66 was too good for the circus tent. Negotiations have been opened for her to go out on a vaudeville circuit.

Maybe the vaudeville offers will lure her away from the sawdust for a while, but it is safe to say that the circus will claim her again. Belikes when another spring comes, when the morning sun is bright and the breeze comes keen across the Kansas plain, Grandma Gerber will be back in her cottage, getting ready for next season with the circus.

As she did this spring, when the call came, she will do the breakfast dishes and sit on the porch a little while, looking out into Pawnee street, where the shadows are deep, and then she will go inside and that will be the last of Grandma Gerber for a while. For from another door will come Rosa Maretta, queen of the air, out for her morning exercise on her flying trapeze, balancing and posing and swinging, getting ready to balance and pose and swing in next summer's circus, just as she did "way back, when the biggest show on earth came to town and pitched its tents on McPherson's lot between the railroad and the river.

MAP OF U. S. WILL GOVER WHOLE ACRE

Each Inch of Country and Every House Will Be Shown.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The recent passage of an authorization bill by Congress enables the Government to carry to completion the largest and most comprehensive map of the United States—a great mother map that will represent, when completed, 20 years from now, an accurate topographical survey of every square inch of the vast territory that comprises the United States.

This great map—the largest in the world—will not be in one piece, but will be composed of 6000 sections which, if placed together in one big pattern, would cover more than an acre of ground. So complete in every detail will it be, says Popular Science Monthly for July, that anybody living in any section of the country will be able to find on the proper sheet the exact location of his house. Delicate contour lines will draw the picture of the country's hills and valleys, plains and mountain ranges, canyons, and waterways — even its man-made landmarks.

Work Began in 1879.

Work on the survey for the map began in 1879 and has progressed slowly, held back by lack of appropriations. Now, however, Congress has authorized the completion of the work and the appropriation of $950,000 for the survey in the first year. The total expenditure, with State co-operation, is estimated at $49,200,000.

Modern science in many ways will aid in completing the map. Aerial photography will play an important part. The mapping plane, carrying a photographer equipped with a panoramic camera, flies at an altitude of about 12,000 feet, and pictures are taken often enough so that they overlap. Then definite locations of known points are marked accurately on tracing linen as a guide in fitting the aerial photographs.

A History in Itself.

The survey will be a history in itself. Every line on the map will reveal much of romance and adventure for those who have had a part in its making.

For example, a group of tiny lines defines the contour of Mount McKinley. Yet to obtain them, a company of men have struggled up the white heights, laboriously packing surveyor's equipment, and have pitted their strength and wit against the forces of nature. Again, there is designated on the map a minute area marked "Mojave." Under a burning sun another company has spent many hours in the desert sighting and marking.

An order recital will open the exercises. E. J. Spencer will preside. Former State Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett will speak on "Our Country." The auditorium will seat 4500 persons.

ORPHAN SOCIETY TO OBSERVE DIAMOND JUBILEE TODAY

German St. Vincent's Program Includes High Mass Under Tent on Grounds.

The Diamond Jubilee of the German St. Vincent's Orphan Society will be observed today at the home in Normandy.

At 4 p. m. children in the home will present a program. Dinner will be served.

JAZZ FOR LONDON CONCERTS

Lord Mayor Gives Sunday Strollers in Parks Lighter Programs.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 13.—Jazz has been recognized officially by the Lord Mayor of London. From now on he will provide the Sunday strollers in London parks with music lighter and more syncopated than the formal band concert programs to which they have listened for years.

The experiment of giving a jazz concert was tried at Finsbury Park last Sunday. The concert was so popular that the gates had to be locked and part of the crowd shooed away before the first selection began. Thousands lingered outside listening to the faint sounds of the distant saxophone droning away in fox-trot tempo. The musicians were all attired in white flannels, another innovation on the part of the Lord Mayor, who disregarded the precedent that prescribes heavy dark clothes for those who provide the popular open air Sunday concerts. The most popular numbers of the first jazz concert were the saxophone solos and the medleys of folk music of the negro singers of Dixieland.

NEW MONKEYS AND BIRDS ADDED TO ZOO

Ring-Tailed Lemurs From Madagascar Among Recent Arrivals Here.

A number of new simians and birds, and some other specimens, unlike any shown there before, have been added to the collection at the Forest Park Zoo in the last few days. Brief facts about them follow:

A white-banded Guereza, or thumbless, monkey, from the vicinity of Abyssinia—only two others of this species are on exhibition in the United States. He has unusually long and beautiful silky hair, his head, body and legs being jet black, while on either side of his back arises a line of white hair, which falls down below the flanks, forming a sort of mantle. His long tail ends in a white tuft. This species is peculiarly able to withstand extremes of heat and cold.

Ring-Tailed Lemurs.

Pair of ring-tailed lemurs from Madagascar—these are gentle, friendly little things, with large eyes and long muzzles and tails. Like owls, they like to sleep by day and frolic by night. The lemur is a monkey-like animal of the lowest group of primates.

Pair of white-throated guenons, showy, active monkeys from Africa.

A gray-cheeked mangabey, another sort of monkey from the Congo Free State.

Pair of young rheas, or South American ostriches—these birds look like their African prototypes, but their feathers are worth little commercially. They have three toes to the foot, unlike the regular, two-toed ostrich. They are the first rheas imported into this country for years.

Bateleur Eagles.

Two bateleur eagles, more natives of Africa, handsomely colored birds.

Three pairs of vulturine guinea fowls, from East Africa—they trace their origin to the same group whence sprang domestic guineas, but they are striking in color.

A number of tortoises, turtles and terrapins, weighing from 3 to 100 pounds each, have been acquired. When their quarters are completed they will inhabit the chain of lakes adjoining the sea lion pool.

August A. Busch has given the zoo a fine specimen of the European wild boar.

CELEBRATE 700 ANNIVERSARY OF SIGNING OF MAGNA CHARTA

People of Arkansas to Observe Political Rights to English.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, June 13.—Seven hundred years ago Monday the charter of liberty of English-speaking peoples was signed by King John of England, when he fixed his signature to the Magna Charta or great charter. On Monday, by proclamation of Gov. Terral, the people of Arkansas are called upon to celebrate this event. The Governor calls upon the churches and Sunday schools of the State to take cognizance of the event.

Gov. Terral, in his proclamation, says:

"Whereas, the Magna Charta is the foundation of the liberties which we enjoy and it is the common meeting point for every citizen of every race and creed in the seven nations (the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Newfoundland, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand) who believe in civil and religious liberty, freedom of the press and of speech.

"Now, therefore, I, Tom J. Terral, Governor of the State of Arkansas, do hereby urge the people of Arkansas to observe Magna Charta day on June 15, 1925, and call upon the churches and Sunday schools to emphasize on the third Sunday in June the fundamental unity of purpose and feeling of this widespread race, whose respect for the future of the world of democracy is now greater than ever before."

The entire first floor of the hotel has been reserved for exhibits, which will include window displays, fixture arrangements, demonstrations by living models and other forms and devices perfected in modern merchandising. There will be special competitive displays in connection with the program and medals and prizes will be awarded to the winners.

The convention will be called to order at 10:30 a. m. by President Jack Cameron, after which addresses of welcome will be made by Mayor Miller and Thomas W. Garland, vice president of the Associated Retailers. Sessions will be held both morning and afternoon. About $250,000 worth of merchandise will be featured among the displays.

A Friendship Really Platonic.

THE data previously available may be recapitulated briefly as follows: At the beginning of 1877, Tschaikowsky, then 37 years old, was professor of harmony at Nicholas Rubinstein's Conservatory in Moscow. He loathed with unspeakable disgust every lesson he had to give, and was distressingly in debt, for his salary was $25 a month. As if by a bolt from the blue, he was emancipated from the drudgery of making a living and freed from the necessity of any effort save composition through the generosity of Mme. Nadejda Filaretovna von Meck, widow of a millionaire railway engineer.

This woman of 46 became the heroine of one of the most singular associations in history. For many years she was Tschaikowsky's dearest friend, to whom he poured out unreservedly every secret of his heart; he dedicated to her the famous Fourth Symphony; his letters to her were of an intense and ardent sentiment. Yet they never met face to face save once, by accident, and never in their lives did they exchange a spoken word.

"Agonies Defy Description."

EARLY in 1877, Mme. Meck, after paying the composer exorbitant fees for arrangements of his works, sent him a remittance of 2000 rubles to pay his debts. Two months later he apprised her of his engagement in the following letter:

"First of all, I must tell you that at the end of May I became engaged, to my own surprise. This is how it came about. One day I received a letter from a girl whom I had already seen and met. I learned from this letter that for a long time past she had honored me with her love. The letter was so warm and sincere that I decided to answer it, which I had always carefully avoided doing in other cases of the kind.

"Without going into the details of this correspondence, I will merely say that I ended by accepting her invitation to visit her. When we met I told her that I could offer only gratitude and sympathy in exchange for her love. From the letters which followed, I came to the conclusion that, having gone so far, I should make her really unhappy and drive her to some tragic end were I to bring about a sudden rupture.

"I found myself confronted by a painful dilemma. Either I must keep my freedom at the expense of this woman's ruin, or I must marry. Therefore, I went one evening to my future wife and told her frankly that I could not love her, but that I would be a faithful and devoted friend; I described to her in detail my character, my irritability, my nervous temperament, my misanthropy—finally, my pecuniary position. Then I asked her if she would care to be my wife. Her answer was, of course, in the affirmative. The agonies I have endured since that evening defy description.

"Now a few words as to my future wife. Her name is Antonina Ivanovna Milyukova, and she is ... She is rather good-looking and of spotless reputation. She keeps herself and lives alone. She is quite poor and of moderate education, but apparently very good and capable of a loyal attachment."

Tried to Take Pneumonia.

THE ill-omened marriage occurred on July 18. Only three weeks later Tschaikowsky wrote to Mme. Meck that he was fleeing from his wife. "A few days longer and I should have gone mad," he raved. In September he rejoined his wife in Moscow, and arrived at the conviction that he could be liberated only by death. For the sake of his aged father, as well as his brothers, he sought a means which would appear to be natural.

So one night he went to the deserted bank of the Moscow River, waded out into the icy flood, and stood there as long as he could endure the stinging pain from the cold. He went home with the firm

Solves Old Mystery Of Tschaikowsky's Tragical Marriage

Friend Declares That Composer Identified Himself With Villain and Girl With Heroine of His Opera, "Eugen Onegin."

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

AN enigma which for nearly half a century has exercised the curiosity of musical biographers—that of the disastrous marriage of Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky, most famous if not the greatest of Russian composers—appears at last to have been solved. The facts, hitherto held secret but at last disclosed by the composer's intimate, Nikolay Dimitrievitch Kashkin, will bring little comfort to the pathologists and scandalmongers, who have sought to find in the Russian's matrimonial debacle a parallel to the cases of Thomas Carlyle and John Ruskin. However, the revelations stage a characteristic tragi-comedy of the artistic temperament.

The mystery consisted of two parts. First, why did Tschaikowsky, in July, 1877, suddenly marry a piano student at the Moscow Conservatory, where he was a professor? Second, why, a few weeks later, did he flee from his bride in a state bordering on frenzy, and culminating in an attempt to take his life? Kashkin, a well-known musician, author and critic, answers both questions in a brochure which has just been turned into English.

A Friendship Really Platonic.

THE data previously available may be recapitulated briefly as follows: At the beginning of 1877, Tschaikowsky, then 37 years old, was professor of harmony at Nicholas Rubinstein's Conservatory in Moscow. He loathed with unspeakable disgust every lesson he had to give, and was distressingly in debt, for his salary was $25 a month. Tried to Take Pneumonia.

THE ill-omened marriage occurred on July 18. Only three weeks later Tschaikowsky wrote to Mme. Meck that he was fleeing from his wife. "A few days longer and I should have gone mad," he raved. In September he rejoined his wife in Moscow, and arrived at the conviction that he could be liberated only by death. For the sake of his aged father, as well as his brothers, he sought a means which would appear to be natural.

So one night he went to the deserted bank of the Moscow River, waded out into the icy flood, and stood there as long as he could endure the stinging pain from the cold. He went home with the firm conviction that he could not escape death from inflammation of the lungs. But his constitution was so strong that the freezing bath passed off without evil consequences.

Unconscious 48 Hours.

IN October, having induced a friend to send a telegram summoning him to Petrograd, he appeared in that city in a condition resembling madness. His brother, Anatol, who met him at the railway station, could scarcely recognize him, so changed were his features; he suffered a nervous attack and lay unconscious for 48 hours. Psychiatrists told him that he could preserve his life only by means of a permanent separation from his wife. So far as the records show, they never met again.

The motives behind these peculiar incidents, as unveiled by Kashkin, begin with the fact that in the spring of 1877 Tschaikowsky was engaged in composing his well-known opera, "Eugen Onegin," which is based on a work by Pushkin. Fatality so ordered it that, in Pushkin's story, Onegin, a blase fop, repulses with contempt an avowal of love sent him in a letter by a charming and artless young girl, Tatiana.

Identified Self With Onegin.

ACCORDING to a characteristic hallucination of creative artists, these personages of fiction grew far more real to Tschaikowsky than any living beings. How he came to identify himself with Onegin and Mlle. Milyukova with Tatiana answers the first question, as to why the composer married. The narrative shall be told in his own words, in Kashkin's report of a rare evening at Klin when Tschaikowsky opened his heart. The translation is quoted from an article by Mr. Olin Downes in the New York Times:

"In April or early in May, 1877, (said the composer) I received a rather lengthy letter with a declaration of love for me; the letter was signed by A. Milyukova. At that very time my whole self was taken up exclusively by the thought of Eugen Onegin, i. e., Tatiana, whose letter above everything else drew me to the composition. I not only had no libretto, but not even any general plan of the opera, yet I set out to write the music of the letter, yielding to an unconquerable spiritual need of performing this task, in the heat of which I not only forgot about Miss Milyukova, but even had lost her letter or hidden it so well that I couldn't find it. I recalled it only on receiving a short time afterwards, a second letter.

"Completely absorbed as I was in composition, I had so grown into the image of Tatiana that to me she outlined herself as a living being. I loved Tatiana and was terribly indignant at Onegin, who seemed to me a cold, heartless coxcomb. On receiving the second letter I was ashamed and was even incensed with myself for my way of treating her. In the second letter she made bitter complaints about not having received any answer, and added that if her second letter should meet with the fate of the first there would be nothing left for her but to commit suicide.

"In my mind all this was connected with the image of Tatiana; and it seemed to me that I had acted incomparably worse than Onegin. I was sincerely exasperated with myself for my heartless behavior to a girl who had fallen in love with me. As the second letter, too, contained the address of Scene Is in Normandy.

THE action is situated in a small town in Normandy, where a French regiment is quartered. Its elderly commander, Col. Ponstable, hopes to marry Mlle. Estelle Duvernay, a member of the French nobility, as the result of the machinations of her aunt, who entertains social ambitions. As the first act begins, some of the troopers are engaged in wheedling credit from the hostess of an inn so that they may quench their thirst. They are interrupted by the entrance of the heroine, accelerated by the pursuit of an angry bull.

She is saved from injury by Andre de Courcy, who for some reason or other has concealed from his comrades the fact that he is a wealthy aristocrat, and that his regimental name of Jollicoeur is an alias. In his preoccupation with Mlle. Estelle, he neglects to report at barracks for parade, and the finale brings forward the entire ensemble in a lament over the Colonel's orders placing Jollicoeur under arrest.

There Is a Duel, Too.

A PARTY at the aunt's home gives a locale to the second act. Jollicoeur has bribed the sergeant

CAST FOR "ELECTRA" AT GARDEN THEATER NOW IN REHEARSAL

PAUL Streger, stage manager for Margaret Anglin, is rehearsing the cast for "Electra," with which Garden Theater will be opened July 6. The rehearsals are being held in New York while waiting for Miss Anglin to return from her trip abroad, when she will come on to St. Louis together with the cast. As soon as she arrives Miss Anglin will join in the rehearsals of the Greek drama in which she has appeared successfully in California and in New York.

All members of the "Electra" cast have appeared in this play on former occasions with Miss Anglin, or in other Greek plays. They have been selected because of their particular fitness and experience in works of this nature.

Livingston Platt is at work on the decorations for "Electra" and feels that this production will be even better than those he designed for the University of California Greek Theater and for the Carnegie Hall productions in New York.

NEW YORK COMPANY TO GIVE PERFORMANCES AT ODEON

The company and chorus of the Second Avenue Theater of New York will give performances at the Odeon tomorrow and Tuesday evenings, of a musical comedy called "Tzipke" and a comedy entitled "Yankele." The musical numbers for both were written by Joseph Rumshinsky, who will direct the productions.

Principals in the cast will be Mollie Pickon, soubrette; Jacob Kalish and Boris Rosenthal. Miss Pickon is said to have been starred in Europe in two Jewish films directed by Max Reinhardt.

Apollo Club Wants Singers.

As a number of vacancies exist in the ranks of the Apollo Club, first and second tenors are requested to make application in writing to the president of this male choral organization, Phil A. Becker, Tower Building. The voices of candidates will be tested before a committee of which Charles Galloway is chairman.

Strassberger Commencement.

The twenty-ninth annual graduation exercises of the Strassberger Conservatories will be held Thursday evening at the Odeon. Twenty-seven certificates and medals will be awarded.

Plagiarism Suits Trail Theater Hits

Litigation Over "They Knew What They Wanted" Suggests Deliberate Larceny Is Rare.

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, June 13.

NOT enough details have been revealed yet for an outsider to pass upon the merits of the latest theatrical suit for plagiarism aimed at "They Knew What They Wanted." However, I think it is fair to say that a very large proportion of such actions are without sufficient merit. Even in some of the cases where a court finds for the plaintiff I believe there is less than justice in the decision. Certainly the mere fact of resemblance in the bare outline of plot is not enough. The same outline may serve as a jumping-off place for 200 plays and 1000 novels, each excellent in its own way, and each differing essentially from the other.

In a general sense there should be no such thing as a copyright upon plot. I mean that it would have been monstrous if the first dramatist to utilize the triangle should have maintained that no one else might ever write of husband, wife and lover without infringing upon his rights. If the litigants against "They Knew What They Wanted" have nothing to offer save the fact a young friends deceives a middle-aged husband, their case can hardly seem important. Wagner, Stephen Phillips and D'Annunzio have all handled that theme—and many before them.

"Great Idea for Play."

SOMETIMES I think that courts fall into the popular fallacy of supposing that the vital and important thing in a play is "the idea." Seldom is this so. As one who moves about the dramatic districts of New York, I can testify that the place is fairly alive with young men who have "a great idea for a play." Only occasionally is any work contracted for on this basis. The good idea may yield a good play, but it does not logically follow.

You would not feel certain before the event of the architectural competence of the individual who said, "I can build a marvelous house because I've hit upon some great lumber;" nor is the future of a cake assured from the moment a housewife gets her hands upon an unusually fine brand of baking powder. Several might dip into that can, and only one succeed in producing a work of art.

We ought to recognize the fact that the same thing is true in the business of writing plays. My notion is that an idea belongs to the artist who can make the best use of it. Incidents come out of life itself, which must continue always as public domain. The essence and individuality of a play live not in anything which can be reduced to a brief synopsis. The flavor is in the treatment and in the small detail. If, then, a dramatist can show that some competitor has followed hard upon his heels in the matter of minutiae and dialogue, he has gone some distance in establishing the charge of plagiarism. It will not serve at all if he points out that in both plays there is a situation in which the whole world believes the hero guilty while the heroine alone maintains faith in his innocence.

Plagiarism and Insanity.

EVEN in the matter of slight detail allowance should be made for the flow of coincidence which plays funny tricks. Straight, unadulterated plagiarism is comparatively rare and is of the nature of kleptomania and other obscure mental derangements. I have a case in mind. An editor of a large New York magazine read a manuscript sent into his office by an unknown author, and found to his amazement that it was a precise copy of a story he had written himself the year before. The plagiarist had changed the title of the tale and the names of the two chief characters. The rest was identical word for word.

Now this, I think, may safely be set down as a sort of insanity. There was not one chance in a hundred that the stolen story would not be recognized, for the original version had been printed in one of the best known of all American magazines. Moreover, if by any miracle the deception had stood up sufficiently long to insure the republication of the tale, detection and punishment would Solves Old Mystery of Tschaikowsky's Marriages.

Miss Milyukova, I immediately went to the given address, and thus our acquaintance began."

Kiss Shattered His Heart.

At the wedding, Tschaikowsky continued, "I remained some sort of outsider, a disinterested observer, until Dmitry Vasilyevich, at the end of the ceremony, made Antonina Ivanovna and me kiss each other. Here something struck my heart a heavy blow, and suddenly I was seized with such agitation that it seems to me I burst into tears."

The Quixotic qualms of conscience which betrayed the composer into marriage, because he fancied he was more villainous than the villain of his opera, were quickly punished. Kashkin once spent an evening with Tschaikowsky and his bride at their home in Moscow, and noticed—without discovering the reason—that the composer persistently intervened in his wife's talk, filling up her involuntary pauses, supplementing what she began to say, and supplying words when she seemed at a loss.

TSCHAIKOWSKY.

"Not the Real Stuff."

THE writer recalls Nicholas Rubinstein's shrewd remark concerning Mme. Tschaikowsky: "There you are—pretty and keeps herself sweetly and yet is not particularly pleasing, as if she were not the real stuff, but some manufactured goods." There is also quoted a significant observation by Tschaikowsky, who had shown one of his wife's letters to Kashkin. It was written without mistakes and even in good style, but it was impossible to find out definitely what it was about. "She always writes me such letters," mused the composer.

But the most enlightening incident occurred when Anatol Tschaikowsky and Nicholas Rubinstein, famous for his brutal frankness, were intrusted with the mission of informing Mme. Tschaikowsky of her husband's deadly illness after his flight to Petrograd, and of Dr. Balinski's order that she must never see him again.

Rubinstein's Brutality.

RUBINSTEIN stated the case bluntly and without mercy, in a manner that sent Tschaikowsky's brother "by turns from fever into chills." Having finished, he rose to depart, saying that he was leaving the family arrangements to the proper persons.

"Antonina Ivanovna," relates Kashkin, "saw him to the vestibule, and coming back with a shining countenance said to Anatol Ilyitch: 'Well, well, I never expected that Rubinstein would have tea at my house today!' Such words, at such a moment, struck Anatol Ilyitch as extraordinary. Only many years afterwards could I find for them some credible explanation."

The explanation was that Tschaikowsky had married a sweet-tempered and devoted—mental defective.

In 1913—Tschaikowsky having been dead for 20 years—his widow puzzled if not scandalized his friends by publishing in the Russian Musical Gazette an idyllic, rambling and untrue account of her married life. A few years later, Kashkin tells us, her derangement grew so serious that she was immured in a sanitarium for nervous diseases, where she died rather recently.

have followed immediately instead of a pay check."

Producers Unjustly Accused.

OF course, theatrical plagiarism does exist in forms less gross and palpable, but there should be great care in basing any decision upon casual similarities. It is well to remember that the charge of plagiarism has followed the production of almost every successful play in America. And though the charge may be mistaken, it is far more likely to be sincere than fraudulent. After all, a successful play is apt to deal with an appealing theme calculated to interest the many. Obviously, it is almost inevitable that somebody else has a not dissimilar notion in mind. Since manuscripts flit about from one manager's office to another, it is generally possible to establish a circumstantial case pointing toward the opportunity for theft.

And yet I fully believe that often the unfortunate producer is accused of lifting great golden nuggets from some manuscript which has, indeed, been in his office but which neither he nor any of his hirelings has ever taken the trouble to read. Themes seem to run in cycles. For no explicable reason, 10 or 20 cocaine plays will pour into a manager's office from widely separated points at the beginning of some particular season. If one out of this number attracts the producer's attention and wins a place in his list, each of the other 19 dramatists is sure to assume that the basic idea for such an enterprise must have come from his offering.

On Honest Columnist.

THE conductor of a newspaper column must be imbued with sympathy for all accused of plagiarism for he, himself, is so apt to sin in respect to borrowing the ideas of others. Generally he feels no sense of guilt whatsoever until the next day, when readers begin to complain that his wheeze is straight out of Caesar's "Commentaries" or one of the lesser known plays of Beaumont and Fletcher, or that it appeared last week in the leading story in the Saturday Evening Post. The man or woman who writes it always leaps to the conclusion that the columnist is knowingly and willfully a crook.

I can't speak for other columnists, but, generally speaking, I am not a crook. Whenever I find a notion in my head I assume that it is mine and proceed upon that assumption unless the branding iron of another has marked the stray legibly. And branding marks do fade. How can a man tell, always, whether this joke, or phrase, or essay theme is something straight from heaven, a remark by a friend (of course in that case it is fair game) or something which once he read and laid away in the shelves of forgetfulness to be produced upon a rainy afternoon.

HUGO'S EXILE HOME FOR SALE

Property Is Offered to French Government at Nominal Price.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 13.—The house on the Island of Guernsey, in the channel isles, where Victor Hugo spent 15 years in exile during the period of the second empire in France, has been offered to the French Government at a nominal price.

The death of Georges Hugo, the great writer's grandson, has made necessary the sale of the house in order to divide its value among the heirs. Madam Gregeponte, who was Jeanne Hugo, inherits half of the property and has offered to give her share to the state. The other half belonging to her nephews and nieces represents about 100,000 francs, for which the Government could obtain the historic home which is full of relics and which has become a place of pilgrimage. M. de Monsie, former French Finance Minister, asked for the necessary credits for the purchase of the Hugo home, declaring it would be impossible to allow the fate of the house to depend upon public auction.

of the guard to permit him to accompany his friend Eugene de Merrimas to the festivities. The Colonel is also a guest; and although he notes a resemblance between De Courcy and Jollicoeur, he is not sure that the titled visitor is the trooper who is supposed to be incarcerated in the guardhouse. Estelle penetrates the secret, and the love interest gains momentum—so much so that the jealous Colonel challenges De Courcy to a duel and gives him a rapier thrust in the arm.

The third act takes place at the barracks. The Colonel, a strict disciplinarian, is preparing for Jollicoeur's trial. As it is visitors' day, Estelle contrives to be present. The Colonel questions Jollicoeur regarding the previous evening's duel and establishes his identity by the kindly method of twisting his wounded arm. However, De Merrimas, on behalf of De Courcy's family, applies for the soldier's release from the regiment, and the Colonel relinquishes her to his more youthful rival.

De Koven's "Rob Roy" Next Week.

AMONG the numbers of Herbert's score are "You Never Can Tell How Marriage Will Take," "Oh, My!" "Soldier Men," "Little Farm in Normandy," "'Twixt Love and Duty," "American Serenade," "Art," "Some Day," "The Devil and the Deep Blue Sea," "Superlative Love," "As the Years Roll By" and "Vive la France."

The concluding performance of the Gilbert and Sullivan masterpiece, "Ruddigore," will take place tonight. Next week's production will be "Rob Roy," a romantic opera by Reginad de Koven and Harry B. Smith.

FEWER AUTO DEATHS UNDER TRAFFIC COURT

Four Fatalities in Washington, D. C. in Six Weeks—15 Victims in Like Time in 1924.

Establishment of a Traffic Court, similar to that which has frequently been proposed for St. Louis, has greatly decreased automobile fatalities and accidents in Washington, D. C., M. O. Eldridge, Director of Traffic of that city, stated here Friday while inspecting St. Louis' boulevard and automatic traffic signals system.

The Traffic Court, with two Judges presiding to hear nothing but traffic cases, was started in Washington about six weeks ago and during that time there have been but four automobile fatalities as compared with 15 during the same period last year, Eldridge said. He added that auto accidents have decreased on about the same ratio. One hundred and two persons were killed there last year by automobiles and 30 have been killed to date this year.

Jail for Second Conviction.

NEWER AUTO DEATHS UNDER TRAFFIC COURT

Four Fatalities in Washington, D. C. in Six Weeks—15 Victims in Like Time in 1924.

Establishment of a Traffic Court, similar to that which has frequently been proposed for St. Louis, has greatly decreased automobile fatalities and accidents in Washington, D. C., M. O. Eldridge, Director of Traffic of that city, stated here Friday while inspecting St. Louis' boulevard and automatic traffic signals system.

The Traffic Court, with two Judges presiding to hear nothing but traffic cases, was started in Washington about six weeks ago and during that time there have been but four automobile fatalities as compared with 15 during the same period last year, Eldridge said. He added that auto accidents have decreased on about the same ratio. One hundred and two persons were killed there last year by automobiles and 30 have been killed to date this year.

Jail for Second Conviction.

Eldridge said that the second conviction in Traffic Court of an automobile driver charged with reckless driving carries an arbitrary punishment of a jail sentence. Three convictions for speeding carry a similar punishment.

Cities of the Middle West, particularly St. Louis and Chicago, are far in advance of Eastern cities in the installation of voulevard stop signs and automobile traffic signals, he declared. Washington and most other Eastern cities have no boulevard stops or automatic traffic signals and Eldridge this week has been making an inspection of the systems in use in different Western cities to obtain ideas to be incorporated in a system to be put into effect soon in Washington. He left here last night for Columbus, and will return to Washington from there.

Like Signals for Washington.

The boulevard stop signs, which were recently installed in St. Louis, are the best signs he has observed on his trip, Eldridge said, as they show up plainer at night and are comparatively cheap. He plans to install the same kind in Washington.

Electric stop signals operated in synchronized manner, will be installed on one of Washington's principal boulevards as an experiment looking toward installation of a city-wide system of similar character, he said. The system will be much similar to one now in use in Syracuse, N. Y., and which is to be installed in Detroit. The signals are operated from one point and are said to enable traffic to move more rapidly.

COMBATS FROST WITH WATER

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

YAKIMA, Wash., June 13.—By sprinkling his cherry trees, Kelly Price of Selah, near here, is convinced he has found a new method of combatting Jack Frost.

Last year Price noticed that the only cherry tree which a spring freeze failed to damage was one that came into contact with a steady sprinkle of water. This year he has equipped 10 of his trees with sprinkling outfits. Price explains that water at an ordinary temperature gives off a great deal of heat before it freezes.

The twenty-first annual commencement exercises of the Kroeger School of Music will be held Wednesday evening at the Delmar Baptist Church, Skinker road and Washington boulevard. Two courses will be delivered this summer at Washington University by E. R. Kroeger, on "Musical Appreciation" and "Musical History."

CONVENTION OF RAILROAD SUPERINTENDENTS, JUNE 16

Special Train Will Depart From St. Louis for Richmond, Va., Next Sunday Morning.

Superintendents of the St. Louis railroads and other Western lines are arranging on a large scale for participation in the annual convention of the American Association of Railroad Superintendents, which opens at Richmond, Va., June 16, and continues for four days.

St. Louis is particularly active in the preliminaries because the president and secretary of the organization, which includes representatives of all the lines in this country, Canada and Mexico, are stationed in this city. E. H. Harman, assistant to the general manager of the Terminal Railroad Association, is the president, and J. Rothschild, the secretary, make St. Louis their headquarters.

A hundred and twenty-five or more of the delegates from St. Louis and Chicago lines, accompanied by their families, will leave here next Sunday morning on a special train over the Big Four, connecting at Cincinnati with the Chesapeake & Ohio, which will deliver the party at Richmond on the afternoon of June 15.

The tentative program provides for addresses by James C. Davis, Director-General of Railroads; R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway Association; R. N. Begien, vice president, Chesapeake & Ohio; M. J. Gormley, chairman, Car Service Division, American Railway Association; E. H. Harman, president, American Association of Railroad Superintendents; Eppa Hunton Jr., president, R. F. & P. R. R.; State officials of Virginia and city officials of Richmond.

Among the important subjects for discussion are the prevention of motor accidents at grade crossings, the interchange of traffic between the United States and Mexican railroads, increasing the carrying capacity of freight cars, lengthening the daily average mileage per car, and efficiency at terminals. The membership includes general superintendents, superintendents of transportation, superintendents, trainmasters and chief dispatchers.

INTOXICATION IN GERMANY IS DESCRIBED ON DECREASE

Berlin Federation of Welfare Workers Demands Local Option as Check to Liquor Sales.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 13.—Local option as a means of checking the excessive dispensation of alcoholic drinks was demanded by the Berlin Federation of Welfare Workers at the end of a week of propaganda meetings held here recently. For moral, cultural and economic reasons it was believed that the communes must be given the right to determine whether or not, and how many licenses, for the dispensation of liquor should be granted.

In the course of the debates upon this resolution, it was pointed out that in one year jail terms aggregating 45,000 years had been imposed by the courts for drunkenness. Alcohol consumption, it was said, had increased alarmingly since the World War, and the jails and insane asylums were filled in consequence.

The Federation of Welfare Workers is an interdenominational body, in which all creeds are represented.

BUENOS AIRES PREPARES BIG WELCOME FOR ENGLISH PRINCE

City Famed for Extravagances in Display, Plans to Set New Standard.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, June 13.—When the Prince of Wales sees Buenos Aires by night for the first time, he may wonder whether he is a Prince of the Arabian Nights.

Buenos Aires is famed for its extravagance in illumination and decoration to celebrate carnival and national holidays, every year outdoing what was done the year before. If staged, perhaps, the most wondrous display of illumination ever seen in any city on the occasion of the visit of the Italian Prince last year, and now for the visit of the scion of English royalty, it is preparing to break the record again.

Millions of multicolored electric light globes will be used. They will outline the Government house, the Capitol, all public edifices and hundreds of office buildings and institutions. The Avenida de Mayo, which is Buenos Aires' Broadway, will be a gleaming bower of electric garlands and arches, placed every half block. The many parks and plazas of the city will be planted with artistic columns joined with lacelike ribbons of light, and the walks and flower beds will be outlined with lights set in the ground.

Made As Investment.

The purchasers stated that the purchase had been made as an investment, with no immediate building plans, in view of the urgent demand for sites on Lindell boulevard for quasi-public buildings and business purposes.

The Knights of Columbus early in May, sold the northeast corner of Lindell boulevard and Sarah street for $70,000 which was $40,000 more than they had paid for the site less than two years before. This sale embraced approximately an acre of ground with a frontage on Lindell of 150 feet and a depth on Sarah of 288 feet. The consideration was on a basis of $466 a foot for the Lindell boulevard frontage, which was relatively low, in view of extensive depth of the on Spring avenue.

The Knights of Columbus had purchased the site for a 10-story building to cost $1,250,000, they having outgrown their present building at 3549 Olive street.

Public-spirited citizens have issued an appeal for the preservation of Lindell boulevard as a dignified thoroughfare, which is now menaced by the encroachment of business establishments.

Negotiations have been concluded for the sale of the Buckingham hotel at West Pine boulevard and Skinker way, as was forecast recently in the Post-Dispatch. The property is owned by a company which Orson H. Scott is president. Meeting of the purchasers was scheduled pending final papers.

Lindell and Sarah Corner Purchased by Chapmans

Reported Price of $500 a Front Foot Sets New High Mark for Vacant Ground Along Boulevard.

By Berry Moore.

The northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Sarah street was bought yesterday by O. M. & G. M. Chapman, of the Chapman Bros. Cleaning & Dyeing Co. The site has a frontage on Lindell of 40½ feet, with a depth on Sarah of 150 feet. It is occupied by a residential structure which was not taken into consideration.

The price paid was not made public, but it is understood that the transaction was made on the basis of approximately $500 a foot for the Lindell boulevard frontage, which sets a new high mark for vacant ground on this thoroughfare west of Sarah street. The former owner of the site was Anne L. Warrance.

Story Apartment Hotel at Newstead and McPherson.

The Greystone apartment hotel to be constructed by Roy F. Britton at the northeast corner of Newstead and McPherson avenues will be 13 stories in height and will cost $875,000. There will be 39 apartments each of 7 rooms and 3 baths, and a garage in the basement for 56 cars. The building will be served by four elevators and will embrace the last word in apartment house construction, according to George D. Barnett, Inc., architects.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch a 14-story apartment building is to be erected at the southwest corner of Newstead and McPherson avenues, by a syndicate headed by A. D. Gates at a cost of $875,000. This building will contain 52 apartments with five and six rooms, and two baths. It will be known as the Hampden Hall. Plans for this building were also made by the George D. Barnett, Inc., architects.

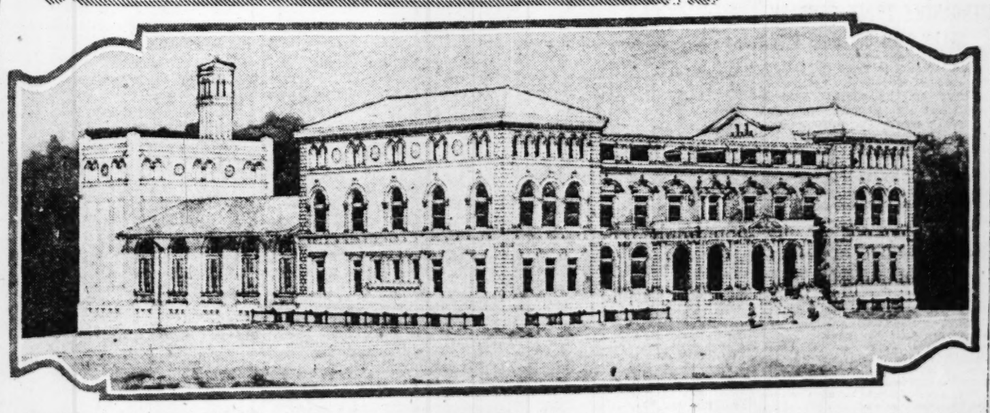
M. H. Rodemeyer & Company, realtors, with offices in the Title Guaranty Building, will have the management of both buildings, contracts for the construction of which have been awarded to the A. D. Gates Construction Co.

$500,000 STRUCTURE EXPECTED TO BE READY NEXT SUMMER

Ground for the $500,000 building of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will be broken at 10:30 a. m. today at the southeast corner of Union boulevard and Enright avenue. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy next summer.

Ceremonies today will include speeches by David Sommers, president of the organization; Fred Z. Solomon, chairman of the Building Committee; Will Levy, architect of the structure, and Rabbi Louis A. Witt. Rabbi Julian A. Miller will pronounce the invocation and Rabbi A. E. Halpern the benediction.

Funds for construction of the building were raised in a campaign in 1923. Most of the subscriptions have been paid. The building will be of pure Italian Renaissance style. The exterior will be of mat brick, trimmed in stone and terra cotta. Among the features will be a tile swimming pool and a roof garden.



Building to be erected at the southeast corner of Enright and Union boulevard for Young Men's Hebrew Association, for which ground will be broken at 10:30 a. m. today.

Two lots on Kingshighway Northwest were sold to William B. Sommers and August F. Schnieer, who have started to erect bungalows which will cost approximately $10,000 each.

A pony has been given away each Sunday since the opening, and the company announces that the following children were the winners: Edward Kercher of 5329 North Kingshighway, Helen Gray of 6539 Suburban avenue and Robert Zimmerman of 4429 Bessie avenue.

The Better-Built Home and Mortgage Co. developed Hi-Pointe, Delmar Garden and North St. Louis Heights, and is now developing De Mun Park.

The first floor contains a reception hall with tile floor, large living room with a fountain and brick fireplace, sun parlor, dining room with panels of mahogany and breakfast room and kitchen finished in tile. CORONADO ADDITION TO COST $1,500,000

Hotel Company Also Plans to Build Convention Hall on Westminster.

The Coronado Hotel has completed plans for the erection of an addition to the Coronado Hotel, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, which will be 14 stories high, crowned with a 50-foot illuminated tower.

Arrangements for financing the project, involving more than $1,500,000, have been completed, with S. W. Straus & Co., investment bankers of Chicago and New York, who will underwrite a first mortgage 6 per cent bond issue of $1,050,000 on the project. Plans were made by Preston Bradshaw, architect.

The Coronado addition, which will be constructed on Lindell boulevard west of the present 10-story structure, will be of reinforced concrete, strictly fireproof and match architecturally the present Coronado Hotel. The exterior will be faced with terra cotta and matt brick. It will contain Maisonette apartments of different size and a number of large hotel rooms and baths.

In connection with the addition, the Coronado Hotel also has purchased property on Westminster place where there will be constructed a large convention hall, new supper room and many private dining rooms.

BLOCK BOUGHT FOR SCHOOL AND CHURCH IN HOLLY HILLS

The Federer Realty Co. reports that in May sales in Holly Hills, the subdivision north of Carondelet Park, amounted to $200,000.

The outstanding deal in the subdivision was the sale of a block of ground fronting 350 feet on Wilmington avenue, to Archbishop Glennon, who purchased the property as a site of a new parish church and school.

Sewers, water, gas and sidewalks have now been installed in the property, and the work of building the concrete and asphalt streets is now under way. By the middle of August, improvements are expected to be completed.

Ground has been broken for three new buildings in the subdivision in the last week.

NEW DWELLING DESIGNED BY ROSS CRANE FOR DAVIS PLACE

A two-family dwelling of American design has been designed by Ross Crane for Davis place on Clayton road and is reproduced on this page. Crane has combined in this plan the things that appeal most to the typical American family. Although the exterior shows the influence of the English type of house it does not follow together those lines.

The house will have 15 rooms divided into two units, for two families, one side having seven and the other eight rooms. There is a double garage built into the house.

The house will be located on the corner of Wydown and Central boulevards in Davis place, the new residential district which is featuring the modern duplex (two-family) homes. All duplexes built in Davis place are made to resemble single residences. Twelve are already under construction.

Another big crowd is expected to visit Davis place today. A concert will be given this afternoon and evening on the veranda of "The Mansion" by the Anton Sextette. The public is invited.

DOWNTOWN Y BUILDING CONTRACT AWARDED

Structure at Sixeenth and Locust to Be Fourth Largest in America.

The contract for the downtown building of the Young Men's Christian Association, to be erected at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Locust streets, was awarded yesterday by the Metropolitan Board of Directors to James Stewart & Co., whose offices are in the Planters Building. Ten local contractor bid on the job. The bids were opened last week and the figures placed before the board yesterday for final disposition.

The downtown building is the largest of the five new buildings provided for in the $3,000,000 development fund. It will contain 2,100,000 cubic feet and will be the fourth largest "Y" building in America. The building will be 10 stories high and will have a frontage on Locust street of 137 feet and on Sixteenth street of 155 feet. The upper five stories will be devoted to dormitory rooms for young men who are away from home.

Two Gymnasiums.

In addition to billiard rooms and reading rooms, there will be two gymnasiums, six handball courts, a swimming pool 25x75 feet, ample locker rooms and shower baths, with separate quarters for men and boys, a business men's club with modern Turkish bath equipment, barber shop and tailor shop, a cafeteria with private dining rooms and club rooms.

Adequate quarters are being provided for the Church Federation. The offices of the State Committee will also be housed in this building. The Down Town "Y" will have a membership capacity of 6000 men and boys. Its location at the corner of Sixteenth and Locust streets will make it possible to serve the young men who are employed in the wholesale districts of the city as well as those who are employed in the retail section east of Twelfth street.

To Be Finished Next Year.

Plans for this building which have been drawn by La Beaume & Klein, architects, have been studied by the leading associations throughout the country and authorities say that this building will be the most efficient "Y" building yet erected. On account of the strategic location, it will be visited by thousands of visitors who are pasing through the city and will become a haven for young men who are strangers in the city. It is hoped that the building will be completed ready for occupancy by Sept. 1, 1926. The supervision of the construction of the building is in the hands of the Down Town Building Committee, comprising Edward T. Hall, chairman; Boyle O. Rodes, Edward Gegenbach and Samuel Greenland.

L. C. Haworth is general secretary and F. W. Vesper is chairman of the General Building Committee.

Make "The Mansion" Your Country Club for the Summer—No Obligation—The Public Is Invited

Davis Place—An Easy Drive From the City

Owing to Clayton Road being torn up drive out to the city of Clayton. To avoid the street work in Clayton, turn south one block east of the court house. Go two blocks and turn west to North and South Road, then south again to "The Mansion."

50,000 People Have Visited "The MANSION" in DAVIS PLACE

(The Exclusive District for Two-Family Dwellings)

FOR years the Davis home on Clayton Road has been a landmark. Its great size and historic background (one wing is 138 years old), has made it a familiar spot to several generations of people. Today the Davis house is "The Mansion," its massive rooms transformed into the modern, as the result of a most unusual demonstration of home decorating and furnishing by

Scruggs-Vanderwoort-Barney

A trip through "The Mansion" is an inspiration. The large dining room with its Strozzi Suite, draperies of English block print and antique rug (a Senna); the living room, with its effective combination of English, French and American pieces, all arranged in conversational groups; the stair halls, showing a reproduction of the wall paper used in Longfellow's home; these are a few of the surprises in store for those who visit "The Mansion."

The best musical talent of the city is presented in concert every Friday evening and on Sundays.

This unusual departure in the development of a large, exclusive residential district has caught the public fancy. Large crowds take advantage of the opportunity to hear music by our leading artists given in the beautiful outdoor setting of Davis Place, with its huge lawn, wealth of trees and cool breezes. No charge is made and no obligation involved.

Drive out today. Plenty of parking space for cars and comfortable seats on the veranda and lawns. Bring your lunch and eat it in any one of the many quiet nooks. The house and grounds are brilliantly lighted each night. "The Mansion" is open for your pleasure from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. every day.

No matter what real estate investments you make, you should set aside regularly an amount for you reserve fund. We offer for sale and recommend for that purpose FIRST MORTGAGE 6% REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS. Sold in denominations of $50 to $1000.

To all our friends and relatives we wish to extend our heartfelt gratitude for their kindness and the beautiful floral offerings tendered on the occasion of the death and bereavement caused by the death of our beloved son and brother, Edward F. Zimmermann. Especially do we wish to thank Rev. C. Kramer for prayers and kind words of consolation rendered by the pallbearers for their assistance and Zeigenhein Bros., undertakers, for their efficient and friendly services.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

REX: The State of Missouri derives its name from the Indians' name for the river, "Missouri," which means "Great Muddy."

O. P. N.—In the musical scale mi-fa and si-do are half-tone intervals; the others are wholetone. The key of music does not alter the arrangement of the half-tones.

DUMB BELLE: Upon being introduced to a person it is never to say "How do you do," the other person merely bowing in acknowledgment, the first remark usually being the beginning of the conversation. Gentlemen usually shake hands when introduced to each other. If the person whom you have met, when taking leave, remarks that he or she is glad to have met you, you should say "thank you."

CLEM H. S.: During June and July the planet Mercury will be in Taurus and Gemini, too close to the sun to be observed. At that time Venus will also be in Taurus and Gemini, close to Mercury, and in July may be seen low down in the west just after sunset. In these two months the Mars will be in Taurus and Gemini, gaining into Cancer, too near the sun for observation; Jupiter will be in Sagittarius and will rise just after sunset; Saturn will be in the constellation Libra, and will cross Meridian at 9 o'clock p. m.

ANXIOUS. — If the wall paper and woodwork of a room have become invaded with bedbugs, the usual remedy is burning sulphur. In order to be effective the room must have every door, window, crevice and crack closed and the floor should be wet in advance so as to moisten the air. A rubber tube should lead from the burning sulphur to a keyhole or augerhole and through it, and air should be blown to facilitate the combustion of the sulphur, by aid of a pair of bellows. The liquid form of bedbug preparations is perhaps the most effective for other uses, as it will follow down a crack into remote places where the bugs hide, will prevent their escape and will also kill the eggs and nits. Kerosene, turpentine, benzine, carbolic acid, corrosive sublimate solution, oil pennyroyal and strong solution of soap are probably the best substances usad for this purpose. Following is a formula for preparing: Mars, one dram oil of pennyroyal, 8 ounces turpentine, enough kerosene oil to make 1 gallon.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A. G. S. — Under the circumstances you cannot sue the parties for slander. Consult a lawyer.

G. S.—Report the facts about the chain letter to the postoffice authorities at the Custom House, Eighth and Olive streets.

S. H.—The wife would not have to pay any inheritance tax on the joint bank account in case of her husband's death.

J. H.—The State of Georgia does recognize divorces, but South Carolina does not.

NORMA. — The Probate Court can order the administrator to make a final settlement, if he fails to do so.

ADOPTION—In order to adopt your wife's child by a former marriage you will have to file an adoption petition in the Juvenile Court. Consult a lawyer.

W. J. S.—A ballot marked with an X in the circle, plus an X down the line in front of all the candidates on the favored party, would not be rejected but would be counted.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

O. B. C. D.—Bananas are fattening but apples are not. A woman 28 years of age, 5 feet 5½ inches in height, should weigh 138 to 148 pounds.

A. B. W. — An X-ray picture should be made of the pelvis and lower spine (dorsal region). There may be some pressure present, which would cause the pain in your leg.

A.—Abnormal blood pressure is a symptom caused by some systemic derangement. Be examined for the cause and correct it if possible.

WIFE OF STUDENT SLAYER ARRESTED

Louisiana Woman, 20, Charged With Murder in Connection With Fatal Fight.

By the Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., June 13.—Mrs. George W. Gill, 20 years old, was arrested here today on a warrant charging her with murder in connection with the death of Robert Read, 25, Centenary College student, whose body was recovered Friday morning from Old River near a swimming resort.

Mrs. Gill's husband, a senior law student at Loyola University, New Orleans, has confessed that he killed Read in a fight in Old River Wednesday night. Gill is being held on a murder charge.

An hour after Mrs. Gill was arrested she was released under $5000 bond fixed by Judge J. H. Stephens of the District Court, who said "granting of bonds in murder cases is permissible unless the presumption of guilt on that charge is great."

LACLEDE GAS CO. HEARINGS THIS WEEK

Three Applications Involve Stock and Bond Issue and Sale of Plant.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 13.—The State Public Service Commission has set for hearing on Tuesday morning three applications of the Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis, for authority to sell $3,300,000 in common stock, to issue bonds to reimburse the company treasury for $1,829,606 spent from earnings for betterments, and to sell the electric generating plant and downtown electrical distribution system of the Laclede Co. to the Phoenix Light, Heat and Power Co., a Laclede subsidiary.

The three applications were filed by the company last September. Shortly after they were filed the City Counselor of St. Louis intervened in the cases, but did not indicate whether the city would oppose the applications.

In its application for authority to sell $3,300,000 in common stock, at not less than par value of $100 a share, the company stated the proceeds of the stock sales would be devoted to improvement of the Laclede Gas Plant in the next two years, including an increase of the capacity of the gas plants from 36,000,000 cubic feet a day to 62,000,000 cubic feet.

Sale of the electric generating plant and downtown distributing system to the Phoenix Company is proposed to segregate the gas and electric properties and to facilitate financing, it was said. The Laclede Company, which controls all of the $2000 capital stock of the subsidiary, proposed to offer a new issue of capital stock of the Phoenix Company to Laclede stockholders. The purchase price of the electric plant was to be paid to the Laclede Company in mortgage bonds of the Phoenix Company.

DISAPPEARANCE OF STEAKS FROM THE CITY CLUB SOLVED

Two Cooks Caught Leaving Place With Choice Viands Inside Shirts at Waistbands.

The mystery of the vanishing tidbits at the City Club kitchen has been solved.

Choice pieces of meat and other viands had been disappearing with alarming regularity, so Manager Herbert R. Hopkins called in City Detectives Collins and Hodan and they arranged to watch a cook whom the manager suspected. The detectives followed this man out after he punched the time clock yesterday, and saw him catch up with two others at Tenth and Olive streets.

"Suspicious!" they hissed, in their best manner and one accord, and thereupon they called on the trio to stand at halt. One of their quarry ran for dear life, however, while the detectives held onto the others. These two were found to have appetizing collections of meats stowed away inside their shirts at the waistbands.

They were Walter Moresi, 20 years old, of 3916A Cora avenue, the cook who was followed from the club, and Louis Miller, 40, of 3632 Hickory street, another cook there. Moresi, who was carrying a beef tenderloin, four pounds of corned beef, two slices of ham and a pound of Swiss cheese, admitted, the detectives reported, that he had been taking viands on Saturday in order to have good food at home on Sundays. Miller, who was carrying four club steaks, three large slices of cooked corned beef and two slices of ham, admitted taking food once in a while. Both said they didn't know the third man.

MAN ARRESTED ON BAD CHECK CHARGE GETS $10,000 VERDICT

Paper Was Good When Written, Boyd M. Vimos Shows, in Suit Against Kresge Co.

A verdict of $10,000 for humiliation and inconvenience suffered by Boyd M. Vimont, 4112 Botanical avenue, for alleged false arrest and imprisonment, was returned in his favor yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Rosskopf's court against the S. S. Kresge Co., which operates a chain of department stores.

According to the evidence, Vimont, on Dec. 28, 1922, tendered a check for $6.87 in payment of a purchase at defendant's store, at 516 Washington avenue, and the check was returned marked "no account." On Jan. 3, 1923, he was arrested at his home and held at the Seventh District Police Station several hours until he could give bond.

Vimont charged he was arrested without due process of law and that the Kresge Co. had caused his arrest in connection with the check transaction. According to Vimont, he had an account at the City Trust Co., on which the check was drawn. At the time, it was shown, he had $70.42 on deposit, but previous checks issued by him reduced the account to 24 cents by the time the Kresge check went to the bank. Vimont said he did not know his account was that low.

Judge Rosskopf, in instructing the jury, said there was no evidence that the plaintiff had violated any criminal statute or was guilty of any crime in giving the defendant the check.

ARKANSAS' EXECUTIONER IN JAIL FOR LIQUOR VIOLATION

Prison Warden Hopes to Have Him Released for Electrocuting Two Negroes June 26.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 13.—The State of Arkansas is not looking for an official executioner, even though the holder of that job is serving a three months' sentence in jail for violating the liquor laws.

This announcement was made today by Warden Evans of the State Prison, as a result of a flood of applications for the job of electrocuting Jack Buster, Jefferson County negro, and Fox Flowers, Columbia County negro, at sunrise on June 26.

The warden said that among the many applications was one coming from a man in McAlester, Ok., who claimed to be the official executioner of Oklahoma and who offered to do the job at $100 for each person executed. He added he hoped to secure a furlough for E. T. Breck, official executioner, now in jail, long enough for him to do the task.

"If Breck can't get loose long enough to do the job I'll do it myself," the warden said.

An appeal will be taken and a motion for an appeal bond will be argued Tuesday.

The Senate also approved bills reorganizing the naval command, the adjourned sine die.

LEGION FUND DRIVE TO OPEN TOMORROW

St. Louis' Quota in $5,000,000 Campaign for Relief of Orphans Is Set at $77,000.

Mrs. James M. Franciscus of 10 Lenox place has been appointed chairman of the women's division of the St. Louis committee for the American Legion endowment fund, it was announced yesterday. As is known, the legion is engaged in raising a $5,000,000 fund for the relief of war orphans and a quota of $200,000 has been assigned to Missouri.

Former Mayor Kiel is chairman of the St. Louis committee which has a quota of $77,000 in the State fund and it was at his request that Mrs. Franciscus agreed to serve as head of the women's division.

"The purpose for which the funds of the drive are to be put, that is, the relief of our war orphans makes it the duty of every American to donate to it," Mrs. Franciscus said last night. "The relief of little children who are suffering through the deaths of their soldier fathers should particularly appeal to the women of our city.

"The American Legion endowment fund does not represent a charity but a duty. If everybody helps there will be no trouble in raising our quota here."

A special gifts committee of 30, headed by Robert Burkham, chairman, will begin tomorrow the active work of solicitation in the campaign.

The intensive week of the drive, when several hundred volunteer workers will aid in the solicitation, has been set for June 22 to 29. John B. Edwards is chairman of the General Solicitation Committee. The Special Gifts Committee will make its drive for larger subscriptions principally, while the General Solicitation Committee plans a canvass of the entire city.

Similar drives are being conducted in every state in the Union, and the campaign has the support and indorsement of scores of nationally known persons and organizations.

The endowment fund is to be held in perpetual trust

COUNTY WATER USERS ASKED TO ECONOMIZE

Company in Advertisement Says Lawn Sprinkling Is Causing Shortage.

In an advertisement prior to Friday nights rain, appealing to its St. Louis County customers to refrain from excessive use of water during hot, dry periods, in order to avoid depriving consumers in some localities of water supply, the West St. Louis Water & Light Co. says:

"The very unusual and excessive demand for water for sprinkling lawns and irrigating gardens during the present drought has reduced the effective water pressure to consumers in St. Louis County so that a number of consumers on the high ground have been without water during the evening hours of the last week. A smaller number have been without water service in the early morning due to practice of certain other water consumers to do their sprinkling in the early morning when the pressure is normally higher.

"An ordinary garden hose used for sprinkling will consume from 15 to 25 times as much water as is usually consumed by a household. It can be seen very readily that if a sufficient number of people commence sprinkling their lawns or gardens at any one time, that the total consumption of water will be very great, and the pressure will be rpduced sufficiently to deprive consumers on the higher elevations of all water service for any purpose whatever so long as a large number of consumers are sprinkling their lawns.

"It has been very definitely shown that the sprinkling of blue grass lawns in hot, dry weather tends to kill the blue grass, and induce the growth of coarse yard grass, which is unsightyl, while the blue grass lawn that is allowed to dry up and get brown in a period of drouth is not materially injured by the drouth conditions, but will sprout and grow after the drouth is over, and again produce a good looking lawn.

"All our consumers are requested to refrain from sprinkling lawns and gardens while the weather remains hot and dry, so that the consumers who are not at this time able to get water for sanitary or other purposes, due to the excessive use by others, will have sufficient water to supply their needs."

Rapid growth of county population in recent years has increased greatly the demands on the water company.

The city pumped a record amount of water for the last eight years, last Wednesday, taking 165,700,000 gallons from the Mississippi during the 24 hours. Out of this amount, 26,700,000 gallons were consumed in necessary flushing work at the Chain of Rocks plant to relieve the purifying equipment of settlements.

DIETING

Why, When and How

By A. W. King.

DR. MAX C. STARKLOFF, Health Commissioner of St. Louis, who herewith gives his views on the subject of DIETS.

"THE fashion plates have been much more effective than the advice of physicians," remarked a St. Louis diet expert recently. "In order that they may reduce, women are dieting as they never did before. Most people eat too much. So, upon the whole, it is a healthy fad."

Well-dressed women must have straight lines, up and down, and these do not permit any superfluous flesh. Now that lacing of the diaphragm has been outmoded, with its harmful pressure on the ribs and internal organs, there is no other way than to be slender. Tubular dresses are not for the fat.

"To make a fat person thin is easier than to make a thin person fat," according to Frances Vinton Ward, lecturer in home economics, Washington University, Division of Extension.

"To this question of reducing," says Mrs. Ward, "diet is the obvious answer. But it is not always the right one. Several maladies, not uncommon, have a gain in weight for a prominent early symptom. To cut down the amount of food is worse than useless in some of these cases. Before beginning any system of food restriction, it is well to consult the family doctor and make sure that the bodily machine is in good running order.

"Among people who are well, lack of success in reducing usually results from failure of the will power to carry them through the first stages of the new diet. And failure of the will power comes from desperate attempts at impossible standards, and from self-pity.

"First, as to the person who has been eating between meals. A good stomach is a wonderfully accurate timekeeper. If it has been accustomed to receiving food at a certain hour, it needs no clock to know when that hour arrives. If the stomach has had food often, it will demand food often. A midnight lunch, or afternoon tea, taken one day, is desired again the next day. Denied consistently for a few days, the demand ceases.

"But how can a busy man or woman do efficient work on those two or three days with a pampered stomach clamoring for food? Usually a glass of water will quiet it for the time. If not one, then two glasses or even three surely will stop the gnawing, and not encourage future pangs of hunger at the same hour.

"Now, for the person who has been eating large meals. The sense of sufficiency at the end of a meal depends on the degree of stretching of the elastic bag which is the stomach. If the stomach is accustomed to a considerable stretch, it will not report 'full!' until that tension is reached. Overstretched, even at one meal, it will not report 'enough!' so soon the next time. So, one who eats abstemiously for a week and then takes a large meal, not only undoes the loss of weight already accomplished, but also undoes the reduced demand for food."

Mrs. Ward remarked that reduction by exercise alone is an attractive method but very liable to failure. Outdoor exercise is apt to produce an appetite which only the most stubborn will power can combat. Continued over long periods, it offers the best results in general health. "Set exercises are a bore," she said, "and so, perhaps, more immediately efficient in reducing.

"For the average person, without scientific knowledge of body needs and the values in all their details of foodstuffs, minerals and vitamines, the 'shotgun method' is the only safe one. Offer as great variety to the body as possible, and let the body choose for itself. To cut out entirely any one class of food, except rich cakes, pastries, candy and soda fountain products, may not be safe. For instance, milk usually is the first food omitted by the uninformed reducer. But milk is very necessary in our modern diet, and valuable in a reducing system because it satisfies the appetite for a fairly long time without increasing food demands of the future.

"Let the breakfast and luncheon be light. If custom or fancy dictates, the luncheon may be omitted, but never the breakfast. Fruit for breakfast always, and a beverage. A vegetable or fruit salad, with French or boiled dressing, at luncheon, along with one roll or a slice of bread. One glass of milk at each of these meals is very helpful to the person who suffers from hunger. Don't use buttermilk, because it will not allay hunger as sweet milk does.

"Then eat one comfortable dinner a day. Take one serving of each thing, but one serving only, and not an excessively large amount, either. Thinking of one's fattest acquaintance, and filling the plate for him, is as safe a rule as any. A tablespoonful of meat fat, or two tablespoonfuls of meat gravy, will satisfy longer than butter or salad oil. A slice and a half of whole wheat or graham bread gives no more calories than a single slice of white bread, and is more valuable in other ways.

"Use at least two vegetables, besides a modest spoonful of potatoes. Corn, peas and shelled beans are the poorest, and leafy vegetables the best. Creaming vegetables, or serving them with much butter, adds to the calories without giving corresponding satisfaction to the appetite. Take one serving of meat, not too fat.

"Fruits will satisfy the craving for desserts. Fortunately, the appetite tends to learn to like the food it is accustomed to, and if the amount of sugar served with fruits, cereals and beverages is gradually decreased, the taste for heavy sweets will decrease, too.

"In short, the diet should include everything to which one is accustomed, but prepared simply and taken in moderate amounts. Thus may the very complex requirements of the body be supplied, and no essential omitted. For success in reducing, two things are absolutely essential—continued good health and never-failing determination."

This matter of excess weight has a bearing even on specific diseases. The doctors know, for example, that after the age of 35 diabetes is much more common among people who are overweight than among those who are underweight. After 35, as statisticians of the life insurance companies know, the average life-span is shorter among persons who are overweight than among those who are underweight.

"The method of dieting to reduce, and the necessity for it, should be taken up first with some medical man," said Dr. Max C. Starkloff, Health Commissioner of St. Louis. "Otherwise it may be harmful, or dangerous.

"It cannot be denied that the general public is overfeeding. People are taxing their systems, disturbing their functions by overloading the organs, and this indulgence may easily reach a point where it is detrimental or where it does great damage. Most obesity is due to lack of exercise, coupled with much food rich in starch and sugar. Without proper exercise, the skin is inactive, the waste matter is not eliminated as it should be and food hasn't the same value to the eater.

"The big feeder ought always to watch the condition of his kidneys. If analysis shows the necessity for dieting, then he should by all means consult a physician and obey the doctor's orders.

"You can reduce at a tremendous rate, although it is better to do so gradually. You should abstain from sweets and all starchy foods entirely. The diet should be largely vegetables, such as spinach, asparagus, cauliflower, lettuce, celery, cabbage and string beans. None of these should be taken at pleasure, only in certain quantities, in order to accomplish the results, and that in connection with other foods as prescribed by a physician, who measures the amount of protein, fat, carbohydrates and calories that he wants the individual to have. Begin with a 24-hour fast and then follow the dietary list given by the doctor.

"In this way people can reduce from 6 to 10 pounds in from 10 to 14 days.

"For a heavy eater, or for one addicted to sweets, I believe dieting is justified.

"Consider the case of a man who decides to give up his usual hearty lunch at noon. Instead he has a sandwich or two, fixed up with all the art of the soda fountain, some ice cream or a sunda and perhaps a malted milk preparation. It is really more fattening than the lunch to which he has been accustomed. At dinner he fills up until he is ready to explode. This 'dieting' has little effect."

Are YOU Overweight?

THE following table of normal weights, according to age and height, was compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and is based on a mortality study of about 750,000 men. Average weights are by no means the best possible rates, the company says. At ages under 30, the best conditions apparently exist among those whose weights are from five to ten pounds above the average. After age 30, the most favorable conditions are found among those whose weights are below the average. The normal weights for women would be from 10 to 15 per cent less than the figures shown here.

Fat is surplus fuel, stored up in the body.

"A simple weight chart will tell the story as to our fuel balance,' said Dr. Philip A. Shaffer, professor of biological chemistry, Washington University School of Medicine, in a recent lecture. "A bathroom scale is a useful article of furniture. If your children stop gaining in weight, the reason is worth looking into; and if your own weight varies more than a few pounds, a similar investigation is called for."

"THIS HORSE CAN'T LOSE!"

$3,000,000 is bet each year in St. Louis.

Most of the newsboys with regular corners are agents for commissioners."

IT IS said that, in the East, many women follow the races and bet heavily upon them. But this does not seem to be true of St. Louis.

"Women?" repeated a local racing enthusiast. "They're pests! We don't want them around. They're out of place when they bet on horse races.

"For one thing, women are 50-cent bettors. If a woman has a bet with you, no matter how small, she keeps calling up every other minute to ask about it. They have nothing else to do, so they keep telephoning. They're pests!

"At French Lick, Hot Springs and other resorts where there is gambling they cater to the women and provide 'ladies' smoking rooms,' or other private apartments where they may risk their money. But we don't encourage women. Gambling is bad for women, just as cigarettes are bad for them. A man has his business to attend to, he has work to do. But there is no such safeguard for idle women and they go too far with such things. They easily become habitual smokers or bettors.

"There is less betting by women here than in any town in the United States."

It is interesting to note the way in which investigators have reached their estimate of a billion dollars as the United States' annual turnover in horse-race gambling. In England it has been figured officially that $700,000,000 is bet a year in the open. Another $50,000,000, probably, is bet illegally on the streets and elsewhere. Now compare the two countries.

There are in the United States about 50 tracks, while it is doubtful if England has half as many. Again, racing is an all-the-year-round proposition on this side of the ocean, with Havana, Miami, New Orleans and Tia Juana running in the winter, when the tracks are closed on the other side. With the greater population and greater wealth of this country, it seems a certainty that American bettors will exceed the English bettors by $300,000,000, which brings the total to more than a billion.

FIGURES from Maryland give a good idea of the money which is put on the "ponies." Last year, the machines at the four big tracks in Maryland took in more than $50,000,000, with only about 90 days of racing. That was more than half a million dollars a day, or an average of about $100,000 on each race. This $51,000,000 all was bet at the tracks in the open. Undoubtedly, many more millions went on these same races in the handbooks and poolrooms of the country.

In Maryland and Kentucky, at Tia Juana and in Canada, the pari-mutuel plan is used. It is legalized betting under control of the State, which collects a large revenue in the form of a tax, usually 5 per cent, on all the money wagered. Last year the State of Maryland's revenue from its four tracks—Bowie, Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Laurel—was $721,000. The State of Kentucky, from the Churchill Downs, Latonia and Lexington tracks, collected $399,750.

But the biggest Government prize was Ontario's. In that province the total sum of $36,429,819 was bet, and the provincial Government's share was $1,821,490, including a special levy of $7500 a day on each track. It is fair to include Canada, because not a little of the money wagered there is from the United States, while the races are played heavily in New York's handbooks.

For St. Louis bettors, Flying Ebony brought home possibly $100,000 at the Derby this year.

Local bettors have not made a real killing since last year's Derby, when they backed Black Gold. Their winnings were calculated at between $300,000 and $400,000.

BETTING on horse races must be done unobtrusively, not to say furtively, in St. Louis. Such wagers are illegal. But the large delegations of enthusiastic St. Louisans who go by rail or motor to Louisville each year for the Kentucky Derby, and also to other tracks than Churchill Downs, are not the only ones here interested in the races. Besides the St. Louisans who are able to go away and enjoy the sight of beautiful horses, skillful riding and bright colors at a meeting, along with the crowd's excitement, many others watch the results just as keenly. They are the stay-at-home bettors.

The majority of the bettors in St. Louis seldom or never see a race. They follow the sport in various racing publications and in the newspapers—articles about horses and riders, past performances, gossip of stable and track, and the tips on probable winners. Then in devious ways they place their bets, usually for modest amounts.

During the last two or three years, say men familiar with the local play, the number of these bettors has increased very rapidly, and so has the total of money wagered on the "ponies" in a year. Naturally, exact figures cannot be obtained about what is done more or less secretly.

But they estimate that local betting runs up to a million dollars annually, and that another two millions are sent to St. Louis in a year from other towns in the surrounding territory and wagered on races.

Thus, a probable $3,000,000 is put up in St. Louis every year by optimists who think that they can pick the winner. The figure, which would mean an average monthly sum of $250,000, is declared to be conservative. It does not include, of course, the money which visiting St. Louisans bet at the tracks, either with bookmakers or the pari-mutuel machines.

THESE estimates, for one city of a State which forbids horse racing and forbids betting, tend to corroborate an arresting statement which comes from investigators in the East: That betting on the races has become one of the great industries of the United States.

Men who have studied the subject, using such statistics as are available on the sport in this and foreign countries and consulting well-known figures of the turf, believe that bets on horse races aggregate a billion dollars annually in the United States.

The stay-at-home bettors are much more numerous in some other large cities than in St. Louis. In New York City, for example, it is stated that about 100,000 little white slips are in circulation each day, the slips representing wagers on horse races.

The local turnover of only $3,000,000 may seem small, but St. Louisans connected with the betting business agree that it is thriving mightily, despite the efforts of police and courts to stop it. When, a few weeks ago, St. Louis detectives made "surprise raids" on places where gambling was suspected, they went to 50 stores and offices in the downtown district alone and arrested virtually everybody whom they found there.

"St. Louis has the best reputation of any town in the United States for paying off," said a man who has been in touch with the situation for many years. "It is the only city where everybody settled up after Black Gold won the Kentucky Derby last year. New York, Chicago, Kansas City and all the others welched.

"People will be betting on the Derby when we are all dead and gone. There is no way to stop it. In the last three or four years St. Louis has come to be considered the best center in the country for the Kentucky Derby.

"It is not the city people so much as those out of town who do the betting. They lay their wagers by long-distance telephone or by telegraph. Why there should be so much betting in the smaller towns I do not know, unless it is because they have more time on their hands than city people, and less excitement. Many bets, for example, come from telegraph operators in country towns. They will hear something on the wire which sounds like a good tip and they will play it.

"Money comes to St. Louis from St. Charles, De Soto, Moberly and Hannibal, in Missouri, and from Collinsville, Herrin, Peoria, Springfield and Quincy, in Illinois, to name just a few of them. There are easily 100 towns which send money to St. Louis for betting, and in a year it amounts to a couple of millions. Some of this money used to go to other betting centers, but the other towns laid down.

"Until a year or two ago we didn't have the tips. Betting is on the increase because of the tips. A horse player is always looking for a tip or a 'hunch.' If he hears a kid holler 'Whoa, Bill!' and there is an entry named Bill, he is likely to consider it a 'hunch' and to back that horse. Or he may know somebody with the same name as a horse, and play that horse out of courtesy. Or there may be a feeling of local pride, such as caused many St. Louisans to put their money on Chief Uncas at Louisville this year. Other 'hunches' are the result of dreams.

"Most of the stay-at-home bettors place their bets according to tips. Here we don't get tips until about 9 o'clock in the morning, when a form sheet published at Chicago the evening before is delivered in St. Louis. In this way the Chicago bettors have an advantage. But there were no big Chicago handbooks this year on the Kentucky Derby, because they welched last year.

"There are many places where bets may be made. In almost every building downtown you can find an elevator boy, a newsdealer, a cigar store or some other agent with a place where a man can sneak a bet. One clearing house out in the county is said to have agents in more than 50 stores in St. Louis. There are handbooks in Madison, Venice, East St. Louis, Wellston and the county, all with agents who take wagers and 'phone them in.

"If the commissioners feel that it is not safe for them to carry any large bets, or particular bets, they 'lay them off.' In other words, they pass them on to the big men of the game or to gambling syndicates, and collect a commission. The large books either lay against the bets or telegraph their agents at the race tracks to place the money in the mutuel machines or with other bookmakers.

"The local books have agents everywhere—in barber shops, bakeries, cigar stores, hotel offices, news stands, poolrooms, soft-drink parlors and other shops.

The Girl With a Winning Way

Another True Detective Story From the Police Records of Europe.

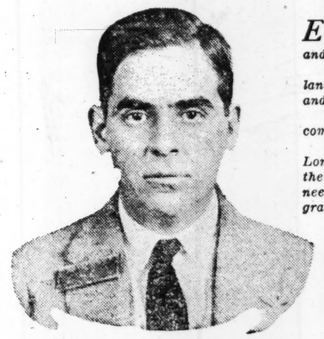
By ELEANORE BROWNE, (Noted Authority on Crime and Criminals.)

ELOISE CALVIN, daughter of a British curate, is not exceptionally pretty. In her native city, Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, she was never considered the belle, and the other girls of her crowd carried off the best of the local beaux.

For these other girls who were prettier than Eloise their sweethearts did gallant things and, as husbands, built them homes and started bank accounts for them and all that sort of thing.

But for Eloise, who has never married, two young and rather handsome men committed suicide, while at least three American men went to prison for long terms.

Because of those things Eloise, just now, is serving a sentence of her own in London's Brixton Prison, but she is very young still, and there is little doubt in the minds of international policemen that when she comes out of Brixton she will need watching again lest other men do things for her that will land them within gray walls.



LAWRENCE HAMILTON, West Point graduate, who followed Eloise from Paris to New York and to prison.

ELOISE CALVIN—Three men are in prison, two men have killed themselves because of her.

THOMAS J. McCARTHY, who met and loved the minister's daughter and forged for her.

FROM her father's parsonage in the busy coal-mining town of Newcastle Eloise went to London. She had, then, £300, or $1500, which had been left her by her mother. Most of this she invested in a diamond ring, a perfectly cut diamond of exquisite color. It was her fancy to have the gem set not in a lady's mounting, but as a man's ornament.

She met several men; how she met them always has been a matter of interest; but, at any rate, though she was not exceptionally pretty, it seemed that men liked her. One presented another. She was a jolly little girl, and such a contrast to what a minister's daughter should be that these men were glad to present one another to her. And each of the men wondered a little at the curiosity of a man's set ring, heavy and awkward, on her dainty, slender fingers.

Eloise always was sentimentally inclined. It was a pretty little trick of hers, in those days, to ask every new acquaintance who gave her an opportunity, to wear her ring for a day or two. "It's so beastly out of place on my hand, you know," she'd say, "but I have to wear it most of the time because it was my brother's—the one who was killed in the war, you know—and when he was dying he made me promise to wear it always as a reminder of him. I'd not give it up for the world but—since you say you like me so much, you wear it a day or two—just to please me."

Which resulted in many men wearing the beautifully cut and perfectly watered ring, at one time or another. In fact, there were at least seven men who did this.

ONE afternoon, Eloise got into touch with all these seven men and explained to each one separately—and alone—that she was in a terrible situation! She just had to have £100 or $500, right away—not tomorrow, or soon, but then—that very moment! There was a mortgage on the rest of her estate, up in Newcastle, that she'd forgotten about—a hundred pounds of mortgage, and it had to be paid that day—by telegraph from London or the bank would take advantage of her and foreclose and she'd lose the home her mother had left her. Wouldn't that be too bad? And would you, who have worn my ring and know all about it—would you just loan me £100? I'm afraid I won't be able to pay it back for two weeks, at least, but you can keep my ring. Oh, yes! You must keep my ring. I'd not think of taking the money lest you did. It must be a real, businesslike loan, with interest and everything, and security! Indeed, it must."

One after the other the seven men took the beautiful ring from Eloise, the ring they'd worn themselves for a day or two, and consequently knew all about, and loaned her £100 each. Some gave her the cash, in crisp 5 and 10 pound notes. Others gave her checks, which she hurried away to cash at the bank.

She'd done with the seven of them by evening, and had her hundred from each—£700 is $3500, not an insignificant sum in England and fairly good for one day's work!

ONLY two of the men complained to Scotland Yard when they discovered during the calm examination of their "security" the next day, that the diamond had lost its lustre—and that it was only glass! But, through these two, Scotland Yard learned about the other five, and sent a call for little Eloise.

They didn't catch her, then. They did not even hear of her again until Monsieur Phillipe Cleves, a jeweler of the Rue Castiglione in Paris, killed himself. He left a note explaining that a young English girl of whom he had become quite fond had introduced him to an Englishman who was, she said, the son of an Earl or something like that and immensely wealthy. The Englishman had after a time decided to buy a marvelous necklace from M. Cleves, to be given to his fiancee as his wedding gift. The Englishman, who was the son of an Earl or something important like that, was very particular. The diamonds must be large and perfect and must match. And there must be at least 50 of them in the string.

WILLARD McCRACKEN, a crook of international fame, but Eloise duped him.

Now, a diamond necklace like that is not a thing to be picked up, even by a jeweler, any day in the week. It must be assembled. Many stones must be examined before 50 that match and are perfect may be found. Then the settings must be made artistically, as was the custom of M. Phillipe Cleves.

Being a small trader in jewels, his shop being one of the most inconspicuous along Rue Castiglione, despite his fame as an expert and a conscientious dealer, M. Cleves wished that he might be assisted by a check, even a small one, in advance from the important son of an Earl. He confided this wish to Eloise, his very dear friend, and wondered if she could not convey a hint to the Englishman that a payment in advance, even a small one, would be the customary thing to do.

ELOISE was delighted to do this service for her "protector." Better even than his wife she knew the financial situation of M. Cleves. She spoke to the Englishman about it and he, having acknowledged that he knew her in her parsonage days, was charming about it. "Of a certainty! And not such a small advance payment, either. That would seem as if he did not have confidence in M. Cleves. It should be a substantial sum—what shall we say, Eloise? Five thousand dollars? That would be quite right, I should say, since the necklace is bound to cost almost $100,000 when it is finished. We will say $5000 in advance for your jeweler friend, Eloise!"

Eloise took the Englishman's check for that amount to her protector. This satisfied M. Cleves most completely. With such evidence of good faith he hastily persuaded two or three other small jewelers to go into partnership with him in the making of the $100,000 necklace—each contributing of his knowledge and his finances toward the assembling of the stones. Big dealers gave the little syndicate ample credit.

After a while Eloise wanted a bracelet and her jeweler friend was unable to gratify her. Not until after the necklace was completed and he had received his profits—then, he promised, she should have two bracelets, one of rubies and one of emeralds, as her reward for the business she had brought his shop.

"But I will take them now, those two bracelets!" Eloise exclaimed. "After a while? Who knows? You may even by that time have a prettier friend than me. I will talk to the Englishman again and he will advance you, perhaps, another thousand pounds!"

Of course! Only, this time, the Englishman said: "Why bother with one thousand? We will make it two!" Again Eloise took the Englishman's check to the jeweler. A check on the same British bank as before, and one that was as promptly cashed.

Then came the time when the necklace was finished. It was beautiful. An exquisite emblem of the skill and patience of M. Phillipe Cleves! And there was but £17,000 to pay, which the Englishman, son of an Earl or something, promptly paid—by check.

The check came back with the cabalistic mark of the British bank which means the same thing as the "No Funds" mark of our own American banks. But the necklace was gone with the Englishman and so was Eloise!

THE other members of the jewelers' syndicate said they knew all along that M. Philippe was not wise in his selection of Eloise, the English girl, to be a friend, and they blamed him and wanted to know about their money? So M. Philippe killed himself and left a note. Eloise wasn't the name he'd known her by, but there was a photograph of her in his home, despite his wife, and from this the police recognized the girl Scotland Yard wanted for that affair of the seven men and the seven imitation diamond rings.

She was still elusive, however, and wasn't caught until the Englishman himself was dead—by his own hand also! They had agreed, of course, to split the proceeds of the necklace between them, and they did, but Eloise disappeared one night with her partner's share in her own handbag, and there was something about Eloise, even if she wasn't so beautiful as some other girls are, that made men miss her when she was gone. The Englishman considered the matter two days and then died. He, too, left a note.

This time Eloise was traced and a London Police Constable took her around to Scotland Yard. While she was waiting to be sent to prison for a not very long term, New York's Police Commissioner, Richard Enright, was told about her during his visit to London's police headquarters.

"ONE of the cleverest of our younger rogues, and one of the most dangerous," Commissioner

THE GOOD CHECK for which Eloise traded bonds. Below—THE FORGED CHECK for a larger sum that Willard McCracken passed.

An agent of the bond house checked up the signature of Montaigne and pronounced it genuine.

Horwood of the Yard told Commissioner Enright of New York. "Men will do anything for her. Some have stolen, some have forged and some have died. Since the matter of the rings she has done nothing herself, except to run away with her partner's share of the necklace loot. She lets the men do things for her."

Eloise was brought into the Commissioner's office that Commissioner Enright might see her, and marvel at her strange fascinations. Commissioner Enright, like all chiefs of international fame, is fond of looking into the faces of international rogues and adventuresses. He remembered the look of Eloise more than three years later, after she had served her first term at Brixton, and recognized her when he saw her on Fifth avenue's sidewalk in New York one day, when he was speeding up the avenue in his limousine. It was just a fleeting glimpse, but enough. Even a policeman does not often forget Eloise when he has once seen her, even if she be not so very pretty.

A wireless to Scotland Yard that night brought Commissioner Enright the news that Eloise was again "wanted" by the Yard, this time for a series of clever forgeries—not done by her, of course, but by men who seemed to have been inspired by her. "Probably interested in some forgery operations there as the brains of some clever gang," the answering wireless from Scotland Yard concluded.

The experienced policeman knows that a woman has her friends among streets as well as among men, and that if she is seen walking on one avenue one day, probably she walks on that same avenue the next day. Commissioner Enright called to his office the pair of internationally known detective sergeants who have solved the most important of America's financial crime mysteries—August Mayer and Grover Brown. To these two celebrities the Commissioner gave his Scotland Yard photograph of Eloise and told them to stroll as often as they could on Fifth avenue.

IT WAS from one of these afternoon strolls along the fashionable shopping street that Sergts. Mayer and Brown were summoned to the office of the Commissioner and there informed that a daring series of Wall street forgeries had just come to light. A man giving his name as Willard McCracken, debonair, well-dressed and prosperous, had concluded a long negotiation with a business house, Harris Forbes & Co., for the purchase of various bonds amounting to $22,500. He had represented himself as acting for L. E. Montaigne, a wealthy man known to "the street." When the deal had been finally concluded, McCracken paid for the bonds with Montaigne's check for the full amount.

While the bonds were being delivered an agent of the bond house checked up the signature of Montaigne and pronounced it genuine. The bonds were handed over to McCracken. Weeks later the check was returned by the bank marked forgery. At the same moment forged checks which had been cashed in various amounts, from $6000 to $45,000, were returned to various bond houses by their banks. Three men, it seemed, had been concerned in these wholesale forgeries. The two detectives soon obtained their descriptions.

And they learned suddenly that behind almost every forged check there was a mysterious figure, the figure of a woman, not a very pretty one, as pretty women go, but an attractive one whom men did not forget.

THIS young woman, for example, had sold a little group of bonds, real bonds, to Montaigne at his own financial office. She had appealed to him direct, explaining that one of her friends, a man friend, was a customer of his house and had told her she would receive from him the full value of her securities.

The same young woman had appeared in the office of C. F. Childs, in New York, and with a male companion had sold this house bonds to the amount of $6129.54, and had been paid by check. A little later a C. F. Childs check for $9894.23, forged, had been cashed by another man—one of the forgery trio.

In both instances, it was evident, the forged checks had been copied from the real ones—even the printing on the checks being duplicated. And when Detectives Mayer and Brown displayed the Commissioner's photograph of the English girl, Eloise, the various brokers recognized her at once as the young woman who had obtained from them their perfectly good checks!

The detective sergeants returned to their strolling along Fifth avenue. All things come to the detective who strolls, and strolls patiently. Even Eloise came to them—that is to say, she came up to them and walked on by, wholly unsuspecting the two very quiet seeming, very prosperous looking men who have a trick of looking intently out of a corner of their eyes. She did not observe them turn and, crossing the street, "shadow" her for many hours.

"Do not arrest her until you have found her confederates," Commissioner Enright ordered. "We'll take a chance on her getting away."

After a time the detective sergeants "shadowed"

COMMISSIONER ENRIGHT of the New York police—He saw Eloise in London and remembered, when he glimpsed her in New York.

her along the trails of the three men who had been described as the amazingly successful forgers. They followed the trails one by one, and with extreme patience. The paths never crossed, for each of the three men was sure that he was the "only one"!

One of these, Lawrence Harrison, had graduated from West Point, and had started upon a career that promised distinction. He had met Eloise in Paris and followed her to the States. While they watched and shadowed, the detective sergeants identified him as having distributed forged checks through many Eastern cities and they suspected that the greater portion of his earnings found their way into the handbag of Eloise. He had already served at least one term in prison when he fell under the guidance of the girl.

Thomas McCarthy had accompanied Eloise to the Childs offices when she received her genuine check and it was he who had passed the forged Childs check. He, too, had given most of the proceeds of the forged check to Eloise.

Willard D. McCracken who purchased the good bonds amounting to $22,500 with a forged check had an international reputation as a forger. The police have never satisfied their curiosity as to why a rogue known around the world for his skill and daring and one who has served many prison sentences should have acquired the habit of sharing his plunder with such a girl as Eloise, but he did. When, at last, the sergeants swooped down upon her, nearly all the bonds were found in her possession.

ANOTHER jeweler, this time an American, E. C. Abel of 14 Maiden Lane, N. Y., had fallen victim to Eloise—this time in a purely financial way. For it was she who sent one of her trio of admirers, Harrison, into Abel's shop to purchase for her—they were to be her wedding presents, she explained to the jeweler later—$14,500 worth of diamonds. Harrison presented himself as a rather shy bridegroom-to-be, but with excellent credentials—forged. He wanted the finest diamonds Mr. Abel could supply, and got them. While they were being set he took his "fiancee" to the shop to look at them. Eloise was delighted by their sparkle, and almost kissed the "man she was so soon to marry"—almost kissed him before customers and clerks!

Mr. Abe gladly surrendered the diamonds when they were ready in return for a check in full—and a forged one that came back to him almost overnight! The sergeants found the diamonds, or most of them, in Eloise's hotel room.

THEY are gallant men, these sergeants, and are seldom disposed to incommode a lady—but they walked into the apartments of Eloise, one evening, without tapping at the door, and took her out without apologies. They returned to the apartment then and enjoyed themselves going through her effects until McCracken called—that being his evening to call and report on that day's operations. He, too, was taken out quietly. The other two of the trio were arrested the following day—the detectives kept guard over the effects of Eloise until the entire company of forgers was in custody.

When the clever rogues learned that Eloise had duped them all, and that there were three of them instead of one, each made remarks that are not on the records. Eloise only smiled, a little wanly, and confided to the Commissioner that she was sorry she had not "planted" her generous portions of the earnings of the trio, so she'd have them when she again came out of prison.

As a courtesy to Scotland Yard the girl was returned to the London authorities and is back in Brixton Prison again. Her three devotees are paying their separate penalties in this country.

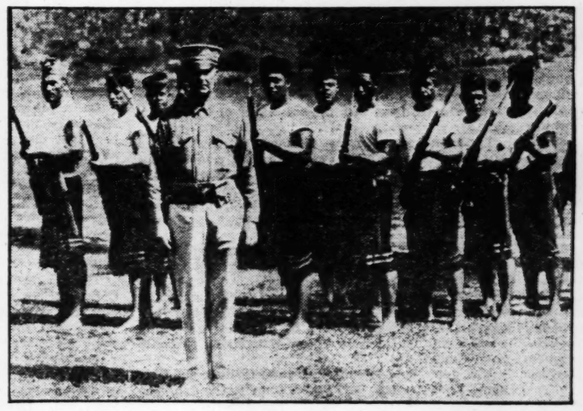
KING LEATHERNECK WITH HIS ARMY AND HIS ISLAND.

Tell It to the Marine!



HIS MAJESTY First Sergeant Nelson Huron and the Samoan Army of which he is Commander in Chief in the land where a man can and does raise a thirst.

By Harry R Burke

ON THE white sharp sands of the tropic beach soldiers wheel and march under the blazing sun.

"Halt!"

The 70 men come to military "attention." Seventy tall and copper-brown soldiers are skirted with dark blue lava-lavas bound about their waists with crimson sashes, while wrapped about their heads are tiny scarlet turbans, shaped oddly enough, after the fashion of the trench caps made familiar by the war in France.

Bare of body are these soldiers save for the lava-lavas. Muscles ripple under velvet skin as with quick precision they answer to the drill commands of America's manual of arms.

"Mark time! Fo-r-r-d . . . . . Harsh!"

There is the slap of bare brown feet padding across the sands as the soldiers shoulder their Springfield rifles and carry on with the rhythms of war.

First Sergeant Nelson Huron, U. S. M. C., is drilling the United States Army of Samoa and getting ready to welcome his Marine Corps comrades when vessels from the Pacific fleet stop at Pago-Pago on July 7, while on their long Australian cruise.

HURON is commander in chief of America's army in that South Sea dominion, the little island of Tutuila, Samoa, where the United States has had a coaling base for a quarter of a century. No native sovereign wields such power as he. Because he represents the great United States the Fita-Fitas honor him, but far more proudly because he commands such splendid troops.

War was the great national pastime in Samoa before the white man came and war is honored yet by the natives of the islands. Long before the white man took possession of the land they, or their courageous fathers, had won a name for fighting. Their fame, the Fita-Fitas believe, has traveled far. Even the American Government knows about their prowess, for the American Government has provided them with arms—Springfield rifles of the latest pattern, automatic pistols that shoot straight and fast. And naturally, so they reason, Washington, being wise, would not so lower itself as to send to Pago-Pago any but a very great chief to command them.

Nelson Huron, an old Top Sergeant of the "Devil Dogs," is a "very great chief" indeed. He is a rough and ready campaigner of the old-time school. Across his breast he wears the ribbons of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, the Boxer campaign, the World War. He isn't a hero. He's only a Marine, he says, and he finds it hard sometimes to be so great a chief as his bronze-skinned fighting men insist he is.

No Eastern mogul ever had more faithful followers. An Emperor's crown set with diamonds would not mean half so much to them as do the three stripes and the diamond which Huron wears upon his sleeve.

MOST folks know Samoa only because Robert Louis Stevenson lived there. But Stevenson lived and died upon Upolu. Those who have read his "Foot Note to History" know something of the clannish rivalry of the warriors of that island and how the European Powers played a game of politics and revolution there.

Samoa then was an independent kingdom. There were rival Kings, Tamasese and Mata'afa. The former had acknowledged German backing, and Germany was suspected, later, of having also secretly fostered Mata'afa's revolt. With the latter King, the admirer of Tusatala will remember, Stevenson's sympathy lay.

The United States Navy has governed the island since 1900. The Marine Corps has kept peace through the lone "leatherneck" designated to command the fighting army of 70 men—the Fita-Fitas. And it is an interesting fact that England is now patterning its government in the islands upon the lines of the United States Navy's rule on Tutuila Island.

Tutuila isn't much of an island in itself. In area it has only about 50 square miles. Pago-Pago harbor is the crater of an old volcano, absolutely safe as anchorage for vessels of any size whatever. It cuts the island almost in two. Back a short distance from the beach rise the ramparts of the old volcano, opened only through that break where the sea enters.

IT IS a great honor to belong to the Fita-Fitas. And the commandant always has a waiting list of sons of chiefs and other brave young warriors who want to join. Vacancies seldom occur. Many of Sergt. Huron's men have been bearing arms for Uncle Sam for from 12 to 25 years.

Erect and handsome are these copper-colored brothers. They are brave and unfaltering in battle. As far back as tradition runs their ancestors have been fighting men.

Their commander is to them like a chief—almost a god. "Papalangi" is the Samoan word for white man. It means "breaking through the sky." The meaning is enough to explain the soldiers' attitude to their commander, who has chiefly dignity among them. A gesture, a nod—and the Fita-Fitas are dashing off to anticipate his wishes. It's embarrassing, says Sergt. Huron.

The island itself is largely under tribal rule. The local chiefs have a free hand for the most part in governing the people. The families dominate the individual and by blood and adoption a family, under its chief, may consist of as many as 200 persons.

Their labor is communal labor. What toil is done is done for the family. But for the most part they live in idleness, for cocoanuts, breadfruit, taro-root, and the unnumbered fruits of the tropics grow almost without cultivation. There is always time for leisure, love and laughter; except for the Fita-Fitas, when their company is ordered out.

For many years the people's law was the Ten Commandments from the Bible, for the natives are all Christians. For 20 years there was no other code. When Judge Gurr, first Secretary for Native Affairs under the United States Government at Pago-Pago, asked the Samoans to suggest laws they brought him a Bible, turned to the Ten Commandments and asked him to establish as penalty for their violation a fine in the shape of a hog to be paid by the wrongdoer.

That was guileless Samoan wile. Judge Gurr knew the native. He also knew that the hog received as a fine would be cooked whole and fed to the natives. Their suggestion paved the way for many feasts. It also paved the way for wholesale violation of the Ten Commandments, with a feast as the reward.

So there were jail penalties established. But the story is told of a native Judge, Folau, who, wise in the way of the law, discovered that a fixed allowance was provided by the Government for feeding and housing jailed natives. He had the spending of that sum. He knew a good thing when he saw it. One by one his family went to jail and drew the funds themselves as prisoners. Until he was finally discovered it was impossible for any outside offender to break into jail.

For the most part the Fita-Fitas have little to do but drill. They are warlike by instinct, these Samoans, but they live at peace, thanks to Christianity and civilization. Of recent years they have had little occasion for action. Perhaps the nearest to a need for them developed four years ago when Lieutenant-Commander Boucher stirred up the islanders against Commander Warren J. Terhune of the United States Navy, its Governor. Two hundred chiefs united in demanding a change. Terhune killed himself while facing charges of tyranny and malfeasance. The courtmartial exonerated him, but too late, and Boucher, despite the appeal of the chiefs who had asked to have him made their Governor, was ousted from the navy. Now American Samoa is at peace again.

SAMOA'S people are the navy's wards. Under American administration they have increased in number, a fact unique in South Seas history. "I have never known a more lovable, proud, happy and virtuous people," said Frederick O'Brien, the famous South Seas traveler, after returning from a six months' visit there. "There are no servants and there is communistic life in every village. I cooked my own food and did my own chores, but I always found a score of men and women to sing and dance when the work was done."

Among these people Sergt. Huron is rounding out bananas, cantaloupes, alligator pears and all manner his career in the Marines. Uncle Sam furnishes him a house and a garden where oranges, pineapples, of fruits grow. There are cocoanuts and breadfruit for the picking. And when the work of drilling his copper-colored fighting men is done, if he doesn't care to listen to the songs or to see a dance, there's a military band to serenade him in the evening.

And how those Fita-Fitas blow their tune: "Hail to the Chief!"

J. J. DELUCCA, St. Louis barber, has written the surrounding poems for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

ON bits of shaving paper and between shaves and haircuts Delucca has been writing these unusual little verses. Most barbers—as everyone knows—are competent critics of grand opera, baseball, politics, and, in fact, any subject that you do or do not bring up. But few, it can be said with truth, are poets. Here, then, is the work of this unique barber who can jot down a sonnet as quickly as he can amputate a sideburn. May he forever do more of both!

Thena me see her getta so red,

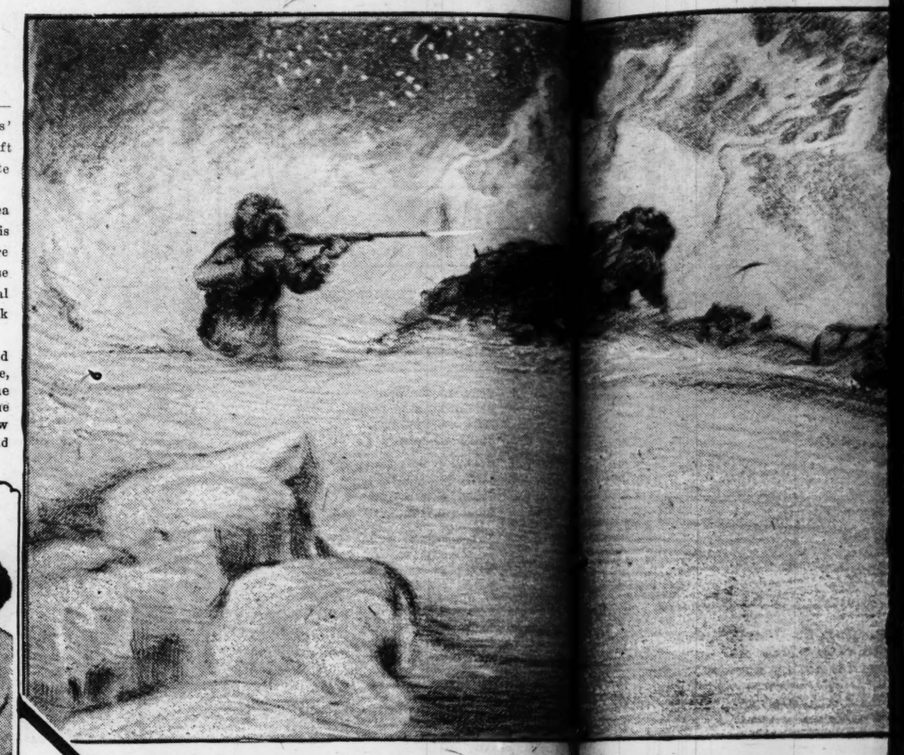
On the RIM of the WORLD Two Men

By Harry R Burke

HAVOUGACH, the man; Khattia, the woman; and Ikalukpiak, the adopted one—these three, far above the Arctic Circle, hated and loved through the six months' winter's night. The bones of Havougach have whitened where Arctic wolves have left them bare. Ikalukpiak has bowed before the White Man's Law and known the White Man's mercy. Now he speeds north to join the woman.

Where the many-mouthed Mackenzie pours through its delta to the Polar sea you will find on the map a dot, and that dot is Herschel Island where Khattia is waiting. Trace east along the ice-bound coast 600 miles to Coronation Gulf. There is the home of the Copper Eskimo whose baleful gods wrought tragic fate upon these three. Into that gulf empties the Coppermine River, and at its mouth the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have fixed a lonely station. It was there Ikalukpiak surrendered.

South along the west bank of the Coppermine lies the summer hunting ground of the Copper Eskimo, while south as far as Bloody Falls, then west to Dismal Lake, with bow and arrow and knife and spear they hunt the caribou, the ptarmigan, the wolf. Skin huts shelter them as they traverse a broken, mountainous land. In the fall they journey north again, and on the thick ice of the gulf they build snow houses and hunt the seal. In this stark land was a tragic triangle of love and hate, and after that—came the White Man's Law.



HAVOUGACH was lazy and in the tribe his name was by-word for sloth. A surly man, he lived alone. One of the very few of the Copper Eskimo to own a gun, while others feasted he often went hungry for very laziness. Only when game was plentiful and near, or when his hut was stripped of food, would he join the chase. This was the man who had asked her father for Khattia's hand. She laughed at him. Nor was the father kindly disposed to his suit, having no wish to see that hulking loafer curled up within his igloo. So Havougach was sent away.

Shortly the father wasted and grew ill. The tribal angatkut—the medicine man—was called and questioned the family closely. With whom had the father quarreled and why? Suddenly the old witch doctor began to speak in a thin and squeaky voice as he lay backward in a trance. He was in the hands of his keyukat, he said, his familiar spirit.

Khattia, the woman who waits.

Of all the strange things done in the land of the midnight sun, perhaps this "triangle" of the wilds is the weirdest. Here is the true story of love and hate, and death and happiness at the top of the world where the northern lights blink at the jagged snow.

Ikalukpiak, the adopted one, who has paid his debt to the White Man's law.

It was powerful magic then that had made the old man ill. An enemy had brought on the illness. Befriend that enemy and placate the spirits who had worked his magic for him and the curse would be removed. But it was mighty magic and the angatkut himself knew naught to work against it.

But Khattia and Khattia's mother knew. The girl was sacrificed to save her father. They married her to Havougach. He was 40 and she was 20. And she went with him to be his slave.

AFTER his fashion Havougach was kind. But he hated the toil which follows the hunt, the skinning, the packing, the caching of meat. He hated the long, cold wait by the air holes of the seal in winter ice. He hated, too, the cold, wet work of stalking when the ice broke up and the seal dozed beside the waters. The long march south he hated, when the summer came; the long, wet work at Bloody Falls, where fish were speared for Khattia to dry; and the trek across the tundra, over rocky hills, and through the forests to Dismal Lake in pursuit of caribou he hated, so that always the two lived upon starvation's margin.

And there were times when Havougach hated the woman because, as the years wore on, she brought him no son. When in an unlucky winter the parents of Ikalukpiak succumbed, the lazy man adopted that youth and brought him to the igloo—to do the work.

Ikalukpiak was almost a man, and Havougach taught him the work of a man; how to hunt for the seal with dogs on ice, how to make a bow and tip his arrows; how to fashion a sharp-edged hunting knife from a lump of copper; how to make harness for the dogs. When they went south that spring the boy carried weapons he had made himself.

DAYS lengthened as they journeyed by the rocky palisades of the Coppermine River, and the sun, still low in the south, was a great blood orange swinging in the sky. The earth had taken on a tinge of green though patches of snow still clung in shadowed crannies of the palisades. When they reached the falls for fishing grass and moss were enameled with the gay colors of wild flowers.

At the falls Havougach skulked in his tent of caribou skin. While Khattia searched for edible roots and berries, Ikalukpiak was spearing a mighty catch of fish to feed the dogs through the winter night. Later, at Dismal Lake, the boy followed caribou through the stunted spruce, returning to camp with broad shoulders bent beneath a burden of meat for Khattia to dry.

Despite the toil he laughed and turned frank eyes for sympathy to his foster mother when Havougach refused to join the fun. So that there grew up between the two a candid sympathy and a quiet understanding—between the boy of 20, and the girl, now 25.

The summer passed. The midnight dusk darkened into night as the sun swung lower below the horizon. The stars were like frozen points as they wheeled about the pole, and the early snows were falling. So they returned to Coronation Gulf, stopping to gather in their cached supplies of food, and there, out on the ice, they built an igloo for the three.

And the winter night was on them.

THROUGH the long Arctic night hate smoldered in the heart of Havougach and in his eyes was madness. Through uncounted days his glittering eyes followed the two who shared his shelter with him. Scarcely a word and never a smile formed on [illegible] lips. If he had been lazy before, he now was sloth itself. Ikalukpiak, alone, was sent to watch airholes for the seal. The man-tasks of the hut were his to do. He must furnish food, must feed the dogs, must repair their harness. When there was time to idle he would sit in a corner of the igloo carving with deft fingers from a walrus tusk a little umiak, perhaps, a tiny boat or toy in ivory.

"White Silence," writers sometimes call the Arctic. But the Arctic night is never silent. There is the crack of ice through the long winter; there is the groan of frozen earth as the weather changes. And there is the rush and roar and the shriek of wind as the blizzard rage.

Havougach, the surly, whose lazy bones whiten under the Arctic sun.

DURING four days that roar [illegible] dinned in the ears of the three who were storm-bound in the igloo. And the shriek of wind was as the shriek of evil spirits to the superstitious three within. Havougach lay or sat in turn among the caribou skins which covered the bench of snow that was the family bed. From time to time he fingered his rifle, which lay close at hand.

Now and then Ikalukpiak looked up from the tiny boat he shaped. Two baleful eyes, he saw, were fixed upon him. At intervals Khattia looked upon the handsome youth and smiled and for a moment Havougach would shield his eyes as from the sight.

His mood was silent. They are silent folk: the Copper Eskimo, ox-placid of exterior—though within they flame, and are quick in the heat of their determination. Not one word had been said between the adopted one and his foster mother to reach an understanding. Nor could Havougach's jealousy, more than their great love, find voice. But as the man looked down from where he sat upon the other two, who seemed so young, he knew that they knew what was in his heart.

The air was foul with the stench of sweating bodies, and as thick and hot as soup. The low dome of the igloo, its snow blocks glazed with films of ice, caught the flicker from the big stone blubber lamp and diffused it through the room with eerie shadows.

Again Khattia gazed at the boy and smiled, and he, flushing beneath her look as he grew conscious

"White Silence," writers sometimes call the Arctic. But the Arctic night is never silent. There is the crack of ice through the long win- ter; there is the groan of frozen earth as the weather changes. And there is the rush and roar and the shriek of wind as the blizzards rage.

By morning the blizzard had ceased. Ikalukpiak had cleared the snow from the tunnel entrance to the hut and from the blocks of ice that served as windows, before the elder man bestirred himself. Havougach broke the silence of three days. "Get the dogs," he said. "We go to the cache for caribou meat."

Khattia watched them start. The dogs and the two men, Ikalukpiak at the handles of the sledge, Havougach following with rifle ported across his breast. The younger man, she knew, had only his knife, and her heart trembled.

It was slow, hard work across rough ice and drifted snow to the coast where the frozen caribou was cached. They were blinded, now and then, by stinging eddies of snow. Great stars flamed as they wheeled in their courses above the two. Came on the gray dusk of midday and it faded again into the blue of night. Their dogs barked in answer to the yelping of the white Arctic foxes and from far across the ice the two men heard a lone wolf howl.

They were at the cache The elder laid aside his gun to help the younger load the meat. Ikalukpiak had seen the lead dog nursing one foot with his tongue, and, going forward, he stooped to examine it. Then he stood up, turning quickly, and gazed straight into the muzzle of Havougach's gun, while the elder man, resting the rifle across the sledge, took careful aim.

DEATH made a third with them at the caribou cache. That Ikalukpiak knew. If death should come now . . . then it would not be later. He gazed unflinching at the eye which sighted along the barrel. He stood erect and waited for his fate.

Before the frank gaze of the fearless youth the eyes of Havougach fell and the glitter in them softened. The gun was dropped, and throwing it upon the sled the older man turned away.

"Come," he said and ordered the dogs forward. Ikalukpiak strained upon the sledge to start it. Then leaning forward he seized the rifle.

"Havougach," called the adopted one.

The other turned. And the finger on the trigger jerked.

There was a spit of flame across the blue, a cry, and the white waste resounded with the echo. Havougach fell. Ikalukpiak bent over him. In the dark the crimson spreading on the snow looked black. He wrapped a robe of caribou about the body and left it there to the mercy of the wind—and of the wolves.

Deck of the Hudson Bay Co.'s boat transformed into a court room for Ikalukpiak's trial.

The Bobbed-Hair Bandit

Who Stole To Save

THE MAN SHE LOVED

FOR all she could remember of her 19 years, pretty Marion King, heiress to a quarter of a million dollars, had had her way.

Now that she was in love the law stepped in. Ernest Strait, whose bold spirit had infatuated the pretty girl, was in jail. Marion thought she could not stand to be separated from her lover for an hour.

To pledge enough of her estate to get a bond took time. Marion knew a quicker way.

In a scarlet coat and with a black mask she climbed the stairs to Britling's cafeteria, on one of the busiest corners of Memphis. In the busy rush of the supper hour she thrust a revolver through the wicket of the cashier's cage.

"Give me what you've got and be quick," she said.

A moment later, with $200 in her pocketbook, she walked down the stairs and stepped into a taxicab.

With the money she bought a bond and released young Strait, who was held by Memphis police on a charge of highway robbery.

Marion couldn't wait an hour to see her lover. Since then they have wed. She is Mrs. Ernest Strait now. And the other day a Memphis jury convicted Mrs. Ernest Strait of robbery, and sentenced her to five years in the Tennessee Penitentiary.

Five long years for the girl who couldn't wait an hour. . . .

Memphis was aghast at the story of the girl robber's daring. Memphis police puzzled their brains to think of someone in the underworld who might have "pulled the job."

They might have been puzzling yet, if Marion King had not been "just crazy about" macaroni salad.

"I have seen the girl before," Mrs. Lillian Letts, manager of the cafeteria told detectives. "But where? . . ."

The police assailed her with a rapid fire of questions.

"Wait," she said. "Wait. . . I have it. I don't know her name, but she's the girl with the bobbed hair and the great brown eyes who always orders macaroni salad. I know now. I'd know those eyes anywhere, in spite of the mask."

Within an hour after the Britling hold-up Ernest Strait had "made his bond" and been given liberty. At police headquarters it was recalled that a pretty girl, with big brown eyes, had been waiting to meet him when he stepped out of the jail.

They traced the girl. It was Marion King.

But Marion King, heiress to rich plantation lands worth a quarter of a million, a graduate of the Ursuline Convent in New Orleans, adopted daughter of "Honest Tom" King, who for many years was Sheriff of Tunica County, Mississippi, was living simply in an exclusive Memphis hotel, the Claridge. She had big brown eyes, she had black bobbed hair, but——

Then the police discovered that Marion had been in the habit of eating her supper at Britling's cafeteria. So long as he was free Ernest Strait had been her supper companion. They brought Mrs. Letts to see the girl.

"She's the one," she said. "I'd know her anywhere."

"The Chief wants to see you," Miss King was told.

Of course, Marion King denied all knowledge of the robbery.

Tunica County, Miss., came to her rescue. Old-time friends of "Honest Tom" King provided bonds for his adopted daughter. When she was free on bail Marion and Ernest Strait had sped across the river from Memphis to Marion, Ark., and there, by the Methodist pastor, were married.

Tennessee's best lawyers were retained by friends of the girl. One firm was paid a fee of $3500 in advance. Up from Tunica County came old friends and neighbors. It was shown that she had $2500 in Memphis banks. The executor of her father's estate and her guardian, J. D. Magruder, a Tunica lawyer, told the Court he would trust the girl implicitly; that as his ward she had never given him a moment's trouble. E. G. Woolfork, president of the Tunica Planters' Bank, and E. G. Bankston, a lawyer, who had purchased a part of her estate, told the Court that at any time Marion could have gotten from them what money she needed.

Then the State of Tennessee sprung its surprise. It offered as witness Mrs. H. Stowers, wife of a traveling man, and Marion's friend, who lived at the same hotel.

She told the jury that Marion had arranged to meet her at the Grand Central Station, two miles south of Britling's. The girl drove up in a taxicab, Mrs. Stowers said.

"Get in quick," Marion told her. "I held up the cafeteria. I had to have some money."

"But we've been eating there," said Mrs. Stowers.

They drove to the home of Mrs. H. A. McAfee, eight miles distant in North Memphis, where they left a black bag containing the scarlet sweater-coat, the black silk mask and the revolver Marion had used. Marion didn't know Mrs. McAfee.

None the less the woman was loyal to the friend of her friend. "I burned those things," she told the jury, "because I thought they might incriminate Mrs. Stowers. I'd do it again if necessary."

The jury deliberated 48 hours before it returned a verdict of guilty, fixing the penalty at five years.

"I have no regrets," said Marion. "Ernest is all the world to me. He was accused of a robbery of which he was innocent. They had kept him in jail a long time. I just thought I couldn't stand it a minute longer and the bondsman wanted money"——

"Marion's been foolish," said the old home folks down in Tunica County, "but she surely had Tom King's grit in her makeup." Still, they can scarcely believe that the bobbed-haired girl in the scarlet coat and black silk mask, who rushed up the stairs to the cafeteria, emptied the cash drawer while she held a big revolver at the cashier's head, and then coolly walked down and entered a taxicab, is the girl they know.

The bobbed-haired girl thrust her revolver at the cashier's head.

Ernest Strait, to free whom the Mississippi heiress robbed the cafeteria. They have been married since.

"She had Tom King's grit," they say, "if only she had used it in some other way." And they recall, with smiles, how "Little Marion" was the Sheriff's "pal."

"And Tom King," they add, "wasn't afraid of—nothing."

Tom King's unquestioned bravery kept him in the Sheriff's office down in Tunica County for many, many terms. He and his wife were childless when Marion's father, a railway engineer, was killed in a wreck. Her mother died soon after. The Kings adopted their orphan baby. In her way she was a little tyrant. When "Honest Tom" rode about the county summoning litigants and witnesses Marion just wouldn't stay at home. The big, good-natured Sheriff used to take her on the front of his saddle as he rode over the county. She knew everyone. Everybody knew little Marion.

Sheriff King prospered. Tunica County is rich. His office paid as much as $35,000 and $40,000 a year. The Sheriff's investments were wise. Marion was sent away to New Orleans to be educated. In the convent she met some of New Orleans' most exclusive daughters. Her grace, her beauty, her impeccable deportment won her many friends.

But she cared nothing for society. She was determined to return to Tunica County to make her home on the King plantation. Perhaps that was because Ernest Strait lived in Tunica.

Marion first met him, a country boy, when she was 12. He had come to town from the country and was forced, as country boys are, to fight the "townies" and make himself a place. One recognized in boyhood's freemasonry his daring made him leader. Marion was willing to come back to Tunica, but Ernest wasn't willing to stay there. The "big town" called to his ambitious spirit. He went to Memphis.

Sheriff King died. His wife did not survive him long. They left Marion the old homestead at Robinsonville, 22 acres of land almost in the heart of Tunica, and one of the county's largest cotton plantations.

Perhaps Marion thought her lover would come back home, too. But Tennessee wouldn't let him. Memphis police accused him of being one of three youths who had held up and robbed a grocery store.

The girl came to his rescue. From her guardian she borrowed money enough to buy him a bond. The girl went to Memphis to free him and to help defend his case. She wrote back to her guardian:

"Sell the Tunica property if you can, and pay yourself back the loan. I want to live in Memphis."

Ernest was at liberty for only a few happy days. Then Memphis police arrested him as one of three highwaymen who kidnaped a wealthy business man, drove him out into the country, took his $700 diamond pin and his Cadillac automobile and left him there.

The girl, alone in the hotel, did her best to get him bond. There was difficulty in arrangements by mail. Tunica County, Mississippi, and Shelby County, Tennessee, were far apart. Her guardian hesitated about furnishing her a large sum from her estate without an order from the Probate Court. Days passed and Marion, free, brooded over the sufferings of her lover held in jail.

"Then came Saturday," Marion told the officials who were waiting to take her to the penitentiary. "I thought of myself sitting all the long Sunday about the hotel; and I thought of Ernest, in the dingy, narrow cell of the jail. It just seemed that I couldn't wait—not even an hour—to see him.

"The thought came to me—Britling's. I knew there would be a crowd. I knew there would be money. I remembered what my daddy said when someone told him there was danger.

"'If you've got grit and a gun, you needn't be scared of any number. Folks seem to know when you mean business.'"

And then the scarlet sweater, the black silk mask, and Marion's holdup.

She and her lover were reunited within an hour.

"There'll be no more happiness for me until Marion comes back," says her husband. "They may send me to the penitentiary if they like. Nothing would make me happier than to be in there with her. We've been sweethearts since we were children. We'll be sweethearts to the end."

And Marion?

"I've asked them to sell the plantation and the old homestead at Robinsonville," she said, "and when I get out Ernest and I will settle down. But it will be far away from here." She mused for a moment.

"If I had it to do over again. . . ." But the sentence was never finished. Marion Strait's smile dissolved in tears and her voice choked up with sobs. "Honest Tom" King's intrepid daughter was feminine in the end.

Marion King, the Sheriff's daughter, and the gun with which she committed the robbery, to release her lover from jail.

THIS is the first of a series of four peppery baseball stories which the Post-Dispatch will publish on this page. They are all real base hits.

ADAM JINKINSEN was a baseball pecan. He loved a girl named Dovey, Blanche Dovey — from Waco, Texas. Blanche was a slave to the celluloid drama; in other words, a movie fan.

Adam Jinkinsen was the real hickory. He had en one of the most active letter writers during the r of the Big Fuss when the clan became agitat-over the treasonable accusation that the Great erican Game of Baseball was a form of rounders, ritish schoolboy sport. The discussion might have n going on yet had not some silly outsider asked:
ell, what if it was?" thus propounding a query at stumped them all.

Adam Jinkinsen had known Blanche Dovey only a w minutes, but he loved her passionately, as others
d, did, and would. Blanche was all right. Her ir was brown and her eyes were wide. About her a charming air of capable irresponsibility, of caus daring, of innocent worldliness—a combination, you will, of Waco high school and the Hotel Aster-bilt. Outside she was Asterbilt, but inside she still was Wacoquette.

IT WAS Saturday evening in the Simpson apartment in the Bronx. George Simpson was something of a baseball crank himself and Adam had dropped in to discuss the question of the superiority of Walter Johnson over Grover Alexander. Blanche had called to see Mrs. Simpson, who, like Blanche, used to live in Waco.

George Simpson went down to the corner to get a couple of bottles of beer and Mrs. Simpson excused herself to go into the kitchen to make some sandwiches, so Adam and Blanche were left alone.

"What was it you and Mr. Simpson were arguing about when I came in?" Blanche asked, just to make conversation—not that she thought she ought to know.

"Pitchers," said Adam.

"Oh!" cried Blanche. "Don't you love them?"

"Some of 'em," admitted Mr. Jinkinsen. "Some of these players get my goat, though. Now"——

"Oh, dear me, Mr. Jinkinsen," laughed Blanche. "Don't you like Valentino? And Mary Pickford? She"——

"Huh?" exclaimed Mr. Jinkinsen.

"Don't you like Mary Pickford?"

"Never saw her. She's some kind of an actress, isn't she?"

Blanche was on her feet beside him.

"She's all kinds," cried Miss Dovey, greatly astonished. "Didn't you just say you loved pictures?"

"Pitchers," asserted Mr. Jinkinsen. "Baseball pitchers, not movin' pitchers."

And they both laughed, each magnanimously forgiving the other for such stupidity. Immediately—none could resist Blanche Dovey's laugh—Adam knew he loved her.

"I don't know much about the movies," Adam admitted, "but"—he smiled at his own slyness, and so did Blanche—"I'd be rather willing to learn."

"Do you like serials?" Blanche wanted to know.

"Only for breakfast," he grinned. "I was just kiddin'," he hastily explained. "I never saw but one. It was called 'The Terrible Torrydor.' There was a guy in it with a mask on and he went around murderin' folks, and just when I got interested the end came and a sign said: 'Who is the Terrible Torrydor?' I picked up my hat and left. Gee whiz! if the man that runs the show don't know," said Adam, indignantly, "how's he expect me to tell him?"

Miss Dovey thought this was very funny.

"I asked the fellow at the door when I left about it and he said it was a serial and that I was supposed to come back and find out," Adam continued. "That's about the only movie I ever saw."

Miss Dovey explained that "The Terrible Toreador" ran for 16 weeks and that the identity of the villain was not exposed until the sixteenth episode. You were supposed to guess every week, she said. There were various clews, some of them to aid you, but most of them to befuddle you, and in the end you found that the masked man was not the man you thought he was at all.

"Why don't people stay away and only go to see the sixteenth?" asked Adam. It was not unlike the question that had stopped the famous rounders argument. Miss Dovey was trying to explain the situation to Mr. Jinkinsen's satisfaction when in came Mr. Simpson with the beer.

Mrs. Simpson and Miss Dovey sat at one side of the table and wondered if it was true that Will Rogers had five children, and debated whether Douglas Fairbanks was a great actor or whether, after all, it wasn't just his fascinating personality. On the other side, Mr. Simpson abused Ban Johnson and tried to interest Adam in a new way of figuring batting averages.

But for once Adam's mind was not on baseball. His eyes and thoughts wandered toward Blanche Dovey, and now and then he caught words dropping limpidly from those lips trained to say "Lenox 6666" so that it sounded as sweet and tender as a mother's love songs to her babe. He longed to break into the conversation. Finally he overheard the word "Farrar." At last they were speaking his language.

"There was a great third baseman," he said, enthusiastically.

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Simpson.

"Sid Farrar. Used to be with Boston.

"We were speaking of Geraldine Farrar," said Miss Dovey, "the great emotional movie actress.

"That's his daughter," explained Mr. Simpson.

"Well, well," said Adam. "I believe I do remember that he had a daughter that went into the movies. How's she gettin' along?"

AFTER Mr. Jinkinsen, an hour or so later, had left Blanche Dovey on the steps of her apartment house, only a few blocks from the Simpsons he walked rapidly to his room, thinking deeply. He felt that he had not made an entirely favorable impression. He had tried to talk about her hobby and had failed. He decided he must learn something about the movies, even though it cost him the price of his weekly grand-stand seat at the Yankee Stadium! He would even begin guessing who was the Terrible Toreador.

Adam's salary was $20 a week. Of this, $5 invariably went into the savings bank. The remainder was so divided that in two out of every three weeks Adam had enough money to buy a grand-stand seat at the ball game. By virtue of the fact that he worked Thursday and Friday nights, Adam always had Saturday afternoon off.

He finally compromised by deciding to sit in the bleachers, where the seats cost less.

But when next Saturday came around he and George Simpson were there early, in expensive seats back of the Yankee bench. Adam's extra money, and more, had gone into the little booths in front of motion-picture theaters. Adam and Blanche had seen everything there was to see that week. But the savings bank book had been as idle as an outfielder when a pitcher is at bat.

There were two reasons why Adam decided to pass up the cheap seats in the bleachers. One was that no pistachio is happy out there. Yelling at the players from the bleachers gives no reaction; the voice doesn't seem to take hold and one can never be certain that the athletes always hear one's lectures on the "National Game as I Would Suggest It Be Played." The other was that Spike McCann that day was due to pitch his first game in Yankee uniform, and Adam wanted to be right down front.

Spike, as everybody knows, is the greatest pitcher in the American League. Only three days before the Yanks had paid Boston $100,000 for him. The Boston fans let out a howl of rage, while the New Yorkers only smiled that irritating New York smile which says, "Didn't we tell you that money will buy anything we want?"

How We Built Our Home for $4.90

By STEPHEN LEACOCK

I WAS leaning up against the mantelpiece in a lounge suit which I had made out of old ice bags, and Beryl, my wife, was seated at my feet on a low Louis Quinze tabouret which she had made out of a Finnan Haddie fish-box, when the idea of a bungalow came to both of us at the same time.

"It would be just lovely if we could do it!" exclaimed Beryl, coiling herself around my knee.

"Why not!" I replied, lifting her up a little by the ear. "With your exquisite taste"——

"And with your knowledge of material," added Beryl, giving me a tiny pinch on the leg. "Oh, I am sure we could do it! One reads so much in all the magazines about people making summer bungalows and furnishing them for next to nothing. Oh, do let us try, Dogyard!"

We talked over our project all night, and the next morning we sallied forth to try to find a site for our new home. As Beryl (who was brimming over with fun as the result of talking all night) put it, "The first thing is to get the ground."

HERE fortune favored us. We had hardly got to the edge of the town when Beryl suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, look Dogyard, look, there's exactly the site!" It was a piece of waste land on the edge of a gully with a brickyard on one side of it and a gravel pit on the other. It had no trees on it, and it was covered with ragged heaps of tin cans, old newspapers and stones, and a litter of broken lumber.

Beryl's quick eye saw the possibilities of the situation at once. "Oh, Dogyard!" she exclaimed, "isn't it just sweet? We can clear away all the litter and plant a catalpa tree to hide the brickyard and a hedge of copernicus or nux vomica to hide the gravel pit, and some bright flowers to hide the hedge. I wish I had brought some catalpa seed. They grow so quickly."

"We'd better at least wait," I said, "till we have bought the ground."

And here a sudden piece of good fortune awaited us. It so happened that the owner of the lot was on the spot at the time—he was seated on a stone whittling a stick while we were talking, and presented himself to us. After a short discussion he agreed to sell us the ground for $1 in cash and 50 cents on a three-years' mortgage. The deed of sale was written out on the spot and stamped with a two-cent stamp, and the owner of the lot took his departure with every expression of good will. And the magic sense of being owners of our own ground rendered us both jubilant.

THAT evening Beryl, seated on her little stool at my feet, took a pencil and paper and set down triumphantly a statement of the cost of our bungalow up to date. I introduce it here as a help to readers who may hope to follow in our footsteps:

Ground site	$1.50
Stamp for mortgage	.02
Car fare	.10
Total	$1.62

I checked over Beryl's arithmetic twice and found it strictly correct.

Next morning we commenced work in earnest. While Beryl cleared away the cans and litter, I set to work with spade and shovel excavating our cellar and digging out the foundations. And here I must admit that I had no light task. I can only warn those who wish to follow in our footsteps that they must be prepared to face hard work.

Owing perhaps to my inexperience, it took me the whole of the morning to dig out a cellar 40 feet long and 20 feet wide. Beryl, who had meantime cleaned up the lot, stacked the lumber, lifted away the stones and planted 50 yards of hedge, was inclined to be a little impatient. But I reminded her that a contractor working with a gang of men and two or three teams of horses would have taken a whole week to do what I did in one morning.

I ADMITTED that my work was not equal to the best records as related in the weekly home journals, where I have often computed that they move 100,000 cubic feet of earth in one paragraph, but at least I was doing my best. Beryl, whose disappointment never lasts, was all smiles again in a moment, and rewarded me by throwing herself around my neck and giving me a hug.

That afternoon I gathered up all the big stones and built them into walls around the cellar, with partition walls across it, dividing it into rooms and compartments. I leveled the floor and packed it tight with sand and gravel and dug a drain 10 feet deep from the cellar to the gully about 30 feet away.

There being still a good hour or so of daylight, I dug a cistern four feet wide and 20 feet deep. I was looking around for something more to dig by moonlight, but Beryl put her foot down (on my head while I was in the drain) and forbade me to work any more for fear I might be fatigued.

NEXT morning we were able to begin our building in good earnest. On our way we stopped at the 15-cent store for necessary supplies, and bought one hammer, 15 cents; a saw, 15 cents; half a gallon of nails, 15 cents; a crane, 15 cents; a derrick for hoisting, 15 cents, and a needle and thread for sewing on the roof, 15 cents.

As an advice to young builders, I may say that I doubt if we were quite wise in all our purchases. The 15-cent derrick is too light for the work, and the extra expenditure for the heavier kind (the 25-cent crane) would have been justified. The difference in cost is only (approximately) 10 cents, and the efficiency of the big crane is far greater.

On arriving at our ground we were delighted to find that our masonry was well set and the walls firm and solid, while the catalpa trees were well above the ground and growing rapidly. We set to work at once to build in earnest.

WE HAD already decided to utilize for our bungalow the waste material which lay on our lot. I drew Beryl's attention to the fact that if a proper use were made of the material wasted in building there would be no need to buy any material at all. "The elimination of waste," I explained, "by the utilization of all by-products before they have time to go by, is the central principle of modern industrial organization."

But observing that Beryl had ceased to listen to me, I drew on my carpenter's apron which I had made out of a piece of tar paper, and set to work. My first care was to gather up all the loose lumber that lay around our ground site, and saw it up into neatly squared pieces about 20 feet long. Out of these I made the joists, the studding, the partitions, rafters and so on, which formed the frame of the house.

Putting up the house took practically the whole morning. Beryl, who had slipped on a potato bag over her dress, assisted me by holding up the side of the house while I nailed on the top.

By the end of the afternoon we had completed the sides of our house, which we made out of old newspaper soaked in glue and rolled flat. The next day we put on the roof, which was made of tin cans cut open and pounded out flat.

FOR our hardwood floors, mantels, etc., we were fortunate in finding a pile of hardwood on a neighboring lot which had apparently been overlooked, and which we carried over proudly to our bungalow after dark. That same night we carried over jubilantly some rustic furniture which we had found, quite neglected, lying in a nearby cottage, the lock of which, oddly enough, was opened quite easily with the key of Beryl's suit case.

The rest of our furniture—plain tables, dressers, etc.—I was able to make from ordinary pine lumber, which I obtained by knocking down a board fence upon an adjacent lot. In short, the reader is able to picture our bungalow after a week of labor, complete in every respect and only awaiting our occupation on the next day.

Seated that evening in our boarding house, with Beryl coiled around me, I calculated the entire cost of our enterprise, including ground site, lumber, derricks, cranes, glue, string, tin tacks and other materials—as $4.90.

In return for it we had a pretty seven-roomed house, artistic in every respect, with living room, bedrooms, a boudoir, a den, a snuggery, a doggery—in short, the bungalow of which so many young people have dreamed.

SEATED together that evening, Beryl and I were full of plans for the future. We both have a passionate love of animals and, like all country-bred people, a longing for the life of a farm. So we had long since decided to keep poultry. We planned to begin in a small way, and had brought home that evening from the 15-cent store a day-old chicken, such as are now so widely sold. We put him in a basket beside the radiator in a little flannel coat that Beryl had made for him, and we fed him with a warm mash made of breakfast food and gravel. Our printed directions that we got with him told us that a fowl eats two ounces of grain per day and on that should lay five eggs a week. I was easily able to prove to Beryl by a little plain arithmetic that if we fed this fellow 4 ounces a day he would lay 10 eggs in a week, or at 8 ounces per day he would lay 20 eggs in a week.

In short, there was no end to our rosy dreams. In our fancy we saw ourselves in our bungalow, surrounded by hens, bees, cows and dogs, with hogs and goats nestling against our feet. Unfortunately, our dreams were destined to be shattered.

UP TO this point our experience with building our bungalow had followed along after all the best models, and had even eclipsed them. But from now on we met a series of disasters of which we had had no warning. It is a pity that I cannot leave our story now.

On arriving at our bungalow next day we found notices posted up forbidding all trespassers, and two sour-looking men in possession. We learned that our title to the ground was worthless, as the man from whom we had bought it had been apparently a mere passer-by. It appeared also that a neighboring contractor was making serious difficulties about our use of his material. It was divulged further that we had been mistaken in thinking that we had taken our rustic furniture from an empty cottage. There were people living in it, but they happened to be asleep when Beryl moved the furniture.

As for our hen—there is no doubt that keeping fowls is enormously profitable. It must be so, when one considers the millions of eggs consumed every day. But it demands an unremitting attention and above all—memory. If you own a hen you must never forget it—you must keep on saying to yourself: "How is my hen?" This was our trouble. Beryl and I were so preoccupied with our accumulated disaster that we left our one-day-old chick behind the radiator and never thought of him for three weeks. He was then gone. We prefer to think that he flew away.

Take 'im Out!

New York had been talking about little but Spike McCann ever since the deal was made, and, of course, the whole town turned out to see him pitch his first game for his new club.

Adam was a Yankee nut, which is the worst kind this side of Brooklyn. When the Giants begin losing, their supporters throw epithets and things at the umpires and the visiting players. When the Yanks are being beaten their friends turn upon them with jeers.

Adam had all the attributes that go with swerving loyalty to the Yankees. It was Adam who was among the first to rise angrily in his seat and shout: "TAKE 'IM OUT, TH' RUMMY; TAKE 'IM OUT!" when the visiting team began to hit the Yankee box man.

The moment a pitcher lost control of his curve ball, Adam knew it, and he could tell instinctively when a fast one was going down the groove. Adam knew baseball. And he always said in a loud, raucous voice, what he thought—the more bitter the thoughts, the louder the voice. It's the custom on the diamond and off.

On this day there was no need for Adam to give advice. Spike McCann held the Washingtons to four hits and shut them out.

ADAM and Blanche were invited to Sunday dinner by the Simpsons the next day. The men talked of little but Spike McCann.

"He's probably a tough that runs a saloon," observed Mrs. Simpson, and Miss Dovey couldn't for the life of her see why men made heroes out of a pack of ruffians.

Mr. Simpson guessed they were about as good as movie actors and the rumpus finally ended when Mr. Jinkinsen invited them all to go to see a movie.

They had just left the subway, on their way home, Adam and George Simpson were walking a few steps ahead, talking baseball.

Suddenly they heard a man's voice behind them.

"Why, Blanche Dovey! And Lily! How are you, anyway?"

"Fred!" cried the girls, and the men turned around to see a tall young chap shaking the hands of both girls at once. To Adam and George, "Fred" seemed strangely familiar, both in face and actions.

"I want you to meet my husband. George, this is Fred McCann, a Waco boy that went to school with us," said Lily Simpson. "And Mr. Jinkinsen, Mr. McCann."

Mr. McCann greeted the men cordially and turned back to the girls.

Adam, pop-eyed, looked at Simpson.

"Spike McCann!" Adam gasped.

"I knew he came from Waco, but I never thought of Lily"——

"I heard you both were in New York," Mr. McCann was saying to the young women, "but I didn't know where. Gee! I'm glad to see you. It's been years"——

"How are things with you, Fred?" Blanche interrupted.

"Great!"

"What are you doing?" inquired Mrs. Simpson. "Will you be in New York long?"

Adam looked at Simpson and both felt queer. Spike McCann's picture had been in almost every paper in the land at least once a week for the last three years! What was he doing?

"Still in the hardware business?" Blanche wanted to know. "The last I heard of you, you were clerking for the Waco Implement Co."

Simpson tried to edge in to break up the conversation. Adam suggested weakly that they'd all better be getting along, as it was growing late.

"Quit hardware," Spike grinned. "Playing a little baseball now."

"Lil-y," put in George, mortified. "This is"——

"That's so," exclaimed Blanche. "I remember you were pretty good on the high-school team. You were the batter, or something, weren't you?"

"Pitcher," Spike laughed.

"But what business are you in?" Mrs. Simpson persisted.

"Baseball business. I'm a pitcher. I'm the fellow that throws the ball up for the batters to hit. I've been rather successful in putting them where they want them."

"Isn't that splendid!" exulted Blanche vaguely.

"You're a professional player?" said Mrs. Simpson. "Well, well! You'll be glad to know George and Mr. Jinkinsen. They're baseball fans. You three could have a great time together."

Never in their lives had George and Mr. Jinkinsen seen women make such fools of themselves.

"Mr. McCann," declared George loudly, "is the greatest pitcher in the business. "He"——

"Well, well!" said Mrs. Simpson. "That's fine. What do you hear from Waco?"

SPIKE was having a lot of fun. He was genuinely glad to meet friends from his home town and he didn't give a hoot whether they knew anything about his baseball record or not.

"Did you know that Nellie McIntosh married Henry Master, at last?" asked Blanche eagerly.

"After all these years!" Spike cried. "No! And did you hear about the big fire? And did you know they are going to build a new opera house?"

"Hadn't heard a word about it," said Mrs. Simpson. "But I did hear that the Dowlings aren't happy and that everybody's expecting Mrs. Dowling to get a divorce, though goodness knows I don't think Mr. Dowling's to blame. Look at the way that woman always was going up to Dallas to theaters and things! And the Rowans had twins!"

"You don't tell me!" said Spike, enthusiastically.

Adam and George stood to one side, swallowing hard.

"I think we'd better be getting on," said Adam plaintively to the girls.

Mr. Simpson thought so, too.

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Simpson. "Come right along with us, Fred. Come up to supper. We live only a couple of blocks down the street."

"Yes, do," urged Blanche. "We can have a fine time talking over all the news from home."

Adam's heart sank. What chance did he stand with Miss Dovey now?

"I can't," he heard Spike McCann saying. "But we'll be glad to come over soon. We've just moved into an apartment around the corner and I'm busy getting things straightened out."

"We?" said Blanche. "Are you married, Fred?"

"Sure."

Adam pulled down his cuffs and felt his tie.

"I've been married three years. You knew Mary Marvin, didn't you?"

"Mary Marvin?" said Blanche thoughtfully.

"Not that pretty little Marvin girl that was in the eighth grade?" asked Mrs. Simpson.

"Same one," said Spike, proudly.

"My!" sighed Mrs. Simpson, "how time does fly. Can't you both come over to dinner tomorrow night at 7 o'clock? We live at the Palm Beach Apartment. You can almost see it from here. It's right behind that tall apartment with the cigarette ad on it."

Spike said he'd be tickled to death.

"I'm mighty glad I saw you folks," he said. "We'll be there. Good-by, Lily. Good-by, Blanche. Good-by," he nodded to the likeness of stone images that once had been Messrs. Jinkinsen and Simpson.

"HE'S one of the finest fellows you ever would want to meet."

It was Mr. Jinkinsen speaking. Around him were gathered those of Mr. Kopplebaum's young men who were not actively engaged in smoothing down wry collars and telling customers that the coat sure hung nobby.

"Who's that and what of it!".

Mr. Jinkinsen turned pale. It was Mr. Kopplebaum himself. The other clerks, who knew that the rules forbade these fanning bees, stepped hastily away.

"Er, how do you do, Mr. Kopplebaum?" stammered Adam. "I was just telling about meeting Spike McCann."

"Huh," grunted Mr. Kopplebaum. "Friend of yours?"

"I just met him, Mr. Kopplebaum."

"Huh!"

Evidently Mr. Kopplebaum had never heard of Spike McCann.

"He's a baseball pitcher," Adam didn't know why he had the courage to speak to Mr. Kopplebaum, who had never said a word to him, except on business. Probably he was frightened, caught gossiping in working hours, and was just confessing all. "He's a base-

New Goitre Remedy

Great interest attaches to reports of a remarkable method for treating goitre recently demonstrated at the W. T. B. Laboratory, 919 Minty Block, Battle Creek, Mich. It is used by the patient herself in her own home and it is said that the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost in a day. They gradually get smaller until in three or four weeks they are often gone entirely. The treatment is perfectly safe for anyone to use and many believe it will prove the long-sought specific for all goitres. A little book issued by the laboratory explains the method fully and will be mailed free for the asking to anyone interested.

Probably he was frightened, caught gossiping in working hours, and was just confessing all. "He's a baseball pitcher," Adam repeated. Mr. Kopplebaum didn't seem to understand. "He throws baseball—you know. Didn't you ever see a baseball game?"

"Me! See a baseball game!" Mr. Applebaum exclaimed. "Let me tell you, my son is a catcher in the Three-Eye League. You know Spike McCann? I suppose you're going to eat dinner with him next week?"

"No, sir," said Adam humbly, still bewildered. "This week."

"Huh! You know what, young man? You better get to work." He smiled. Mr. Kopplebaum could be sarcastic when he chose. "Better get to work. So you're going to take dinner with Spike McCann? Don't leave too early. I want you to stay to measure King George. He's coming in to buy a suit this afternoon."

"Yes, sir," said Adam. "I'll try to serve him well."

"Aghh!" said Mr. Kopplebaum.

EVERY player likes to talk baseball and in Adam Spike McCann found a young man of no little learning upon the subject of the nation's pastime. Mrs. McCann and the girls quickly renewed an old acquaintance, the McCanns having no other friends in New York, and within two weeks the six were traveling in a bunch. And four soon were plotting to marry off the other two. It's a way young couples have.

The vote stood five to one in favor of it. Blanche was taking only a mild interest in Mr. Jinkinsen, but propinquity, Spike had heard, is the spice of life, and they all thought that if they kept Adam and Blanche together enough there'd be a wedding soon.

Spike was the first to see that the system was all wrong. The more Adam saw of Blanche the more he talked about the movies and he never seemed to get things right.

Spike took Adam aside one day.

"You want Blanche, don't you?" he said.

Adam wondered how in the world Spike knew, for Adam had never told a soul.

"Your ideas are wrong," advised Spike. "Don't try to play her game. Make her play yours. Get her interested in baseball."

"Fat chance," said Adam. "Look how it is with her whenever your wife or Mrs. Simpson try to get her to go to a game. Blanche has never seen one and never will, and until she gets a look at one she won't know what it's all about. And, anyway, she works every afternoon."

"Next Sunday," said Spike, "the Giants and Yanks are going to play a game for charity and they're going to take some moving pictures out there. It's a pipe. She'll go to see that."

That was how it happened that Blanche and Adam, the Simpsons and Mrs. McCann went in a body to the Polo Grounds the next Sunday. There were motion pictures taken—part of a regular photo drama—before the game started, and Blanche was glad she had come. Spike was in uniform, but he did not pitch. Blanche learned from Mrs. McCann and Adam the rudiments of the game and showed great interest. By the sixth inning Blanche was asking Adam questions. In the eighth she was heard to exclaim:

"Oh, it must be WONDERFUL to know so much about baseball!"

She took especial interest in Babe Ruth. Babe was a favorite of Adam's and Blanche soon heard all about him.

"Yes, but why do they call him Ruth?"

"It's the name he was born with," Adam explained.

"I asked you a serious question," Blanche pouted. "Now you're trying to make fun of me. Nobody was ever born with a name like that."

"Leave it to Mrs. McCann," said Adam.

Mrs. McCann said it was true.

"Isn't it fascinating?" Blanche exulted. "Now you must teach me the names, so I can remember them."

Up to that point in the game Hoyt had been doing well in spite of bad support and the Yanks were in the lead. There is no club the Yankee fans would rather see beaten than the Giants, and Adam was content. Just at that moment, however, with the score close, Bentley sent a sharp hit to right field which Ruth first fumbled, then threw away. When the ball was recovered, Bentley was on third.

Adam leaped to his feet, forgetting Blanche.

"Ya big boob!" he cried. "Why don't you get a basket?"

"What's the matter?" exclaimed Blanche, standing up beside him.

"Ruth, the mutt! The rottenest player in the League!"

Now Blanche had just got far enough into baseball to take a great interest in Babe Ruth. She felt that one of her friends was being abused.

"Mister Jink-insen!" said Blanche, sharply. "Did you hear him, Mrs. McCann?"

"It's all in the game," Mrs. McCann smiled.

Adam sat down, crushed, and Blanche turned to Mrs. McCann.

"But for a gentleman to use such language toward a performer! You said, Mr. Jinkinsen, that this was as orderly a place as a movie theater. You said there were no rowdies at baseball games. But it seems to me"——

"There, there," Mrs. McCann said, and Adam hung his head and chewed his gum sorrowfully.

THE next day the Yankees went on the road and Adam had to fight his battle without the aid of Spike, whose advice, Adam admitted, was of great value. All would have been well if Adam had not been carried away by his enthusiasm.

Spike had left Adam a pass for two to the Giants' game on the next Saturday. Simpson didn't like the Giants and didn't want to go, and on Friday night at the store Adam was about to ask one of the other clerks to go to the game with him—when in came Mr. Kopplebaum!

"How's your friend Spike McCann?" scoffed Mr. Kopplebaum.

It was the first time Mr. Kopplebaum had spoken to Adam since that unfortunate occurrence.

"He's out of town now," replied Adam.

"Huh! You're a good liar."

"You mean—you don't believe I know Spike?"

"Sure I don't."

Adam was nonplussed.

"Why, why," he sputtered. He thought of the pass. "Look, Mr. Kopplebaum, here's a pass he gave me. See, it's made out to him. For two to the Polo Grounds tomorrow. He's the only man on the Yankee Club that gets passes for his friends to Giant games."

Mr. Kopplebaum was decidedly impressed. He looked at the pass carefully. It was the first one he had ever seen. Like most persons he had great respect for a free ticket.

"Well! Well!" he said, apologetical-

New Goitre Remedy

Great interest attaches to reports of a remarkable method for treating goitre recently demonstrated at the W. T. B. Laboratory, 919 Minty Block, Battle Creek, Mich. It is used by the patient herself in her own home and it is said that the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost in a day. They gradually get smaller until in three or four weeks they are often gone entirely. The treatment is perfectly safe for anyone to use and many believe it will prove the long-sought specific for all goitres. A little book issued by the laboratory explains the method fully and will be mailed free for the asking to anyone interested.

ly. "You really know him, then?"

Mr. Kopplebaum listened with great interest to Adam's story of the meeting with Spike.

"I got an idea," said Kopplebaum, drawing out two cigars, one of which he handed to Adam. "You think you could get Spike McCann to have his picture taken in a Kopplebaum suit?"

"I don't know," said Adam doubtfully. "You want to use it in ads?"

"Yes. If you can fix it there's a hundred dollars in it for you and up to five hundred for him."

"Gee whiz! I'll see him as soon as he comes back."

"Er-um," Mr. Kopplebaum glanced at the pass that Adam still held, "if I see you at the game tomorrow I'll talk to you more about it."

"Would you go with me? This pass is for two."

"I might," Mr. Kopplebaum admitted. "I might at that."

AFTER the game Adam floated home. The Giants had played Boston. Early in the contest, almost before McGraw began his regular duel with the umpires, Mr. Kopplebaum had begun to be impressed with Adam's genius. Every question in baseball that ever had puzzled Mr. Kopplebaum was answered by Adam. He even made clear the difference between a hit and an error, something baseball players say, even the official scorers don't know.

While the battle was still young Adam had learned that Mr. Kopplebaum's son, the Three-Eye League catcher, was none other than Jim "Kelly," a promising youngster that had been sold to the Phillies for fall delivery. Adam knew more about Kelly than father Kopplebaum did himself, and it was only a moment later that Mr. Kopplebaum asked Adam what he was getting and said it was too little; to tell the cashier on Monday that Mr. Kopplebaum said to make it thirty.

There is a certain air about a $30-a-week man that is not to be found in one who receives only twenty. The cashier was scandalized, and entered the raise in salary and paid it with a reluctance characteristic of cashiers; but Mr. Kopplebaum's promise was kept and at the end of the week Mr. Jinkinsen had acquired a feeling of self-confidence found only in capitalists, .300 hitters and left-handed pitchers.

He felt now as if he were a bit of a cave man, with power to swoop down upon Blanche Dovey and carry her away. That is, he did when she wasn't around.

He began a whirlwind campaign. He took her to theaters, to movie shows, to restaurants. He found his ability to fashion a merry quip was increasing; he could order from a waiter without cringing, and he was beginning not to fear the hat-check boys. Wealth is a great aid to Cupid.

It was not long until Spike returned, triumphant. He had won seven straight games and New York was preparing to welcome him at the Stadium on Saturday, when he was to meet his former team mates, the Red Sox. A player's biggest moment comes when he performs successfully against a club that has let him go. And the Sox would be as happy as Charley Ebbets on a holiday, if they could break Spike McCann's string of victories.

ADAM took Blanche over to see the McCanns the first night Spike was home. Spike drew Adam aside.

"How you coming with Blanche?" he said.

"I honestly don't know," Adam admitted. "But I'm sort of getting up nerve enough to find out."

Then he told Spike of the raise in salary and of the Kopplebaum proposition.

"I never have done anything like that," said Spike, "and I don't want to. But I'll tell you what I'll do. I'd like to help you, and the day you marry Blanche I'll let you photograph me in a Kopplebaum Kollege suit, even if it makes me look as bad as it sounds."

Mrs. McCann and Blanche had drifted into baseball talk and when the men came in Mrs. McCann had almost made Blanche see the importance of Spike's record. Blanche admitted that she thought she would like to see Spike pitch a baseball game, and before she knew it she had promised to get a girl to take her place at the Asterbilt and agreed to go with Adam on Saturday. Spike, of course, furnished the passes.

This was Spike's big day. Whoever it is that gives the presents to ball players had for Spike a loving cup and a traveling bag. The other players stood in a semi-circle around the plate with their caps off so the photographers could get good likenesses. Everybody but Spike, for whom the affair was held, thought it was great.

Adam and Blanche, over toward the first base, applauded loudly, and the game began.

They were getting along splendidly, the Yankees and Adam, when the eighth inning opened. Blanche and Adam were the first to cheer Spike's every success, and Adam took care to speak now and then in a loud voice so that everybody in the vicinity would know that he was a friend of Spike McCann's. He thought he was impressing the populace, but he wasn't. Nobody believed him.

The Yanks led by three runs, and the Red Sox seemed hopelessly behind. Collins came to bat and singled over second. Flagstead forced him and was out trying to steal second. Two down and everything looked serene. But Burns walked. So did Harris.

Adam moved uneasily in his seat. "He's losing control of his curve," he muttered.

"What do you mean?" Blanche asked.

"He can't throw 'em the way he could a minute ago. Gee whiz!"

Shanks had doubled to center, scoring two runs.

"Awful! Awful!" Adam cried.

"Does that make Fred lose?" Blanche asked.

"If that man on second gets in, the score's tied. Don't let him hit it, Spike. Don't let him hit it."

Spike didn't. He threw four balls. It was one of those unaccountable streaks of wildness that strike the best of them.

"The winning run on first, the tying run on second. He's blown. Why does Huggins leave him in? Don't let him hit it, Spike!"

Blanche, clenching her fists, took up the plea.

"Don't hit it! Don't hit it!" she muttered.

"Ow!" howled Adam. McMillan had singled and the score was tied. "He's got nothing left. He's through!"

"Mr. McCann is supposed to make them miss the ball, isn't he?"

"That's what they pay him for."

"Can't they do something to keep the batter from hitting it?"

Adam gave no answer. Picinich was at the plate. Huggins had made no move to relieve Spike, although three Yankee pitchers were furiously warming up out in right field. The Yankee fans were shouting incoherently. The Red Sox players on the coaching lines were shrieking taunts at the Yankee pitcher. In the press box Col. Ruppert sat forward on the edge of his chair and wondered who it was told him that running the Yanks would give him a fine rest.

Spike laid one over the plate and Picinich set himself and let fly. There was a crack of a bat, a moment of silence, a moment of gasping and a shriek of joy. It was a long drive to left, foul by a foot.

"Picinich's gettin' just the stuff he wants," snapped Adam. "Why don't Huggins, for the love of Mike, take"—

"Picinich who?" inquired Blanche.

"The batter. Gosh!"

Another one was to Picinich's liking. Again it was foul, a nasty drive just outside of third.

Adam leaped to his feet.

"TAKE 'IM OUT!" he howled. "TAKE 'IM OUT!"

Thirty thousand Yankee fans had been waiting for that suggestion. They had found a leader.

"Take 'im out!" Adam, red-faced, demanded, and 30,000 voices took it up

Save the Drunkard

Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

My man is very good to me,
So loyal, kind and true,
His never comes home really drunk,
As other husbands do.
But sometimes when he's "got too much"
I wish that I were dead;
For there's no sunshine in my heart
When moonshine's in his head.

Some folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool,
To me there's naught but aching heart
And pity for Satan's tool.
And, when he's had just "one too many"
I fear that we must part;
For when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought,
But now I fear 'tis wilting fast
And love must come to naught.
I pray before it is too late,
He'll think how oft I've said,
"There's no sunshine in my heart, dear,
When there's moonshine in your head."

* * * * * * *

I read the book, "The National Cure"
Sent me by Dr. Haines;
And I used the "Golden Treatment"
To break the galling chains.
The splendid manhood underneath
Is freed from Satan's snare;
Since there's no moonshine in his head,
Our hearts have sunshine there.

I gave the powder secretly,
He never even knew;
Oh, woman, do the same today.
The act you cannot rue.
Our lives are very different,
Since that first ad I read;
In our hearts are floods of sunshine,
And no moonshine in his head.

On the Rim of the

MEANWHILE Khattia, at the igloo, had stopped her work to wait. Beneath the robes of the snow bed she lay and sobbed and shivered. Visions of what might have been passed through her mind. Within her hope there blossomed fancies of what yet might be. But in her heart was fear.

Hours passed and intense anxiety had made her bold. From without she heard the joyous barking of the dog team. Which one had come back?

She crawled out through the tunnel. There were the dogs and the load of meat. But the dogs had come alone.

Fear and love urged her to follow back their trail. She did not think of the biting cold as she ran. She did not notice the aurora save as the red and orange lights, dissolving into shapes of pink and green as they flamed up to the corona overhead, added to the horror of the night. She did not see the gibbous moon which, through the auroral haze, cast pale distorted shadows on the snow.

Then through a snow swirl she saw a figure stumbling forward through the mystery of night.

It was Ikalukpiak . . . alone.

SHE ran to meet him, holding out her arms. But the slayer heeded not and fell, half frantic, at her feet, clutching at her as though she alone could heal his hurt and bring to him forgiveness.

"I have killed him. I have killed him," he cried.

She lifted him up and the two went back to the igloo, unharnessing the dogs and taking in their cache of meat.

Until the spring they lived there with their secret.

When the summer danced in flowery garments up to the Arctic's shore they headed south, keeping to themselves until at Bloody Falls they met some other tribesmen.

"Havougach had his gun," Ikalukpiak told the headman. "One day he kill me sure. He tell me so. I have but knife. He point his gun at me. Then he afraid and drop his gun.

"Me? I sick. I know Havougach kill me today. So I shoot him, dead."

"Once," the old man answered, "a man could kill for a woman and go his way, taking the woman with him. But the white man's law is with us now, and that law is that he who kills must pay.

"GO BACK," he continued, to "Tree River, to the white man's post. Tell him what you tell me. He may kill you. But he may understand. Who knows?"

To the Royal Mounted Trooper at Tree River Ikalukpiak told his story. "If it be white man's law you kill me, too," he said.

The youth was taken to Herschel Island, there to wait a year before he came to trial. And Khattia went as witness. Then last summer from Edmonton, 1200 miles away, came a Judge from the Alberta courts. The deck of the Hudson Bay steamboat was draped with flags to be a courtroom. ...d thundered; "Take 'im out!"

The avalanche of imprecation that Adam had started rolled over him and he suddenly remembered. Spike McCann, out there, was his best friend. And beside him was Blanche! He had made another exhibition of himself! He rallied quickly.

Blanche was on her feet beside him. Surrounded, they were, by fanatical men and women shrieking for the quick discomfiture of the man who a moment before had been their hero. Blanche seized his hand. She was staring wildly at the diamond.

"Take 'im out!" the 30,000 were yelling.

"Take 'im out!" screamed Blanche. Adam was thrilled, all over. He held tight to her hand and side by side they stood and shouted as one. "Take 'im out! Take 'im out!"

Spike McCann calmly caught the ball thrown back by the catcher. There were two strikes and no balls on Picinich. McCann waited for his signal, took his place in the box, glanced at the base runners on first and third.

"Take 'im out!" yelled Adam and Blanche hoarsely.

Spike threw. Picinich's bat remained on his shoulder as he watched the ball pass. It cut the corner of the plate.

"Yer out!" said the umpire; and the inning was over.

"The nerve of him!" said Adam, in tones of mighty admiration. "Put it over the plate, on two and nothin'! There's a pitcher that is a pitcher. Good boy, Spike, 'At's the stuff!"

And the 30,000 who had been demanding the scalp of Spike McCann beat their hands and raised what voices they had left, in paying tribute to the brave man.

ON THE next Monday Adam and Blanche were married. Spike was in charge of the party, carrying them in his car for the license and to the church.

The ceremony ended, amid laughing and crying. Spike finally got close enough to kiss the bride and congratulate the bridegroom.

"Fred," said Blanche, gratefully, as she held Adam's hand, "you are responsible, indirectly. It was out at the ball game Saturday that I knew Adam was all right, that he and I thought alike, that he had ideas and that he wasn't as crazy a baseball fan as he seemed to be."

"How was that?" Spike smiled.

"It was when the Bostons began making runs. You were in trouble. They needed only one run to win, Adam said. You couldn't seem to make them miss. Remember?"

"Do I?" laughed Spike.

Adam tried unsuccessfully to pull Blanche away.

"Well, nobody out of the great big crowd seemed to know what to do to stop them. That big man came up and hit the ball twice, and it was foul. It looked as if he was going to knock it hard. Then Adam thought of the way to save you!"

"Adam did!" said Spike in surprise.

"No," said Adam quickly. "She misunderstood. It"——

"I did not misunderstand," asserted Blanche, looking upon her new husband, fixing her eyes proudly upon the head that held such a noble brain.

"Well?" said Spike.

"Adam thought of a way to save you. It was to take out the batter! Adam yelled, 'Take 'im out!' and everybody else yelled it—I yelled, too, and sure enough, the umpire, who hadn't thought of it until Adam suggested it, took him out, and you won the game!!"

There was a sparkle in Spike's eyes. Adam hung his head, blushing in shame.

"Thanks, Ad," smiled Spike. "You're all right." And he slapped Adam on the shoulder.

For months afterward, Mrs. Adam Jinkinsen was not entirely cordial to Fred McCann and George Simpson. It never was explained to her complete satisfaction why they left the church in such a hurry and laughed so uproariously when they got outside.

On the Rim of the World Two Men Fought for a Woman

MEANWHILE Khattia, at the igloo, had stopped her work to wait. Beneath the robes of the snow bed she lay and sobbed and shivered. Visions of what might have been passed through her mind. Within her hope there blossomed fancies of what yet might be. But in her heart was fear.

Hours passed and intense anxiety had made her bold. From without she heard the joyous barking of the dog team. Which one had come back?

She crawled out through the tunnel. There were the dogs and the load of meat. But the dogs had come alone.

Fear and love urged her to follow back their trail. She did not think of the biting cold as she ran. She did not notice the aurora save as the red and orange lights, dissolving into shapes of pink and green as they flamed up to the corona overhead, added to the horror of the night. She did not see the gibbous moon which, through the auroral haze, cast pale distorted shadows on the snow.

Then through a snow swirl she saw a figure stumbling forward through the mystery of night.

It was Ikalukpiak . . . alone.

SHE ran to meet him, holding out her arms. But the slayer heeded not and fell, half frantic, at her feet, clutching at her as though she alone could heal his hurt and bring to him forgiveness.

"I have killed him. I have killed him," he cried.

She lifted him up and the two went back to the igloo, unharnessing the dogs and taking in their cache of meat. Until the spring they lived there with their secret.

When the summer danced in flowery garments up to the Arctic's shore they headed south, keeping to themselves until at Bloody Falls they met some other tribesmen.

"Havougach had his gun," Ikalukpiak told the headman. "One day he will be sure. He tell me so. I have but haste. He point his gun at me. Then he afraid and drop his gun.

"Me? I sick. I know Havougach kill me today. So I shoot him, dead."

"Once," the old man answered, "a man could kill for a woman and go his way, taking the woman with him. But the white man's law is with us now, and that law is that he who kills must pay.

"GO BACK," he continued, to "Tree River, to the white man's post. Tell him what you tell me. He may kill you. But he may understand. Who knows?"

To the Royal Mounted Trooper at Tree River Ikalukpiak told his story. "If it be white man's law you kill me, too," he said.

The youth was taken to Herschel Island, there to wait a year before he came to trial. And Khattia went as witness. Then last summer from Edmonton, 1200 miles away, came a Judge from the Alberta courts. The deck of the Hudson Bay steamboat was draped with flags to be a courtroom. Trappers and traders and steamboat men were the jury. They found Ikalukpiak guilty of manslaughter. He was sentenced to four years in Stony Mountain Prison, 2000 miles distant.

Khattia told him she would wait, and at Herschel Island she waited.

A year passed. The Dominion Government has pardoned Ikalukpiak. He has been ordered returned to his tribe by a trooper of the Mounted. At Herschel Island he will marry Khattia in the white man's way and the trooper will take the two back to Lone Tree Station to join their tribe on Coronation Gulf. Ikalukpiak is to be a living sermon on the white man's law: "Thou shalt not kill."

IN THE wake of the ice racing with the spring flood down the Mackenzie River to the polar sea, follows a tiny stern-wheel steamer which noses a heavy-laden scow through the turbulent white water, for June has come and the Hudson Bay Company has started supplies to Herschel Island, its northernmost post at the top of the world.

From the vessel's pilot house keen eyes search the river. From her decks traders and trappers look across to shore bluffs blue with forests of stunted spruce and see betimes a moose, a caribou. Moving among those rough-dressed men is a silent man, with the belt and boots and spurs, with the wide sombrero and the olive drab of the Royal Canadian Mounted. He might be made of bronze, so weathered is his skin, so firm is his determined purpose. He is the trooper bound for Lone Tree Station, where the Coppermine River empties into Coronation Gulf.

Following his footsteps about the deck, as a faithful dog might follow, is Ikalukpiak, youthful, tall, lance-thin, with coarse, straight hair and narrow almond eyes, flat nose and full thick lips. He has felt the weight of the White Man's law. He has tasted of the White Man's mercy.

Straining, pushing, the little boat fights to keep her course in that swift current, as she noses through the channel's dangerous ways. Black smoke rises from her stack and from her whistle jets a plume of steam. . . .

Not less anxious than the pilot's eyes are the eyes that wait on Herschel Island for his coming. Letters arrive with the Hudson Bay's boat, and news from the far-away world. There will be white man's food for the Eskimo, who, civilized according to their fashion, think it a shame to live as they lived once. There will be petrol for the whaling fleet of the Herschel Islanders if the scow comes safely through her tortuous passage. There will be wrist watches and French-heeled shoes for the Eskimo belles, and knives, silk shirts and guns for the beaux of the Eskimo.

Khattia waits. But not for things like those. To her the world is on that boat. Ikalukpiak is there.

—but a Corn was to blame

A corn isn't just a local pain. The tiny nerves beneath it are on the "main trunk line," linked with all the nerve centers of the system. . . . Doctors know that a tiny lump of callus on the toe — no bigger than a match-head — may make one feel mean all over. Indigestion, a headache, depressed spirits generally, are often corollaries. . . . And Blue-jay makes a corn so needless. A cushiony pad — as cool as velvet — fits over the corn, stopping the pain in five seconds. You wear this two days in blissful comfort. When you take it off, the corn retires too, gently uprooted by the little brown disc of magic medication within the pad. . . . So dainty, so neat, so quick and sure. "IN THE WINTER of 1917 the majority of our regiment (165th, 42nd Div.) contracted a severe dysentery. I carried the after effects back into civil life. Almost constant constipation and indigestion, heart palpitation, and an indescribable run-down condition. My wife heard of the use of Fleischmann's Yeast. I took two cakes a day. Now my heart no longer bothers me, constipation and indigestion have disappeared, and I enjoy my meals."

Harold I. Betty, Evanston, Ill.

"SOME FEW YEARS AGO I ate Yeast for bacterial infections, boils and carbuncles. Within three weeks my infections disappeared and I have never been troubled since. But I have an especial message to mothers. Four children were born to me in four years, and they are perfect babies and I am a good specimen of a healthy mother—thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast. Not only did it settle my stomach, when other things failed, but also toned up my system and gave me an appetite, which is most essential in motherhood."

(Mrs. Theodosia Hessian, R. N., Brooklyn, N. Y.)

Read their Tributes to this Famous Food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) night and morning. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. 781, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"ON MY RETURN to civilian life, after service in the Army, I noticed a tendency towards constipation. During the next four years it grew progressively worse in spite of the use of every known laxative and cathartic. Nothing was of any avail. I was suffering from auto-intoxication and digestive and liver sluggishness. Then I began to use Fleischmann's Yeast daily, half a cake spread on a cracker morning and evening. The toxic symptoms disappeared. At the present writing I enjoy excellent health and want to go on record as unqualifiedly endorsing the use of Fleischmann's Yeast in such obstinate cases as mine."

(Frank A. Mack, M. D., Boston, Mass.)

THIS REMARKABLE FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation, skin troubles, stomach disorders.

There are many delicious ways of eating yeast—dissolved in water, fruit juices or milk, spread on crackers, or eaten plain.

"WITH BIG UGLY BLOTCHES on my face, lusterless eyes, I was indeed a sorry sight. Disregarding my skepticism, I began to take Fleischmann's Yeast. . . . Not until three weeks had passed did I notice a perceptible change. Then my sluggish bowels manifested activity and my skin became clear and pink. In six months, having taken yeast three times a day, I was firm of step, clear of eye—my former dynamic self."

(Miss Minnie Edith Dawson, Baltimore, Md.)

The Story of a FAT WOMAN Who LOST 50 POUNDS—and WON—Success, Beauty, Love and Wealth

Dear Fat Girls:

This is not a fairy story although it sounds like one, but it is a true up-to-date record of a miracle of science. Once upon a time I was fat—very fat at least 50 pounds too much, made me look old and unattractive—No friends for me—no love—no parties—no smart clothes! Day after day only brought on heartaches and disappointments, also I suffered with headaches, pains in my back and limbs, puffing—and a constant dreadful tired feeling—Most of my time I spent home rather than appear ridiculous in clothes that never could fit me and feel that people looked at me with pitiful glances—I certainly know what it is to have been a wall flower! Well girls, today all that is changed—thanks to SAN-GRI-NA, the discovery of a French physician. I transformed my self into a different woman—now I weigh 130 pounds. I am well—healthy—don't know what headaches and puffing means—I look ten years younger and can go into any shop and buy a smart ready made model and look the part—no slenderous exercises—no diets—no painful garments—

This remarkable French discovery called SAN-GRI-NA did what I consider a miracle—because before I found out about it nothing I had tried ever helped me to reduce—and with SAN-GRI-NA here I am, healthy, slender, young looking and a success—more parties than I care to go to—more friends than I can take care of—All that I owe to SAN-GRI-NA—If you are too fat—if it is 10 pounds or 100 pounds you can be slender—the same chance I had is yours now—Go today to the nearest drug store, buy a package of SAN-GRI-NA be absolutely positive that you are getting SAN-GRI-NA and start using it as per directions—It will not be many weeks before you too extoll "The story of a fat woman who lost excess fat and gained success, health and beauty"—and who knows, may be love and wealth as well!

Yours sincerely,
A former fat woman now slender

POLICE JUDGES' PAY HELD UP TILL THEY PAY TAXES

City Has Judgments for $28.77 Against Rosecan, Beck Being Sued by Collector for $61.15.

EACH ALSO ON THE DELINQUENT LIST

Rosecan Says He Recently Paid Judgments and Will Settle Delinquent Bills at Once.

The salaries of both the Judges of the City Police Courts, Harry P. Rosecan and Clyde C. Beck, will be held up by the City Treasurer, under orders issued today by Comptroller Nolte, until they settle tax bills in which they are now delinquent.

The taxes due from Judge Rosecan, with interest and costs, are $75.44, of which the City Collector has obtained judgments for $28.77. The amount due from Judge Beck is $116.44, and suits of the collector for $61.15 of this amount are now pending.

Authority for the Action.

The Comptroller, in directing the Treasurer to defer payment of the salaries of the two Police Judges, acted on the provisions of section 191 of the revised code of city ordinances. This section states:

The Comptroller shall not draw a warrant on the Treasurer in favor of any person who is known to the Comptroller to be indebted to the city, except for the balance which may appear to be due to such person over and above the debt due the city, nor in favor of any officer who is known to the Comptroller to be in arrears or default to the city. And if any report in writing of such indebtedness shall have come to the Comptroller, he shall be considered as having knowledge of the facts.

The city tax records, on which the Comptroller based his action, show that Judge Rosecan left unpaid his personal property taxes of $5.65 in 1916 and $6.99 in 1917, and that judgments were obtained by the Collector, with a levy of $15.50 costs and 62 cents attorney fee. Rosecan's personal property taxes for 1921-24, all in arrears, are for the successive years, $7, $5.31, $11.70 and $16.93.

Records as to Judge Beck.

The records show that Judge Beck is being sued for $31.28 personal property taxes for 1921, $31.26, and 1922, $29.87, and that he is in arrears for 1923, $29.26, and 1924, $14.43.

Both Rosecan and Beck made no personal property return in any of the years named, but left the return to be estimated by the Assessor, and the taxes due are on assessments thus made by the Assessor's office.

Judge Rosecan said, when asked about the matter by a Post-Dispatch reporter, that the judgments were paid "recently—that is, prior to the publication of this matter," and that the taxes due for the four years had been overlooked, and would now be paid at once. He said that in 1916 and 1917 he was a law student, supporting a family. "Thousands of people in meager circumstances," he remarked, 'postpone the payment of taxes until a more favorable time." Judge Beck said he had no comment to make until he should receive an official notice from the Comptroller or the Treasurer. The salary of Police Judge is $4000 a year.

In failing to make a return on taxable personal property, the Police Judges followed the custom of about one-third of the taxpayers of St. Louis. About one-third of the personal property assessments appear on the Assessor's books in red ink, indicating that the amount was estimated by the Assessor. One of the many who has failed to make returns on personal property in recent years is Mayor Miller, who has, however, paid the taxes on the basis fixed by the Assessor's office. Miller's assessments in recent years, all appearing in red ink, were: For 1924, payable this year, $2900; 1923, $4600; 1922, $2000; 1921, $4000; 1920, $1000; 1919, no record; 1918, $700.

In 1910 several wealthy St. Louis men were arrested on a misdemeanor charge, following their failure to make tax returns on personal property. The cases were thrown out of court, but the Assessor, Christian Erinkop, succeeded in placing a higher assessment than that of former years against several of the men. Some of them explained their failure to make re-
